BELGIUM AND ITALY ASK DELAY ON DEBT UNTIL FRANCE SIGNS

Washington Refuses the Request and Demands That Each Country Act for Itself.

BRITISH HINT WELCOMED

Officials Believe There Will Be No Protest if Other Countries Get Better Terms.

DISCUSSION WITH BRUSSELS

This Government Insists Nothing Is Altered by the Agreement Reached at Paris in January.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25. — Another chapter was added today to the lengthening narrative of American effort to arrange with its European debtors for the payment of their war-time and post-war obligations when it was made known that Italy and Belgium had taken the position that they should not be called upon to conclude debt settlement agreements until France had made definite arrangements to pay.

Another important development was that some of those in informed quarters feel that they have reason to believe that Great Britain would offer no objection if arrangements for refunding the French debt contained terms of settlement easier than those under which the British Government is paying its obligations.

Nothing official has come from the British Government with respect to a willingness to have the United States conclude a debt adjustment agreement with France on easier terms than Great Britain consented to, but it is gathered that the impression has been given that Great Britain is not disposed to make difficulties should France seek more favorable conditions.

Granted that this guarded hint has some substantial foundation, and circumstances point to its authenticity in spite of the fact that it cannot be attributed to any authoritative source, this state of affairs marks a most important step forward in the endeavor now in progress on the part of the United States, certainly so far as France is concerned, to obtain repayment of the huge sums it loaned to allied Governments.

Belgium's Position on Her Debt.

What became known today in connection with the war debt exchanges was disclosed as a direct outcome of a dispatch from the Paris correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES printed in Sunday's issue. This dispatch contained the information that the Belgian Government would shortly send a note to the United States in which the contention would be made that the Paris agreement of last January concerning the distribution of German reparations annuities among the Allies, with the United States Government participating in the arrangement, made provision that Belgium's indebtedness to this Government is to be paid from the amounts received by the Belgian Government from Germany.

While it was made clear that officials did not desire to discuss this subject and it was conceded that THE TIMES correspondent was merely reporting information given to him of Belgium's contentions, there was sharp denial that Belgium had any justification for a claim that January's Paris agreement provided that Belgium must first get reparations payments from Germany before she undertook to refund the amounts that had been borrowed from the United States.

This Government, in its Paris negotiations, it was said, with Secretary Kellogg, then American Ambassador to Great Britain, as the chief American representative, declined absolutely to substitute one obligation for another—that is, to substitute Germany's obligations to pay reparations for the obligations of Belgium to pay the sums she had borrowed from the United States. Belgium, it was asserted, fully understood this. The United States, it was maintained, had consistently refused to substitute one obligation for another.

Today's disclosures embraced confirmation of the statement made in the Paris dispatch printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sunday that a diplomatic note dealing in a comprehensive way with the history of Belgium's war debt to the United States had been presented in April to the Belgium Government in behalf of this Government by William Phillips, the American Ambassador. This communication, it was made known, had been followed by conversations between the Belgian Foreign Office and Ambassador Phillips and an oral exchange in Washington. Intimations as to the manner in which the American representations had been received by the Belgian Government had come to Washington, but there has been no definite answer to the diplomatic note, it was said.

No Change Made at Paris.

While the situation has complicated slants liable to produce confusion as to the exact meaning of those terms of the Paris agreement of January which provide for the allocation of amounts received by Belgium from Germany to the repayments of Belgium's wartime obligations to creditor allied powers, it is apparent from what was said today that the United States contends that nothing contained in the Paris agreement or in any agreement or treaty justifies the Belgian Government in taking the position that it is not called upon to make any return of borrowed money to this country until German repartions payments are at hand to enable her to do so without taking them from her own funds.

It was asserted by officials that there was not the slightest foundation for the intimation in THE TIMES Paris dispatch

De Valera Resumes Teaching In Two Colleges Near Dublin

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—Eamon de Valera, "ex-President of the Irish Republic," plans to return to his old profession as a school teacher. He will begin work in two ecclesiastical colleges in the neighborhood of Dublin, after a Summer vacation.

The Irish leader is a first-class mathematician and before the Sinn Fein rebellion in 1916 was employed as a professor in an educational establishment in Dublin.

He has a large family to support.

CHAMBER DELAYS DEBATE

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—The heavy losses sustained by the Riffians at the hands of the French and the reorganization of the French army of 50,000 under General Daugan are looked upon here as indicating the seriousness of the situation in Morocco.

General Daugan has withdrawn his army to the southern side of the Ouergha River, abandoning five posts that were almost continually surrounded by the tribesmen and could be supplied with food only by airplane or after strong, difficult and probably costly drives to clear out the Riffians, who swept back as soon as the French again retired.

This new policy leaves more forces available for the real fighting, which is expected to be renewed as soon as the Riffians are reported to be continuing their concentrations. The French likewise are getting heavy reinforcements through Casablanca.

Preparations are advancing for renewal of the fighting, and particular attention is being given to the aviation service. Small aircraft carry the wounded from the battlefield to camps, where large planes take groups of them for various hospitals at Fez Ouezzan, and even Rabat.

French Form New Continuous Line.

FEZ, Morocco, May 25 (AP).—The French troops opposing Abd-el-Krim's invading Riffian tribesmen have been withdrawn from their positions north of the Ouergha River, establishing their lines behind the protection of that stream.

The plan of the French command is to establish a continuous front, without breaks in the line, thus guarding against infiltrations of enemy tribesmen.

The new position will also have the effect of shortening the length of the front, affording the protection of the river against raiding parties of Riffians. French artillery commands all points where the river can be crossed in force.

An attack by the Yebala tribesmen against the Spanish front in the region of Tahatof is recorded in an official communication issued by the French military authorities here today. The communication says:

"The Yebalas have attacked the Spanish front in the region of Tahatof and a Spanish column has been sent there from El Araish. Abd-el-Krim is said to have ordered rapid-firers for the Yebalas.

"The destination of enemy contingents recently reported on their way to the front still is unknown. The Yebalas admit that they lost more than 700 dead along the Ouergha. It is reported that two bombs dropped by airplanes killed 150 of the rebels.

"The situation is stationary in the centre. Infiltrations are reported in the region of Ain Matouf.

"On the east the situation is stationary. Infiltrations are reported around the post of Koudias-ed-Kata. The chief of the Riffian contingent from Tizortine is said to have ordered the conscription of 500 cavalry from among the Gzenaia and Metalsa tribes.

"The enemy is understood to have been instructed by Abd-el-Krim not to attack posts, but to attack tribes and burn villages and crops.

SCOPES IS INDICTED IN TENNESSEE FOR TEACHING EVOLUTION

ACTION UNDER NEW STATUTE

TRIAL IS SET FOR JULY 10

Science Association Plans to Aid Defense—Talk of Stadium to Seat 20,000.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 25.—John T. Scopes, young Dayton (Tenn.) high school teacher, tonight stands indicted for having taugh the theory of evolution to students attending his science classes in violation of a law passed by the Tennessee Legislature and signed by the Governor on March 21, 1925. The date for his trial has been fixed for July 10 at Dayton. The hearing of the case will bring many notables to the little mountain town, including William Jennings Bryan for the prosecution and Clarence Darrow of Chicago and Dudley Field Malone of New York for the defense.

The indictment, returned by the Grand Jury convened in special session, was returned after evidence by Walter White, Superintendent of the Dayton public schools, and eight high school students had been heard by the jurors. The session followed a charge by Judge John T. Raulston, who interpreted the law and included in his presentation the reading of the first book of Genesis from the King James version of the Bible, in which the story of creation is detailed.

The specific charge of the indictment is that on April 24, 1925, John Thomas Scopes, "did unlawfully and wilfully teach in the public schools of Rhea County, Tenn., which said schools are supported in part and in whole by the public school funds of the State, certain theory and theories that deny the story of the Divine creation of man as taught in the Bible and did teach there of that man has descended from a lower order of animals." The penalty prescribed in the law for such violation is a fine of from $100 to $500.

Telling the jurors that if the statute had been violated, their duty was to find the indictment, Judge Raulston pointed out that it was not within their province to inquire into the policy or the wisdom of the legislation.

Law's Wisdom Not Jurors' Concern.

"The policy and wisdom of any particular legislation addresses itself to the legislative branch of Government, provided the proposed legislation is within constitutional limitations," he said.

"Our Constitution imposes upon the judicial branch of the Government the interpretation of the statutes and upon the executive departments the execution of the law.

"The statute involved in this investigation provides that a violation constitutes only a misdemeanor, but there are degrees of crime not by expressed provision of statutes, but in reality, involved in misdemeanors as well as in felonies, and in the very nature of things, I would regard a violation of this statute a high misdemeanor, and in so declaring I make no reference to the policy or constitutionality of the statute, but to the evil example of the teacher disregarding constituted authority in the presence of those whose thought and morals he is to direct and guide. To teach successfully, we must teach both by precept and example.

"The school room is not only a place to develop the power of thought, but also a place to develop discipline, power of restraint and character. If a teacher openly and flagrantly violate the law of the land in the exercise of his profession, this example cannot be wholesome upon the undeveloped mind and, naturally tends to create and breed a spirit of disregard for good order and a want of respect for necessary discipline and restraint in our body politic.

Must Ignore Attitude of Accused.

"In this investigation you should not be concerned as to the attitude of the accused as to whether or not he is willing or unwilling to be indicted. If an accused is to be exonerated of guilt because of his having expressed a willingness to be indicted, this would afford a great avenue of escape for the guilty. What you and I, as court officials, are vitally interested in is to ascertain

City Has Coldest May 25, With Mercury at 40; Trees Bloom in Snow-Coated Areas Up State

Yesterday was the coldest May 25 of which the local Weather Bureau has any record. Before 8 o'clock in the morning the temperature had dropped to 40 degrees. At 7 o'clock and again at 9 o'clock the mercury registered the same. From then on through the day it rose a degree or two at a time until a maximum of 50 degrees was reached at 3 in the afternoon.

Today will be almost as cold with the temperature hovering in the neighborhood of the fifties, according to the Weather Bureau forecasts. Only two other large cities in the country, Louisville, Ky., and St. Paul, Minn., experienced the same degree of cold, and one, Duluth, Minn., was two degrees colder.

Most sections east of the Mississippi River felt the cold wave that came on the heels of the oppressive heat of Saturday. Throughout the entire Ohio and Missouri Valleys rain fell, while in the northern parts of the Eastern States there was snow.

Women who have been wearing fur neckpieces and fur-trimmed coats for appearance sake in order to follow the dictates of fashion found them very acceptable yesterday and will probably experience the same comfort in wearing them today.

The cold weather, however, reacted favorably on the theatres. Many productions reported houses sold out last night, though open air amusement resorts could scarcely muster a corporal's guard.

Associated Press dispatches from many places in this and adjoining States described fruit trees in full bloom while the ground was covered with snow. This was true at Saranac Lake, Binghamton, Bellefonte, Pa., Ithaca N. Y., Green River and Great Barrington, Mass.

The Weather Bureau last night sent out storm warnings from Washington for that section of the coast from Sandy Hook to Boston.

MODERNISTS WIN ON CHURCH UNION

NEW YORK CASES TABLED

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 25.—The fighting Fundamentalists were decisively beaten by the Liberals at today's session of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church when the principle of church union was vindicated in the case of the Presbytery of Cleveland, which was encouraged to work out plans for union with the Congregational Church of that city.

In the vigorous debate the line was drawn sharply between those who favored the principle of church union only on condition that other denominations subscribe to the Presbyterian creed and those who were willing to meet other churches half way and adopt a policy of "give and take" on the question of church union.

The Committee on Bills and Overtures, which had been memorialized by the First Presbyterian Church of New York to vindicate its loyalty in the case of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, reported that it would take no action on the request. No further statement on the subject was made by the committee. Its action, however, prevented debate that undoubtedly would have led to charges and counter-charges and marred the spirit of harmony and good-fellowship which thus far has marked the sessions of the Assembly.

Dr. Erdman Sidetracks Discord.

Another issue which threatened to cause disorder was postponed by an adroit parliamentary decision of Dr. Charles Erdman, the Moderator. This was a memorial of the Presbytery of New York upholding its stand in the licensing of candidates for the ministry who failed to affirm belief in the virgin birth, the inerrancy of the Bible and some of the miracles.

The Committee on Bills and Overtures, which considered the memorial, presented majority and minority reports. The former, which was said to be acceptable to the New York Commissioners, was signed by twelve members and recommended that no action be taken because the same principles were before the Judicial Commission, the Supreme Court of the church. The minority report, signed by eleven members, also recommended that no action be taken, but stated that the rules of the Church directs that when candidates were not clear and positive of fundamental points their license should be deferred.

This minority report was considered as a rebuke to the Presbytery of New York and a motion was made to hold it out of order.

Such a ruling was made by Moderator Erdman, but when a motion was made to table both reports until the Judicial Commission took action on a similar case now before it, the Moderator recalled his ruling and said he felt it was the mind of the assembly that both reports be tabled temporarily.

The complaint of the Rev. Dr. A. D. Gantz against the Synod of New York and that of the Rev. Dr. Walter D. Buchanan against the Presbytery of New York regarding the licensing of ministers are scheduled for report by the Judicial Commission tomorrow afternoon.

Debate on Church Union.

The debate on church union was brought on by the report of Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, Chairman of the Committee on Church Cooperation and Union, which pointed out that the Cleveland Presbytery submitted last year a plan of union for the Congregational and Presbyterian Churches of that city. The report presented the following resolution:

"That the Presbytery of Cleveland, and other Presbyteries and Synods where the situation is similar, be encouraged to work out plans for cooperation and union in their local areas, as a demonstration of the practical operation of united churches within their bounds subject to the counsel of the Department of Church Cooperation, and that report thereof be made to the next General Assembly."

Dr. Henry B. Kirkland of Germantown, Pa., an extreme Fundamentalist, opposed the idea of union and offered an amendment that the subject be referred back to the committee with instructions to encourage any such union in Cleveland as would be made on the basis of the creed and constitution of the Presbyterian Church.

Moderator Erdman said he wished to make it clear that no basis of union

MACRI JURY FAILS, 11 TO 1, TO ACQUIT

RETRIAL NOT EXPECTED

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, May 25.—One juror who expressed his opinion at the start of the jury's 52 hours of deliberation and stuck to it until the end today prevented the acquittal of Olympia Macri, the 18 year old singer who slew John Bagnano, her alleged betrayer and father of a child he refused to help support.

The eleven jurors who voted for her acquittal after convincing the court that there was no chance for an agreement and following their discharge, pleaded with Judge Christopher L. Avery to admit the girl to bail, some with tears streaming down their faces. Soon offered to pledge $2,000 toward a bond of $22,000. Tonight the prediction is that the court will grant their request tomorrow.

The efforts of the jurors are being seconded by the group of New Haven society women, headed by Mrs. Josepha Whitney, who have promised to guarantee the future of Miss Macri and her baby.

There is no record of the retrial of a Connecticut murder case where eleven and even ten of the jury voted for acquittal.

Jury's Report Brings Climax.

Seldom if ever has a trial in this State involving the life of man or woman had such an exciting climax as that which came today when the jury reported, after having been continuously striving to reach an agreement since 11 o'clock last Saturday morning. The jury was made up chiefly of farmers, and nearly every one of them had families which included a daughter of the defendant's age. The emotion with which they went about their duty was revealed in a statement made by Irving A. Andrews, the sole juror for conviction, to justify his insistence on a verdict of second degree murder, when he said he heard Miss Macri's testimony with tears in his eyes.

The courtroom was packed to capacity when the court opened. Judge Avery sent word to the jury at once that he was ready to hear their verdict, but was informed that they had failed to reach one. At 12:45, no word coming from the jury room, the Court called the jury in to ask if they required instructions. Foreman Platt handed a note to the Judge. Before reading it he sent the jury out of the room. Then a conference over the note was held with the prosecutor and the defense attorney.

Resummoning the jury the Court told it that it had no concern with future action in the case and must consider only the evidence before it.

Jury Asks to Be Relieved.

The jury retired to make another effort. Miss Macri, as they filed out, had a fainting spell and collapsed. Her counsel, Mr. Koletsky, leaped to her side and raised her to her feet. At 1:25 the jury was again called into the court-room. Replying to Judge Avery, Foreman Platt said:

"We feel that reaching an agreement is hopeless. We now stand at the same place that we did on Saturday noon. We would like to be relieved of further duty."

Judge Avery asked them to make one more effort, and again the tired men, plainly showing the strain they were laboring under, resumed their deliberations. Their efforts were without avail and soon after 3 o'clock Judge Avery sent for them. Foreman Platt announced that they stood 11 to 1 for acquittal and that to reach a verdict was an impossibility. Judge Avery agreed that further attempts would be useless and discharged the jury, saying it had done the best it could.

Miss Macri Collapses.

Miss Macri collapsed again when the final result of the weeks of trial became apparent to her. She was restored and listened to her counsel move that she be admitted to bail. State's Attorney Alling opposed the motion and Judge Avery denied it.

Then, dazed, faltering and trembling with suppressed emotion, the girl, seemingly unable to walk alone, was almost carried to an automobile by deputy sheriffs, followed by the eleven jurymen whose eyes were filled with tears as they watched the car disappear.

Then they called for the Macri baby and passing it from one to the other kissed the pudgy infant, who will be sent, under the care of the Women's Club, to a country home near Woodbury.

The eleven jurymen then went to the

AMUNDSEN MISSING 112 HOURS IN ARCTIC; OUR NAVY MAY ACT

Threatened Storms Expected to Compel Explorers' Return if They Are Able to Fly.

AIRSHIP MAY GO TO RESCUE

DANGER NOT ADMITTED YET

Explorers and Scientists Are Inclined to Believe Amundsen Party Will Come Through Safely.

There was still no news this morning from the Amundsen-Ellsworth North Pole expedition, four days and sixteen hours, or 112 hours at 4 A. M., since the two airplanes left Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, for their Pole flight. Nothing has yet been heard from the party, the North American Newspaper Alliance announced through The Associated Press.

Storms Threaten Arctic Region.

OSLO, Norway, May 25 (AP).—The Shipping Gazette says that the Arctic regions are threatened with storms which it is thought will compel Captain Amundsen to return immediately if he is able.

The weather forecast is for snow and fog on Wednesday.

A dispatch from Spitzbergen to The Shipping Gazette says no news had been received regarding the fate of the Amundsen polar flight expedition up to 2 o'clock this morning.

The dispatch reads:

"As late as 2 A. M. today there was no news of Amundsen. The Hobby (one of the expedition's steamers) has returned to Wellman Bay, having patrolled north and east of Dane's Island. She found ice conditions difficult."

The dispatch added that "among members of the expedition a certain amount of depression prevailed because of Amundsen's non-appearance. If their flying boats were damaged the members of the expedition will have a long and dangerous return journey.

"The weather is now cloudy, with a raw temperature, which has dropped to below zero.

Were Supplied With Maps.

Amundsen, in preparing for any emergency in cooperation with Dr. Adolf Hoel, Geologist of the Oslo University, made a selection of all available maps and charts of the Polar basin. Dr. Hoel has spent the last twenty Summers in Spitzbergen on surveys and is one of the leading Arctic experts. He said today that landing at the Pole would be the Amundsen expedition's most difficult task because it would have to be between level ice fields, pack ice and hard snow drifts.

The start of the airplanes proved that they could land easily on soft snow. Landing in cloudy weather, said the expert, would be dangerous, as with no shadows from the snowdrifts it would be hard to estimate distances. Landing would be easier in the sunshine, with the sun low on the horizon throwing long shadows.

Dr. Hoel does not believe that there is open water at the North Pole at this time of year and suggests that the big fleet of fishing vessels between Greenland and Nova Zembla be warned to look out for the expedition.

He discussed the various possibilities of the expedition, enumerating them as follows:

Amundsen might reach the Pole and remain there for a time; his planes may have been damaged, so that the expedition might be proceeding on skis to Cape Columbia or on the way toward the Pole. Engine trouble may have overtaken the explorers and they might be returning on skis to Spitsbergen.

There was also the question of the weather, causing a landing between the Pole and Spitsbergen, or the airplanes might have been driven out of their course. And finally, he thought, Amundsen might have changed his plans and, instead of returning to Spitsbergen, was proceeding to the North American Coast.

Says 6 Days Must Pass Before News.

GOV. SMITH QUITS OLIVER STREET HOME

Leaving Residence in District in Which His Political Fortune Was Founded.

CHURCH NEEDS PROPERTY

Men were seen removing the gilt drawing room furniture of the Smiths yesterday and in a little while it became known throughout the old Fourth Ward that the Governor was about to forsake, temporarily at least, the district in the shadow of Brooklyn Bridge in which the foundation of his political fortune was laid a quarter of a century ago under the tutelage of the late Thomas F. Foley, the Tammany leader.

"I have been making my home at the Biltmore for some time," he said, "and shall continue to do so until I return to New York. Then I shall return to the old Fourth Ward. I save up the least because the church which owns the property can get a higher rent than I feel it can afford to pay since I have not used the house for some time."

Soon after the moving van men came to the house, a crowd of the Governor's old neighbors gathered in front of the dwelling to speculate on what it all meant.

The news rapidly spread throughout the lower east side, and a crowd of the Governor's old neighbors gathered in front of the house to watch the moving men and comment on the decision of the Governor to join in the exodus of old timers from the ward which first began to be noticed about twenty years ago when the future Governor was carving history for himself and Tammany Hall in debates on the floor of the Assembly Chamber at Albany.

Inquiries were made by the skeptical among the Governor's old political associates in the headquarters of the Downtown Tammany Club, at 59 Madison Street, around the corner from the Smith city home. None among the politicians would admit having any intimation from the Governor that he was about to abandon the district. But their seeming lack of information on the subject only confirmed the fears of the neighbors, instead of allaying them, and then information was sought at the rectory of St. James's Roman Catholic Church, 21 Oliver Street, two doors west of the old Smith home.

There it was explained that, while it was true that Governor Smith had given up 25 as his city residence, it was the impression that the Governor and his family would return to take up their residence in the vicinity when he ceased being Chief Executive of the State. It developed that the house which for more than fifteen years had been occupied by the Governor was owned by the church. It also came out that recently the pastor of the church found himself pressed for more room for the rapidly increasing number of pupils in the recently reconstructed parochial school, facing on James Street, one block south.

The Smith family found little time in which to use the Oliver Street house as a home since the Governor returned to Albany for a second term as Chief Executive on Jan. 1, 1923. When he learned recently that the pastor of his church had found it necessary to acquire either the Smith home or that of Dr. Paul Sarubbi at 28, also owned by the church, in which to house nuns for the teaching staff of the school, the Governor, consented to give up his lease and permit the physician to move into 25

INCOME TAX LIST PUBLICATION UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

Ruling Is That Congress Intended to Make Payments Public Property.

DECISION IS UNANIMOUS

NO LISTS BEFORE JUNE 30

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Congress meant to abandon the policy of keeping the amount of inome taxes paid and the names of the taxpayers secret, and therefore the newspapers will be at liberty to publish these without fear of violating the law, the Supreme Court of the United States unanimously declared today through an opinion handed down for the Court by Associate Justice Sutherland.

The opinion of the Court completely reverses the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the publication of the names and amounts last year was illegal. No matter whether it be wise to publish the details in question, the construction of the statutes and the congressional proceedings and debates show that the law cannot be broken by such a course, the Court stated.

Secretary Mellon of the Treasury deferred formal comment on the decision, but Treasury officials have been opposed to publication of payments on the ground that they are unreliable as to the amounts of income received by corporations and individuals. Congressional leaders are certain to move at the next session for repeal of the law.

It was stated at the Treasury that there would be no publicity of the tax payments before June 30 and in fact, the records would not be available until some time thereafter. Meanwhile the drafting of publicity regulations will proceed.

The case decided today was that of the Government as plaintiff in error against Walter E. Dickey, owner-editor of The Kansas City Journal-Post, and Ralph Ellis, managing editor of the newspaper. The lower court decided that the newspaper was within its rights in publishing the names and amounts of taxes paid, but the Government took the case on to Washington from the District Court for the Western District of Missouri.

Two Newspaper Cases Decided.

With the case of The Journal-Post, that of The Baltimore Post was decided in the same way. Not long ago Senator Reed of Missouri appeared in the Supreme Court and argued the case for the Kansas City paper, and at that time former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker appeared and joined the issue in behif of The Baltimore Post.

It was the Government's contention that, although Section 257 (b) of the 1924 Revenue act directed the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to lay open at the Collectors' offices and elsewhere the names and amounts of taxes paid, yet Section 3167 of a much older law prescribed such secrecy concerning the revelation of income tax details that the names and amounts could not be published. In other words, the Government argued that, although anybody on earth could see the names and amounts paid at the Collector's office, the newspapers could be prosecuted for printing them. In reply, the newspapers contended that this was an absurdity.

Justice Sutherland struck at the heart of the matter when he said in his opinion today:

"Information which everybody is at liberty to acquire and the acquisition of which Congress seemed especially desirous of facilitating. In the absence of some clear and positive provision to the contrary, cannot be regarded otherwise than as public property, to be passed on to others as freely as the possessors of it. The contrary view required a very dry and literal reading of the statute, quite inconsistent with its legislative history and the known and declared objects of its framers."

Text of Court's Opinion.

The opinion, in full, follows:

An indictment was returned in the court below charging defendants in error as owner-editor and managing editor of several newspapers published at Kansas City, Mo., with printing and publishing therein parts of certain designated Federal income tax returns, showing the names of the taxpayers and the amounts of their income taxes. Demurrers were interposed to the indictment upon the ground that the facts set forth were not sufficient in law to charge any crime against the defendants, because the information so published was open to public inspection, constituted a public record available to the general public, and, consequently, was proper matter for news publication; and that if any statute attempted to forbid or penalize such publication it contravened the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which prohibits Congress from making any law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. The court below sustained the demurrers and dismissed the indictment. 3 Fed. Rep. (2D) 190.

The indictment is drawn under that part of Sec. 1010 of the Revenue act of June 2, 1924, C. 234, Stat. 253, 344, 346, which re-enacts R. S. Sec. 3167, copied in the margin. Section 257 (b) of the same act, 43 Stat. 293, provides: "The Commissioner shall as soon as practicable in each year cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine, in the office of the Collector in each internal revenue district and in such other places as he may determine lists containing the name and postoffice address of each person making an income tax return in such

National Defense Day Test Set for July 4; President Disapproves Armistice Day Date

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—President Coolidge gave formal approval today to holding Defense Day on July 4, in a note sent to Acting Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis. He is opposed to the proposal of the War Department to have the test on Armistice Day, Nov. 11.

Another suggestion advanced by the President was that Governors should be informed that participation by the States was purely voluntary.

Dear Mr. Secretary:

On the 11th inst. you submitted to me a proposed plan of the War Department to hold on next Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1925, a second defense test of the same general character as the one which was held last September. You state that the same conditions exist now which made a muster and inspection of the army of the United States desirable last year and that the plans contemplate that the test will resemble more the features of the "Muster Day" of Colonial times.

I have no objection to the holding of this test this year, but I do not approve your proposal that it be held on Armistice Day. If you consider it desirable to hold the defense test this year I would suggest July 4 as being a more appropriate date. Otherwise I think it desirable to get authority of Congress if any day not a national holiday is proposed.

It occurs to me that your communications to the Governors of the several States should emphasize that their response to the proposed test plans is purely voluntary. I mention this for the reason that their action must necessarily be predicated on what they consider to be the best interests of their States.

Very truly yours,
CALVIN COOLIDGE.

On receipt of the President's letter July 4 was definitely designated by Defense Day and plans for a nation-wide on that date were begun at once.

Park & Tilford Buy Overholt Distillery, 1,800,000 Gallons of Whisky for Legal Use

The largest legitimate liquor transaction in this country since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment was announced yesterday when David Shulte, President of Park & Tilford, bought 1,800,000 gallons of whisky, the sole remaining stock of the Overholt distillery, for more than $15,000,000. The deal also included the purchase of the entire holdings of the distillery, consisting of twenty acres of land and fourteen buildings on the outskirts of Pittsburgh.

The purchase was made from the Union Trust Company, which took over the distillery some years ago. Before he became Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon owned a third interest in the distillery.

Edward L. Bernays, speaking for Mr. Shulte, said that the liquor would be distributed by Park & Tilford through proper legal channels, but that none of it would be removed from the bonded warehouse where it is now stored before Sept. 1.

The Overholt distillery is one of the oldest in the country, having been established by Abraham Overholt in 1810. Abraham Overholt was the grandfather of H. C. Frick and the latter inherited a one-third interest in the distillery. In 1860 Andrew W. Mellon purchased a one-third interest and another man purchased the remaining third. Upon the death of Mr. Frick the company went into liquidation and the distillery was turned over entirely to the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh.

Prior to Mr. Mellon's appointment as Secretary of the Treasury, which gave him the duty of enforcing the prohibition law, he was attacked by William H. Anderson and other prohibitionists because of his former connection with the distillery. He ignored Anderson's public letters and it was not until Feb. 22, 1921, that the Rev. Dr. Daniel L. Marsh of the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, told of an interview with Mr. Mellon in which the Cabinet member stated that he had disposed of his distillery interests long before he accepted public office.

While the statements of Park & Tilford gave the purchase price of the 1,800,000 gallons of whisky and the real estate holdings of the company as about $15,000,000, the liquor alone at legitimate retail price would reach a much higher figure, the customary price for medicinal liquor being $3 per pint.

The prohibition against publication contained in Sec. 3167, it will be seen, is not absolute, but subject to possible qualification by other provisions of law. The language is that it shall be unlawful to print or publish in any manner 'not provided by law' any income return or any part thereof, &c. On behalf of defendants in error, it is contended that Section 257 (b) affects such a qualification. To this the Government replies that the extent to which that provision goes is to authorize the Comissioner of Internal Revenue to make available for public inspection lists showing names of taxpayers and amounts of taxes paid by them, and that this falls short of authorizing the printing and publishing of the information contained in the lists.

Something is said in the briefs, and was said at the bar, as to the wisdom, on the one hand, of secrecy, and, on the other hand, of publicity, in respect to tax returns. But that is a matter addressed to the discretion of the law-making department, with which the courts are not concerned, so long as no constitutional right or privilege of the taxpayer is invaded; and there is no contention that there is any such invasion here, whichever view may be adopted. The problem, therefore, is, primarily, one of statutory construction, the disposition of which will determine whether the constitutional question as to the freedom of the press needs to be considered. For the purposes of the inquiry, we assume the power of Congress to forbid or to allow such publication, as in the judgment of that body the public interest may require.

Extent of Commissioner's Discretion.

The Commissioner is directed to make the lists of taxpayers and taxes paid available for public inspection in the office of the Collector and elsewhere as he may determine. His discretion in that respect is limited only by his own sense of what is wise and expedient. And the inquiry at once suggests itself: To what end is this discretion, so vested in him, to be exercised? The obvious answer is: To the end that the names and addresses of the taxpayers and the amounts paid by them may be generally known. To the extent of the information authorized to be put into the lists, this is the manifest policy of the statute, with which the application of Section 3167 to the present case, it fairly may be argued, will be out of harmony.

Whatever one's opinion may be in respect of its wisdom, the policy of publicity having been adopted as an aid to the enforcement of the revenue laws or to the accomplishment of some other object deemed important, it is not easy to conclude that Congress nevertheless intended to exclude and merely to penalize the effective form of secondary publicity now under consideration. Information, which everybody is at liberty to acquire and the acquisition of which Congress seemed especially desirous of facilitating in the absence of some clear and positive provision to the contrary, can not be regarded otherwise than as public property, to be passed on to others as freely as the possessors of it may choose. The contrary view requires a very dry and literal reading of the statute quite inconsistent with its legislative history and the known and declared objects of its framers.

Earlier Policy Not Uniform.

Prior to the adoption of the Sixteenth Amendment the policy in respect of tax publicity, as evidenced by Congressional legislation, had not been uniform. Generally, the earlier acts had been liberal and the later ones restrictive in character. Section 3167 RS first appeared in substantially its present form in the act of Aug. 27, 1894, Section 34, c. 349, 28 statutes, 509, 557. It was re-enacted by the Revenue acts of 1913, 1916, 1919 and 1921, and by the existing act of 1924. The act of 1913, c. 16, 38 statutes, 177, provided that tax returns should be open to inspection only upon order of the President, but allowed State officers under certain conditions to have access to the returns showing the names and incomes of corporations, &c.

The act of 1919, Section 257, c. 18, 40 statutes, 1066, in addition to this, allowed stockholders of any corporation to examine its returns upon conditions therein stated. That act further provided (p. 1067) that the Commissioner should cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection, &c., "lists containing the names and the postoffice addresses of all individuals making income-tax returns in such district"; and this was expanded by the present law, Section 257 (b), act of 1924, to include the amount of the income tax paid.

It is significant that, while these progressively liberal publicity amendments were being made, Section 3167—to this extent the general rule of which they were in terms opposed—was carried along by re-enactment without change, plainly indicating that, in the opinion of Congress, by the application of the qualifying clause "not provided by law," the scope of the general rule against publication would become automatically narrowed to the extent of the liberalizing exceptions. The Congressional proceeding and debates and the reports of the conferees on the disagreeing votes of the two houses, which we have examined but think it unnecessary to review, strongly confirm our conclusion that Congress, understanding that the limitation would apply, intended to open the information contained in the lists to full publicity.

As a result, we hold that, to the extent provided by Section 257 (b), Congress meant to abandon the policy of secrecy altogether and to exclude from the operation of Section 3167 all forms of publicity including that here inquestioned. Judgement affirmed.

Preparing Rules for Publication.

Officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau and Treasury Department have been going ahead with their plans for the publication of income tax returns, pending the Supreme Court decision, and will issue regulations governing the activities of Internal Revenue Collectors as soon as possible. It was said today that publicity would not be permitted before the end of the fiscal year on June 30, and that it probably would be some little time after that date before the records would be made ready.

Secretary Mellon did not have an opportunity today to study the Supreme Court decisions endorsing newspaper publicity of the tax payments and withheld formal comment until such a study had been made by Treasury experts.

The Treasury Department has been opposed to publicity of tax returns, contending for one thing that the figures published do not in a great many instances give an accurate picture of the income of individuals or corporations.

There have been reports that new and enlarged mailing lists were being compiled by some dealers in wildcat securities, and that not a few of the added names were obtained as a result of the tax publicity ordered by Congress against the wishes of President Coolidge and the Treasury Department. There is reason to believe, according to some Treasury officials, that thousands of people who have escaped in the past have been approached and tempted to invest in worthless securities, as a result of their private affairs being thrown open to public inspection by the Government.

Apparently, however, there will be publication of returns this year along the lines followed out in 1924, as Congress does not reassemble until December, and the Treasury Department intends to send instructions to the Internal Revenue Collectors probably early in the Autumn. There is certain to be a determined effort by Administration leaders to have the tax-publicity features of the Revenue bill eliminated by the next Congress when another bill is drawn to reduce taxation.

Collector Rafferty Awaits Orders.

In regard to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States that newspapers were guilty of no violation of the law in publishing income tax lists, Collector John T. Rafferty, in Brooklyn, stated yesterday that he would have to receive orders from the Internal Revenue Department in Washington before he could make public the names of the taxpayers for 1924, as he had received instructions from Washington not to give out the names until word that he could do so came from that place.

STORM BREAKS UP THE LIQUOR FLEET

PICKETS BACK ON STATIONS

Padlock Process to Be Applied to Ships Held for Rum-Running.

There are now only four rum ships anchored off the New York and New Jersey coast, according to a report made yesterday by Captain W. V. E. Jacobs, commander of the New York Coast Guard Division. A two-masted British schooner that had been lying for fourteen days off Atlantic City departed, going south, the crew of Patrol Boat 209 reported last evening on their arrival at Base 2, Stapleton, S. I. Winds and heavy sea of the last two days had made rum-running almost impossible and the craft anchored along Rum Row had been well shaken up, it was said.

Two schooners hoisted anchors yesterday and put far out to anchor again. A steamship is anchored about forty miles off the Ambrose Light, and a two-masted British schooner well off Sandy Hook. The latter is a new arrival. One rum ship is reported off No Man's Island and another off Block Island.

A fleet of twelve 75-footers and six 35-foot picket boats of the dry navy which put in on account of the storm left the Staten Island base yesterday to continue the guard duty.

From other points come reports of the tightening of the sea and land lines about the country to keep out liquor. Before he left El Paso, Texas, for New York yesterday, Lincoln C. Andrews, chief of Prohibition Enforcement, told the Associated Press that sea operations against rum-running and other forms of smuggling would be extended to the Pacific Coast and carried on with intensity equal to that on the Atlantic. He announced that his aim was to equip a coast guard vessel to "dog the movements" of every rum-running ship. Western operations would be centered in San Francisco. Mr. Andrews upon his arrival here will take charge of the activities of the prohibition navy.

Mr. Andrews said the force on the Atlantic would be increased to 100 or more craft. He also said that the outlook for increased cooperation between Mexican border officials and those of this country was brighter, following agreements reached by the United States-Mexico Border Commission.

An Associated Press dispatch from Buffalo reported that a group of 140 customs and prohibition agents united with the Coast Guard forces at Buffalo yesterday to establish a blockade at the mouth of Chippewa Creek, on the Niagara River, in an effort to prevent five large vessels from Welland, Canada, from landing liquor cargoes. They were said to have rye whisky valued at more than $100,000, at wholesale prices, on board. The craft were at anchor near the creek and just over the international boundary line.

Definite plans for patroling the Great Lakes were made at a conference held in Detroit. The Associated Press said. The Chicago Daily News reports that the actual work of putting fifteen armed rum-chasers into service on the Great Lakes under command of James T. Brereton of Chicago have been completed and that the fleet would go into action along 110 miles of coast near Detroit.

To check desertions from the Coast Guard fleet around New York $15 will be paid any civilian or officer responsible for the capture of a deserter from the dry navy.

The Eastern Steamship Company's freighter Herman Winter, which recently arrived here from Boston, was libeled yesterday through the office of United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner for having intoxicants on board. The vessel was released in a $25,000 bond pending the outcome of the court proceedings.

The seizure of the Herman Winter brought announcement of a new development of the padlock law. After a consultation between Mr. Buckner and Federal Judge Augustus N. Hand, it was announced that the new Padlock Court would be designated to sit in admiralty cases. This means that when the court begins to function again on June 22, with Judge Francis A. Winslow on the bench, an effort will be made to have the padlock apply on the sea as well as on land. Just how the law would be applied and how it would work out were not explained, but there would be further conferences on the subject, it was said.

The Herman Winter is in the coastwise trade. Mr. Buckner said that the act in terms opposed—was carried along by re-enactment without change, plainly indicating that, in the opinion of Congress, by the application of the qualifying clause "not provided by law," the scope of the general rule against publication would become automatically narrowed to the extent of the liberalizing exceptions. The Congressional proceeding and debates and the reports of the conferees on the disagreeing votes of the two houses, which we have examined but think it unnecessary to review, strongly confirm our conclusion that Congress, understanding that the limitation would apply, intended to open the information contained in the lists to full publicity.

As a result, we hold that, to the extent provided by Section 257 (b), Congress meant to abandon the policy of secrecy altogether and to exclude from the operation of Section 3167 all forms of publicity including that here inquestioned. Judgement affirmed.

Body of Lord Tredegar's Daughter in Thames; She Vanished Mysteriously in December

LONDON, May 25.—The discovery of the body of the Hon. Gwyneth E. Morgan, the only daughter of Lord Tredegar, in the River Thames near Wapping today ended the quest for her that began soon after she mysteriously disappeared last December from her home at Wimbledon.

She was 30 years old and well-known in artistic circles in London as having an adventurous disposition. She is said to have had nearly £200 in her possession when she left home and at first it was supposed that she was away visiting friends and purposely keeping out of sight.

The police had ceased to look for her, but only last Sunday a report was printed that she had been seen in Copenhagen. The body was identified by the name of "G. E. Morgan embroidered on articles of clothing.

LONDON, May 26 (AP).—The body of a young woman found in the River Thames near Wapping today was identified by relatives as that of the Hon. Gwyneth Erica Morgan, daughter of Lord Tredegar.

Miss Morgan, who was under medical supervision at the time, slipped from the house during a dense fog on the morning of Dec. 11. She wore only a suit of pajamas and a woolen dressing gown.

Detectives from Scotland Yard conducted a most extensive search throughout England and the Continent. Her father is one of the wealthiest British peers and offered large sums for any news regarding her.

There has been no explanation of the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Miss Morgan. She had been recuperating from an attack of typhoid fever when she disappeared from her home. The opinion was expressed at the time that the illness had caused depression.

TEACHERS WARNED OF COMMUNIST RING

FEARS "MINORITY'S" IDEALS

Declares a Group Advocates Affiliation With the Workers' Party.

The Teachers' Union of the City of New York has circulated a letter among some of its members warning them that the policies and achievements of the organization are menaced by a Communist faction within its own ranks.

The letter, sent from the offices of the union at 70 Fifth Avenue, declares a few members of the Executive Board which has formed a small compact party called "The Minority" to work for purposes alien to the ideals of the union and the American labor movement, not for educational policies but for the "political issue of cooperation with the Workers' Party and the acceptance of Communist propaganda."

"In the Teachers' Union," the letter continues, "this group on the Executive Board persistently hinders our work by demanding such anti-union actions as:

"1. Affiliation with a political party, saying frankly that they would like it to be the Workers' Party.

"2. Affiliation with the Teachers' International, a Communist organization with headquarters in Paris.

"3. Contributions to Communist and outlaw locals and resolutions sent from Workers' Party headquarters.

"4. Resolutions condemning the labor bodies with which we are affiliated, the American Federation of Labor and the Central Trades and Labor Council.

"5. Opposition to the merit system in education. Speaking publicly in favor of politics in the schools, they ask that their votes shall be recorded in opposition to resolutions passed by the union in opposition to recent political appointments by the Board of Education.

"6. Urging the admission of unqualified or doubtfully qualified teachers to membership, with the probable purpose of developing the voting strength of their party, charging opponents to their policy with prejudice against the political views of the candidates."

The letter states further that at a meeting on April 24, attended by only thirty-nine members, "this group of extremists secured what many people might consider Communist representation of this local to the National Convention of the American Federation of Teachers," electing Benjamin Mendes its leader and Scott Nearing, "a well-known sympathizer with its philosophy."

"Many American unions, the letter concludes, "attempt to deal with Communist sympathizers by throwing them out bodily. Our solution must be different. We must be fair. We must see that the Board of Education has no excuse for punishing teachers for their opinions. But we must protect the union by informing our members of the situation."

Benjamin Mandell of 294 East Fourth Street, a teacher of stenography and typewriting at Julia Richman High School, declared the letter was written during an election contest, was signed by officers and members without authority and "contained charges so exaggerated and so woefully distorted as to merit nothing but the most categorical denial."

"One of the main reasons for this sudden attack is my support of the Kindergarten 6B teachers in the last salary campaign, advocacy of the election of the supervisory officials by the teachers and opposition to Superintendent Ettinger for his share in the Glassberg case," he said. "All these vital union issues are carefully avoided.

"Typical of the method of distortion employed in this letter in reference to what was actually proposed was support of the idea of a Labor Party on the model of the British Labor Party."

Dr. Henry R. Linville, President of the union through his affiliation with only to warn its members against "the Workers' Party faction," not to seek efforts to punish "radicalism."

Scott Nearing, who is a member of the union through his affiliation with the Rand School for Social Science, declined to discuss the statement.

MUMTAZ BEGUM ASKS MURDER PLOT INQUIRY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—Mumtas Begum, dancing girl and former favorite of the Maharajah of Indore, is petitioning the Viceroy of India for a commission to inquire into the whole plot against her and M. Baula and to trace to its source the murder of Baula, who was killed while defending her from abductors, according to dispatches from Bombay. Indian papers also demand an inquiry into the responsibility of the Maharajah of Indore.

The London labor organ The Daily Herald, asked yesterday if the sequel to the case would be the abdication of the Maharajah, and today it published a letter which it says it received during the trial from the Maharajah's publicity officer. The letter accuses The Daily Herald of crediting unfounded rumors spread by the Maharajah's enemies, and declares there is not a scintilla of evidence to connect the Maharajah with any conspiracy, beyond insinuations and innuendoes indulged in by a section of the "gossipy papers."

As regards some of the persons arrested in connection with the case the letter says:

"Tendec, one of them, is not A. D. C. to the Maharajah, as the press mischievously designate him. He is only a Maakari, one of a large number of Maakaries employed in the State. Akbar, another man under arrest, does not belong to the mounted police of Indore, but is a dismissed menial servant of the household department. Latif, the third, is not a State motor driver but a laborer working for daily wages in a motor workshop at Indore. The only man of consequence connected with Indore is Sardar Phanse."

TROTSKY IS MENTIONED FOR SEVERAL POSTS

Moscow Reports Ousted Leader Is Slated for Supreme Council and Technical Directorship.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 25.—It is expected that within the next few days Leon Trotsky will be assigned to a new post.

Without waiting a decision of the Communist Party Congress, as at first anticipated, he will be made a member of the Supreme Economic Council, which is now under Dzerjinsky and consists of twelve members. Trotsky will be put in charge of the electro-technical industry, which directs electrification plans of the country, and will also be nominated Chairman and Chief of the Concessions Committee, replacing Piatakoff, who is one of Dzerjinsky's assistants and Vice Chairman of the Council.

In addition to holding these principal posts Trotsky also will be Superintendent of Work in the Scientific and Technical Department of the Supreme Council. It is rumored Trotzky has expressed his consent to accept these nominations, and an official announcement is expected to be made soon.

BELGIUM AND ITALY ASK DELAY ON DEBT

printed on Sunday that Article IV. of the Paris agreement in any way changed the attitude of the American Government, or substituted German payments for Belgian obligations in any respect. Officials said they believed that to be the substance of THE TIMES dispatch.

To sustain this point attention was called to Article CCCXXIII. of the Versailles Treaty, reading as follows:

In accordance with Germany's pledges, already given, as to complete restoration for Belgium, Germany undertakes, in addition to the compensation for damage elsewhere, in this part provided for as a consequence of the violation of the Treaty of 1839, to make reimbursement of all sums which Belgium has borrowed from the allied and associated Governments up to Nov. 11, 1918, together with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on such sums.

Additional Claim of Belgium.

In other words, it was contended, Belgium was to have an additional claim to collect from Germany the amount that she had borrowed before Nov. 11, 1918, from the allied and associated powers. These, it was explained, were war debts and not debts contracted for post-war relief and reconstruction purposes. The clause quoted was inserted in the treaty of peace between the United States and Germany signed at Berlin so as to protect the interests of the United States.

Attention was invited also to provisions of the Berlin treaty which declared that certain clauses of the Treaty of Versailles were to inure to our benefit in spite of the fact that the United States did not ratify the Versailles Treaty. These applied to claims for damages, &c., under which the American-German Mixed Claims Commission is now proceeding.

It was true, it was explained, that Belgium received some large amounts which she had not paid over to the allied and associated powers, but last Autumn Belgium deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank in New York $14,700,000 in trust for the United States, pending the ratifications of the so-called Wadsworth Agreement of 1923, negotiated by Eliot Wadsworth, the Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury regarding American army costs, and when the Paris agreement was signed last January that fund was released to the United States as army cost account.

The Paris agreement, it was contended, left the status of Belgium's obligations to the United States exactly where it was before the agreement was signed. If anything, it was argued today, that was the one thing which was in no way to be disturbed, since this clause was put into the agreement and the Belgian Government knew it, according to the statement made.

Premier Theunis understood it perfectly, it was added for emphasis. It was necessary to agree, however, that of the total payments by Germany in the allied and associated powers on account of claims, reparations, war damages, &c., how much of the total fund Belgium should get as a so-called "priority" before the United States should receive its percentage of 2½ per cent. on account of our general claims. In view of this, according to the explanation given today, provision was made under the heading "Belgian War Department," as follows:

A—As from the 1st September, 1924, 5 per cent. of the total sum available in any year after meeting the charges for the service of the German external loan, 1924, and the charges for costs of commissions; costs of United States Army of Occupation; annuity for Armies of pre-1st May, 1921; army costs; prior charges for current army costs; and any other prior charges which may hereafter be agreed shall be applied to the reimbursement of the Belgian War Department as defined in the last paragraph of Article 232 of the Treaty of Versailles.

B—The amount so applied in any one year shall be distributed between the powers concerned in proportion to the amount of the debts due to them respectively as of 1st May, 1921. Pending the final settlement of the accounts, France shall receive 46 per cent., Great Britain 42 per cent., and Belgium (on account of her debt to U. S.) 12 per cent.

In interpreting these paragraphs it was conceded today that there was a slight difference of opinion as to the exact percentage of the war debt due the United States and that had been left to be adjusted, but it was declared that the United States declined absolutely to substitute one obligation for another and Belgium so understood. According to officials there was every reason to believe that the Belgian Government had never asked it.

Figures given today placed the Belgian war debt to this Government under which we are to receive our percentage of the 12 per cent. from Sept. 1, 1924, the date of the London agreement, at $171,780,000. These figures, it was mentioned, represented the principal and did not include the interest. Belgium's post-armistice debt to the United States is $200,000,000, not including interest and it was maintained that it was this post-war relief debt that Belgium agreed should be liquidated without discrimination in favor of payments either to her allied creditors or the United States.

Deposits Here by Belgium.

Explanation was obtained also with reference to the course of the Belgian Government in having deposited funds in trust in this country. Belgium, according to the explanation, never made any payments under the Versailles Treaty, but last Autumn had deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank in New York a trust fund of $14,700,000 on her war costs, that is the costs of the army of occupation. With respect to this action of Belgium it was recalled that the United States had an agreement ratified by Great Britain and Belgium but never ratified by France, providing that a certain percentage of the moneys that these Governments received from reparations should be paid over to the United States as a priority on account of our army costs.

The other Governments paid nothing but Belgium after ratifying the agreement declared that although France had not ratified Belgium would pay 2½ per cent. on the reparations the United States was to receive as provided in the agreement.

This arrangement, however, according to the statement of officials here, was not in the category of pre-armistices debts and was not included in Article 232 of the Versailles Treaty, which debts were to inure to the benefit of the United States under the treaty of peace between the United States and Germany—the Treaty of Berlin. It was a separate agreement and of a tentative nature between Belgium and Associated Powers to provide priority for costs of the armies of occupation. These priorities, it was pointed out, had never been fixed previously.

In our exchanges with Belgium on the subject, it was said, this question was never raised, or for that matter, never raised anywhere. In this connection officials said that the statement in the Paris dispatch printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday was the first they had heard of it.

In confirming the statement in THE TIMES's Paris dispatch that Secretary Kellogg had, in April, instructed Ambassador Phillips to deliver a note to the Belgian Government dealing with the subject of Belgian Governmental debts to the United States, officials said this note had produced "intimations" from Belgium but no definite answer had been received by the State Department.

All that was made known today was obviously intended to show that differences of opinion as to the effect of the Paris agreement were not retarding the debt negotiations. As to what caused the exchanges to be retarded or held up, some reticence was shown in official circles but it was explained that Belgium did not dispute her debt or the agreement concerning payment of the post-armistice relief indebtedness of $200,000,000, which agreement provided that there should be no discrimination against the United States by Belgium in adjusting their obligations to other post-war creditors.

Herein comes the grievance of the United States Government, for Belgium, it was emphasized, has settled with other post-war creditor nations without living up to the obligation to do likewise toward the United States, and Rumania and Czechoslovakia had followed Belgium's course in that respect.

Refuse Belgian Request for Delay.

The response of the United States to the Belgian suggestion that there should be a postponement of a Belgian debt adjustment with this Government until Great Britain made an adjustment was an absolute refusal, officials made known. The United States had insisted that each country should be considered on its own basis, except where there was an agreement as there was with respect to post-war debts for relief and reconstruction purposes. As to war debts, it was again explained, each debtor Government was free to negotiate with its creditors, and had been so informed many times by the United States, for the Government conceded that it could not recognize any connection between the war debts of France, Belgium and Italy.

With respect to the Italian and Belgian attitudes, in desiring to postpone a debt adjustment agreement with the United States until France had entered into such an agreement with this Government, the admission was made that nobody except the British desired to settle war obligations to the United States. Such an admission furnishes an inkling to the feeling aroused in Administration circles over the current phases of the attempt to effect debt adjustments.

It was suggested in official quarters that the opinion attributed to President Coolidge that there might be a distinction between wartime and post-war debts merely meant that the United States conceded the debtor Governments could make any arrangement they pleased in adjusting wartime indebtedness with their European creditors, but with respect to post-war debts they were obligated by agreement to treat the United States with equal consideration if they sought to settle such debts with their European creditors.

To clarify this suggestion it was explained, by example, that if a debtor country had given Great Britain ten-year or twenty-year notes to settle relief debts and then proposed to give us sixty-year notes for the same purpose it would be a discrimination in terms of payment.

In making loans for war purposes, it was emphasized, we took our chances and asked for no guarantee from the debtor that we should be treated on equal terms with other of his creditors, but if Belgium felt that it could refund its debts to Great Britain in twenty or twenty-five years it would be unjust for that Government to expect us to be satisfied with a term of sixty years. That, it was explained, was the only distinction this Government could see between the pre-armistice and post-armistice debts.

FRENCH PUBLIC ASKS THAT WE BE REPAID

Hundreds of Letters Reach Officials Insisting on Debt Settlement at All Costs.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 25.—A significant change is taking place in French public opinion in regard to France's debt to America. Members of the Government are receiving hundreds of letters from all parts of the country, even from the peasants, urging at all costs that American claims be satisfied. Some writers suggest the Government open public subscription to obtain funds toward paying America, as France raised 6,000,000,000 francs which she paid Germany after the end of the war of 1870.

Responsible officials are somewhat worried about resentment toward the United States being shown on the subject of debts. This resentment, which would seem, if general, to represent a cooling of French feeling toward America, seems based on publicity given reports Washington had sent France a summation to pay up. Although this has been denied officially, the denials apparently never overtook the original reports. Letters indicate also an interpretation of recent declarations by Senator Borah to the effect he would use force to make France pay has created considerable feeling.

There seems to be a general feeling in France that America is wrong in believing France ever had any intention except to pay when she is able. The manner in which the matter has come to French notice makes them apparently feel that the United States is pushing France for payment, and this is frankly not understood.

Throughout France the rôle America played in the war made the deepest impression, and unfortunately, due, perhaps, to the French having been told over several years either they would not have to pay or else Germany would pay, the affair now appears as representing harshness on the part of America. That being the case, it would appear the best thing for the relations of the two peoples would be an early settlement in which the United States would show generosity as to terms. Certainly, at the present time, when Americans in great numbers think that France would deny the debt, and French in great numbers think that Americans would be unduly harsh in collecting, there is a great deal of misunderstanding on both sides.

The popular French opinion is that America should be willing to wait until France recovers her fiscal balance and sees where she stands, especially with regard to German payments, before insisting on a definite arrangement. Now that the Reparations have been fixed, America does not like this program, they are rapidly wishing to arrange matters and especially rid themselves of American criticisms that they don't live up to their bargains.

What the French now desire is negotiations on a base recognizing their debt in full and American cooperation in studying the issue of what France can pay. Her fiscal position is shaky and too large an arrangement would be very harmful. They feel their position is not generally understood by the United States, and that is why they would prefer to have the American commission come to France to conduct the debt negotiations. In any case, there is an insistent French demand that their country be rid of the odium of the charge of being a bad debtor, and in pursuance of this sentiment appears the best chance of scattering the cloud of anti-American feeling now growing on the horizon.

COMMONS ASKS STATUS OF DEBTS COLLECTIONS

Financial Secretary Says Britain Should Await Reactions From Continent on America's Project.

LONDON, May 25 (AP).—The question of Great Britain's foreign debts was discussed in the House of Commons today when questions were asked regarding the notification sent by the United States to Continental countries on the funding of debts due America. Inquiries were made as to what success the British Government had experienced with any of the Continental Governments in regard to their debts due Great Britain.

Walter Guinness, Financial Secretary of the Treasury, replied that he was aware of the notification sent by the United States to European debtor countries, but he had no further information than had appeared in the press.

No further developments had taken place in negotiations regarding debts due Great Britain, he explained. The British Government's spokesman then made it clear that his Government considers that any steps taken by the debtor powers of the Continent to fund or liquidate their obligations to the United States should be accompanied by similar steps regarding their obligations to Great Britain.

Answering another question whether Great Britain intended to follow the example set by the United States and send notes to the powers that owe her money, Mr. Guinness said that no such action would be taken at the present.

Asked whether it would not be wise to open a discussion with the United States with reference to the recent action taken by the Washington Government, so that Great Britain could act jointly with America in the collection of Continental debts, Mr. Guinness replied that it would be best to await the answers sent to Washington by the Continental countries.

The discussion in the House finally got around to the old question of American debts due Great Britain for loans made the Southern States during the Civil War period.

A suggestion was made that the British Government should arrive at a settlement with the representatives of the original investors in American loans made for purposes other than those connected with the Civil War.

But this proposal that the British Government bury up the claims and then arrive at a settlement with the Washington Government, which would act on behalf of the individual States concerned, was met with a point-blank refusal by Foreign Minister Austen Chamberlain.

Mr. Chamberlain declared he had not received any information from the United States regarding individual States that are in arrears as a result of defaulted loans.

ONE MILLION AT FUNERAL.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, May 25.—One million working men and women in black lined both sides of a twenty-five-mile route three deep yesterday as the body of Alderman Leopold Mueller of Moedling, the Social Democrat murdered by Hakenkreuzler, Thursday week, was taken from his home town to the Simmering crematorium on the other side of Vienna. In spite of the tremendous crush the crowd behaved with exemplary dignity and practically no unpleasant incidents occurred.

The Social Democrats, exploiting the Moedling tragedy, purpose a vigorous offensive against the radical groups, accusing members of the Government of backing Hakenkreuzler.

Several meetings were held during and after the funeral, at which resolutions were adopted demanding immediate dissolution of the Hakenkreuzler and other extreme Right organizations. Partial strikes were declared today in several factories as a protest.

The Social Democrats undoubtedly will use the incident as a lever for attaining various political concessions. The Government will try to use the occasion for obtaining a truce between and general demobilization of the Right and Left defense organizations.

Since Saturday's clash in City Park between Hakenkreuzler followers and workers, boulevards have been patrolled by strong police forces at night.

HOLD POLICEMAN IN KILLING

Bail Allowed for Edwards, Who Shot Man in Speeding Auto.

Patrolman Harry W. Edwards of the West 153d Street Station was released in $2,500 bail by Magistrate Frederick E. House in the Homicide Court yesterday to await the action of the Grand Jury in connection with the death of Solomon Spinner, 24 years old, a real estate dealer, of 1.04 West 117th Street.

According to the evidence, Spinner was in an automobile driven by Lincoln Johnson of 300 West 106th Street, which was speeding down St. Nicholas Avenue early on May 12.

Edwards, it was said, pursued Johnson's machine in a police car driven by Patrolman James Breheney. At 151st Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, Breheney testified, Edwards fired a shot at the speeding automobile and Johnson stopped. The police found Spinner on the floor of the tonneau. He was hurried to a hospital, but the bullet had penetrated his heart.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Thomas F. Curley appeared for Edwards. He contended that the shooting was justified because the circumstances had created the suspicion that the speeding automobile might have been a bandit car. The Magistrate said that speeding in an automobile through the streets was merely a violation of a corporation ordinance and he considered the matter one for Grand Jury investigation.

The widowed mother and three sisters of the dead man were in court. Mrs. Spinner, who wept most of the time, said that her son was her sole support.

Ex-Envoy Disavows Reports on Criticism of Debt Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Former Ambassador James W. Gerard has sent a cablegram from Paris to President Coolidge, made public today, which denies printed reports that he had spoken critically of America's attitude on the debt question.

The message reads:

The President, Washington.

Am now informed by cable from America that Evening Post, New York, had dispatch from Paris 20th, stating I was expressing critical views about debt note. Did not even know there was a debt note; have refused interviews and made no speeches. Am out of politics and only wish you could be here to enjoy riding in the park. Please inform spokesman.

SHEPHERD WITNESS IN PHILADELPHIA

Letters From White Deny Bribe, Say He Feared for Life but Will Return.

LITTLE PROGRESS IN CASE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 25. The relation between prosecution and defense in the Shepherd trial is becoming more strained with every hour, and today developed an amazing situation. After another fruitless session in the attempt to get a jury, during which State's Attorney Crowe and William S. Stewart, attorney for Shepherd, examined witnesses with every outward appearance of amiability, Crowe announced that every talesman excused from the jury box is being examined immediately in his office to learn if they have been approached by any one who attempted to influence them. Their wives also will be questioned, he added.

Mr. Crowe also said that he would examine every talesman who has gone through the box or has been accepted as a juror in a criminal case tried by Mr. Stewart or his partner, W. W. O'Brien. This followed a week of quarreling by both sides, which wound up on Saturday with Mr. Crowe's charge that the defense was trying to put "a lot of crooks" on the jury. And yet every morning Mr. Stewart bobs up smiling and goes through the court room routine with unruffled appearance.

A case which will come particularly under the scrutiny of the State's Attorney's office, Mr. Crowe said, was that of Daniel Dore, an infirmary guard, who was tried and acquitted on May 19 for the murder of Paul Matiocha. Matiocha had been mixed up in a shooting in a roadhouse, and Dore arrested him. On the way to an automobile he ran away and Dore shot and killed him. W. W. O'Brien defended Dore. Every juror or talesman in that case will be examined, said Mr. Crowe.

"I'm going to find out who's responsible for this jury tampering and intimidation in this case, and when I do some one is going to jail," said Mr. Crowe. "I'm going to make jury fixing in the Criminal Court Building so precarious a proposition from now on that there won't be anybody left who will want to try it."

A definite charge that would have tremendous effect on the trial has been expected daily by those who have been watching it, but apparently it is indefinitely postponed, despite the charges and criticisms which issue from the State's Attorney's office and which are met by more or less mild expostulations by the defense. Mr. Stewart conducts his case smilingly, and Mr. O'Brien occasionally drops in to watch the proceedings for a few moments.

Stewart Welcomes Inquiry.

Tonight, however, Stewart asked what the State was going to do about it, when he issued a statement in which he said:

"If my partner or myself have done anything wrong, why didn't they conduct an investigation long ago?

"We welcome any investigation that any one wants to make. It is no hardship upon us to have an investigation conducted, but it is a hardship upon honest jurors who returned the verdict, such as in the Dore case.

"The announcement of the present investigation is for only one purpose. It is to intimidate the jurors in the present case. The State knows they have no case against Shepherd and they are trying to bolster themselves up by conducting or announcing investigations which will create propaganda for their success.

"If they want to be fair in this case they could wait until after a fair and impartial trial has been had and then conduct an investigation. The Statute of Limitations will not expire by the time the Shepherd case is over.

"In reference to the Dore case the State knows that they never had a case against him. We have had difficulty in getting a trial in that case. The only time we could get a trial was after we became engaged in the Shepherd case and then they forced us into trial in the Dore case. The purpose of that is plain. It was in order to distract our attention from the present case. That is their idea of fairness.

"If they will call in the jurors in the Dore case they, might have some explaining to do themselves. The jurors will probably want to know from them why Dore was ever indicted on the facts in the case. It is an insult to the Judge who tried the case and to the intelligence of the jury, which brought in an acquittal verdict.

"The action of the State in this case certainly shows poor sportsmanship."

White Charges Death Threats.

Two letters from Robert White, the missing witness for the State, were received today by Mr. Crowe, he said, adding that he fully expected that White would be found or give himself up inside of two weeks, and that when he and his wife told why they left town there would be things of great activity around the Criminal Court Building.

The letters supposed to be White's said that he left town because he had been threatened with death, and mentioned three men, one of whom is believed to be Arthur Byrne, who testified before the Grand Jury investigation into White's disappearance last week, and who said he had worked for Stewart and O'Brien in examining prospective jurors. The letters were posted in Philadelphia, and this afternoon Detective James L. Devereaux left for that city to try to find White and bring him back. White's father and mother live in New York, and it is thought possible that he may have gone there to stay with them, and made the trip to Philadelphia merely to post his letters.

The letters were addressed to Assistant State's Attorney Joseph D. Savage. The first one read as follows:

Mr. Savage—You will, no doubt, be surprised to receive this letter from me, and, as I am not guilty of anything wrong, I wish to inform you that I will be back in Chicago to fight this case to a finish. I furthermore wish to state I did not steal that car. I rented it and left $45 deposit and I assure you I will bring it back also. Mr. Savage, listen to no one, especially Mr. and Mrs. Adams, because I did not speak to them people in the last three months. They are either looking for money or notoriety. I will be back, as I intended to and fight this case to a finish and expose all to the public.

Shepherd is guilty, I must admit, and he knows I know it, and, God help him when I get back. His bunch made a nervous wreck out of me and also made me write a statement against my will. Don't think for one moment, Mr. Savage, that I am through with this case, because I am not. I am just commencing to fight Shepherd and his gang. Yours truly,

Dr. ROBERT WHITE.

Mrs. White Also Writes.

To this letter was the following postscript by Mrs. White:

Mr. Savage:

Dear Sir: Just a word in regard to the statement made by William Adams and his wife. I wish to say it is all false. Neither Mr. White nor I made any statement to them regarding this case. They are making fools of themselves and sending you on foolish errands. I know very little about this whole affair. Mr. White never would converse with me regarding his business.

All I know is we are about sick over it all.

I want Robert to speak always the truth and hope that he has done his duty. I am for the right. I am not going to say any more now. I will see you at the trial, no doubt.

Respectfully yours,

MRS. ROBERT WHITE.

P. S. [In the man's handwriting]—Please straighten out matters about this car, as I just rented it to get away from it all for a couple of weeks and did not mean any wrong, as I was a complete nervous wreck when I left. I am coming back, as I intended to, at my own free will to show the public that I am for the right regardless of the outcome. I have no funds of any kind and I hope and pray that the State will show my wife and children a little consideration until I can get back to work again—that is, if you people do not detain me.

William Adams, referred to in the letter, is one of the two witnesses who testified before the Grand Jury that White had told them he had been offered $25,000 to leave town, and threatened with death if he did not. The second letter read:

Second Letter From White.

May 21, 1925.

Hon. Mr. Savage:

In reference to those articles in the newspapers about me being bribed, I wish to state right now that there never was a greater liar living than that William Adams. In the first place I haven't spoke to that man in the last three months and furthermore I wouldn't tell anybody my business.

Mr. Savage, I left because I was threatened with bodily harm and also compelled to make a statement against my wishes. I did not receive one cent, did not ask for any, and above all, I am not for sale. I left because I was in fear all the time I was in Chicago and I am completely broken in health. I am resting up a bit now and will be on hand to see justice done.

The statement I made to W. W. O'Brien pay no attention to. That was made under threat. Shepherd is guilty, I must admit, and still stick to what I said. I was in danger with my life and I will explain all when I return. I am with the State's Attorney's office to see justice done and I hope you hang that Shepherd. Listen to no stories from any one, because it's all lies, but it's true I was compelled to leave or else get killed. I am a complete nervous wreck, that Shepherd bunch me so. But I will return to fight them to a finish when the jury is all ready.

Mr. Savage, I think more of my word and honor than of all the money in the world and I would not have done what I did if I had not been compelled to. Mr. Savage, keep up the good fight. Arrest Burns [probably meant for Byrne] of the Order of the Owls, at 68 Washington Street. Arrest Mr. Rily, alias J. J. Kelly, from Sixty-third Place. Arrest Jew Goldem. Kelly knows that man. Those are responsible for my hurried departure and I will be down in Chicago to expose all that crooked bunch. My wife is sick at the present time from all this worrying, but you can gamble on me to be present when the trial opens. Very truly yours.

DR. ROBERT WHITE.

White is wanted so as to testify to having seen Shepherd talking with "Dr." C. Fejfar, Chairman, President of the National University of Sciences, where Shepherd is charged with having obtained the typhoid germs with which he is alleged to have inoculated William Nelson McClintock, his wife's ward.

Three jurors were tentatively accepted today, but there is little hope that they will all last through tomorrow. The State used two more of its peremptory challenges today when it seemed that the second four jurors—they are sworn in panels of four in Illinois—would be accepted. The State has now used eight of its peremptory challenges and the defense only one, which is a fair indication of the effort Mr. Crowe is making to keep men off the jury. He has only twelve left.

Shepherd, to whom nobody pays any attention, seemed to slumber peacefully during most of the afternoon session. He sat with one elbow resting on the table and his hands over his eyes, or simply sat with his eyes closed, almost nodding at times. He wrote a note which he passed to his wife, who sits all day silently in a seat in front of the reporters and watches the selection of jurymen with careful attention. She sees her husband for a few minutes every day before and after the sessions.

ROOSEVELT KIN CUT IN SUBWAY ATTACK

Slashed With Razor by One of Three Assailants, Young Man Is Rescued by Sailors.

Frank Roosevelt, 18 years old, of 45 Clinton Place, New Rochelle, N. Y., a distant relative of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, was attacked by three young men on a southbound Interborough subway train early yesterday and was rescued by a group of sailors.

The three men, who were arrested on the Chambers Street station charged with suspicion of felonious assault, on young Roosevelt's complaint, were Martello Ramos, 17, a printer, of 49 Tallman Street, Brooklyn; Raymond Perry, 25, a driver, of the same address, and Ralph Pepata, 27, a painter, of 39 Tallman Street.

Roosevelt said the men attacked him when he objected to the noise they were making. He declared that Ramos slashed him on the right shoulder and chest with a razor. Immediately, he said, a general fight began, windows were broken and passengers fled to other cars. A group of sailors, led by William Brundage, a first-class seaman from a United States destroyer, rescued Roosevelt, subdued the men, and detained them on the Chambers Street platform until the police arrived.

Members of the family of William G. Roosevelt at New Rochelle refused to discuss the attack on young Roosevelt. It was said that the young man's mother had suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of the occurrence.

PERCY D. HAUGHTON LEFT $98,000 ESTATE

Percy D. Haughton, for many years athletic director at Harvard, and at the time of his death on Oct. 27 head of athletics at Columbia University, left an estate appraised yesterday at $98,056. He had property in New York valued at $7,828, consisting of stock in the Continental Can Company, the General Electric Company and Robert Reis & Co., but the bulk of his estate was taxable in Massachusetts, where he had his legal residence. His personal property in that State was worth $83,378, and he had $6,850 in realty.

Mr. Haughton left his entire estate to his wife, Gwendolin Haughton, and said in his will, "Having implicit confidence in my wife, I have intentionally omitted to make any provision whatsoever herein for my children."

The Massachusetts estate included seventy-nine shares of stock in the Gillette Safety Razor Company, valued at $25,180. The value of Mr. Haughton's royalty contract for the publication of "How To Play Football" could not be determined. The appraisal stated that at the time of his death $6,000 was due him from Columbia University for services.

Judge Williams Named Missouri Senator Despite Protests of St. Louis Party Chiefs

Special to The New York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 25.—Governor Baker today announced the appointment of former Circuit Judge George H. Williams of St. Louis as junior Senator from Missouri to succeed Senator Seldon P. Spencer, who died in Washington a week ago Saturday night.

The selection of Judge Williams came as no great surprise. Ever since the Governor went to St. Louis on Wednesday for Senator Spencer's funeral the Judge has been generally considered the probable choice. But it is a big question whether his appointment will meet the approval of the Republican organization in St. Louis, as well as the State group, the Governor having acted without the advice of party leaders.

The appointment is regarded as personal. Many objections were raised to it among the Republican chieftains gathered for the Spencer funeral, but as the Governor refused to see them at that time, their protests reached him only through personal advisers, letters and telegrams.

The new Senator was born at California, Mo. His father, the late Judge John Williams, was prominent in Republican politics for many years.

SPEEDBOATS READY FOR TODAY'S RACE

BOATS ARE OVERHAULED

Mrs. Gar and Mrs. George Wood and Party Will Watch Event From the Twentieth Century.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 25.—Gar Wood's speed boats, the Baby Gar IV and the Baby Gar V, will try tomorrow to beat the first section of the Twentieth Century Limited, crack train of the New York Central Railroad, from here to New York. The attempt was to have been held this morning but was postponed because of bad weather.

Late this afternoon, after all preparations had been made and clear weather promised for tomorrow by the Weather Bureau, Gar Wood ordered the boats taken from the water for a thorough overhauling. Satisfied then that they were in first-class order the boats were put overboard again and the gasoline tanks filled for the 143-mile journey to New York.

Each tank has a capacity of seventy gallons, or about ten gallons less than will be required for the trip, so that the boats will have to carry a reserve supply. No stops will be made unless mechanical trouble develops, and the refueling will be done while traveling at high speed.

Railroad Says No Race.

So far as the train is concerned, the railroad company has made it plain that there will be no race. The Limited will stick to its regular schedule, under which the trip to New York is made in three hours and ten minutes. Five minutes of this time is required for the change of engines at Harmon, N. Y., thirty-two miles from the Grand Central Terminal.

The first section of the Limited is scheduled to leave here at 7:30 A. M., reaching Grand Central at 10:40, Daylight Saving Time. But frequently the sections arrive ahead of schedule from the West and after a change of engines are sent right on to New York.

In order to be prepared for such an emergency, Gar Wood has ordered his mechanics to be aboard by 6 o'clock tomorrow. Both boats will then take up positions under the bridge to await the arrival of the Limited. Gar Wood expects to pilot the Baby Gar IV, while his brother, George Wood, will be at the helm of the Baby Gar V.

Charles F. Chapman, editor of Motor Boating, and Arlin Johnson, a mechanic, will also be in the Baby Gar IV. Joe Kinney, mechanic of the Baby Gar V, will accompany George Wood.

The Mmes. Wood to Be on Train.

Mrs. Gar Wood and Mrs. George Wood, with Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Gaylord, Mrs. Charles F. Chapman and Mrs. Arlin Johnson, will watch the race from the Twentieth Century Limited. As Interstate Commerce regulations prohibit the sale of tickets from here to New York on extra-fare trains such as the Twentieth Century, they were compelled to buy tickets from Cleveland. Arrived in New York, they will go at once to the Columbia Yacht Club to meet the speed boat parties.

For more than an hour this afternoon the boats tore up and down the river here and were watched from the shore fronts by several hundred persons. In the Baby Gar IV with Gar Wood were Arthur Smith, son of Governor Alfred E. Smith, and Cornelius V. Collins, Postmaster of Troy.

Griffin McKiernan, a school chum of Arthur Smith, accompanied George Wood in the Baby Gar V. Just as the two boats returned to the Albany Yacht Club landing, Governor Smith's youngest son, Walter, arrived. Gar Wood was preparing to haul the boats up at the time, but when he saw the Governor's son he took him aboard the Baby Gar V with several others who were eager to make the trip and started out again.

Both sons of the Governor seemed to enjoy the trip immensely. Each had a turn at driving the boat, and Gar and George Wood raced up and down the river, making abrupt turns, causing the boats to careen dangerously for the entertainment of the lads.

Six airplanes came to Albany late this afternoon and will follow the course of the race down the river. The big Sikorsky passenger plane in charge of Captain C. B. D. Collyer, gen ral manager of the General Airways System, and Baron Solovioff, construction manager; two army planes that will carry the broadcasting apparatus from which the story of the race will be told, beginning at 7:27 A. M. daylight saving time.

OBJECT TO EXEMPTING PORT

Speakers at City Hall Protest Proposed Tax Legislation.

Lawyers from the Corporation Counsel offices of municipalities in New Jersey within the New York Port Authority district and representatives of civic organizations of this city joined in a public hearing held by the Board of Estimate late yesterday afternoon in objection to the proposed legislation exempting from taxation such properties as the Port Authority may acquire in New York and New Jersey.

No action was taken by the Board of Estimate, as there was not a quorum of that body present, but Mayor Hylan, after listening for nearly three hours to the arguments presented, announced that the hearing would be continued this morning, when, it was hoped, there would be a quorum present and a vote by the board might be reached.

Nine sight-seeing buses brought to the City Hall more than 400 men, women and children who came to protest against their deprivation of bus service in the Eirie Basin section of Brooklyn because of a court order. The bus hearing also went over until today, but the pilgrims cheered the speakers against tax exemption and some of them held up their hands when Mayor Hylan asked if they were opposed to making the Port Authority a privileged corporation.

OLD YALE MEN PLAN REUNION WITH WINE

Newell Martin, '75, Says He and Others of His Class Will Celebrate in Montreal.

"FANCY DINING ON WATER!"

Lawyer Declares He Resents Dr. Angell's Hint to Graduates to Be Dry and Won't Go to New Haven.

Newell Martin, Yale, '75, declared last night at the University Club that he was serious when he wrote to THE NEW YORK TIMES in a letter printed yesterday that he and other members of his class would celebrate their semi-centennial anniversary at Montreal instead of New Haven at commencement time.

Mr. Martin, who is 71 years old, wrote in objection to what he termed President Angell's hint that "we old men are not wanted under the elms" for fear the old grads might set a bad example to the undergraduates by drinking at their reunion. He wrote he did not share Dr. Angell's horror of wine, and added: "Even a polite invitation is not tempting when it asks one to a banquet, on water, in the company of professional prohibitors. Some of us, therefore, intend to celebrate our Yale anniversary in Montreal with discreet and well-ordered dinners, such as are customary and lawful in civilized societies; and by staying away from New Haven."

"Of course I meant it," said Mr. Martin, who is a lawyer and the son of a minister. "I have written letters to the members of my class—there are about thirty of us left—inviting them to go, and since they are all, like myself, old men, it is taking them a little time to answer. But I'm sure several will accept. Most of them have false teeth and probably wigs and they would nearly all be good company with wine, but probably not five would be agreeable if they were served only water. I know I couldn't endure them. Fancy inviting a gentleman to dine and giving him water! One doesn't go to meet intelligent men even for food—certainly not for water.

"The basis of society formerly was a dinner. Nobody gave a dinner unless he had a good cook and good wine, but as it is now a dinner is nothing but stupid eating.

"Think of the dinners years ago to Chauncey Depew, such jolly dinners, with wine, and now—just sitting there stuffing oneself with cold storage chicken!

"And the clubs—look at them! Every place a morgue, and the more men one sees in them the deader they are.

"Yes, prohibition is effective. It has stopped comfortable drinking."

EPSTEIN ROW IN COMMONS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—Jacob Epstein's sculptured memorial in Hyde Park to William H. Hudson, the naturalist, was the subject of questions in the House of Commons today and came in for some hard treatment by the questioners.

Among other things the sculpture was described as a scarecrow and as a deformed female with elephantiasis of the hands.

Asked who was responsible for the selection of the panal, Mr. Looker Lampson, Under Secretary for the Home Office, said a sketch of the design was submitted by the Hudson Memorial Committee and was accepted by the First Commissioner of Public Works of the Labor Government after consultation with a committee of experts.

Dr. Hadenguest, a Labor member, suggested that a large number of people regarded the panel as particularly distinguished and appropriate. Sir Henry Craik, Conservative, urged the expediency of excluding as far as possible all memorials apt to promote acrimonious discussion from public parks, which should be kept to their proper purpose of growing trees and grass.

Colonel James, Conservative, asked whether it had been suggested that the sculptor, owing to his "inadequate knowledge of the English language," thought he had to produce a sculpture with birds and had erected a scarecrow. Sir William Davison, Conservative, asked whether the Ministry would inform the House whether "the deformed female with elephantiasis of the hands"—here the Speaker intervened and said he would like to see that question in writing.

DELMONICO CORNER BRINGS $312 A FOOT

WILL BE OFFICE BUILDING

Harriman National Bank Sells to Max N. Natanson and Mandelbaum & Lewine, Inc.

A thirty-story office building, representing an investment of $10,000,000, will be erected by a syndicate of builders on the site of the old Delmonico restaurant at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street. Contracts for the sale of the property by the Harriman National Bank to Max N. Natanson and Mandelbaum & Lewine, Inc., were signed yesterday.

Included in the purchase is an adjoining property on Fifth Avenue, and although no purchase price was announced, the ground is said to have brought from $4,500,000 to $5,000,000. This, it is said, establishes a record price for real estate on the avenue. The new owners obtain possession July 1, when demolition of the famous restaurant building will be begun.

The syndicate has obtained at 537 Fifth Avenue, next to the Delmonico property, a leasehold that will protect the light of the new building. They now have a combined frontage of 125 feet on the avenue and 140 feet on the street, with about 17,000 square feet of plottage, which is conceded to be the finest on Fifth Avenue available for improvement.

Charles F. Noyes Company, the broker in the sale, has arranged a mortgage on the property of $6,500,000 for a thirty-three year term, completing the financial arrangements and assuring the erection of the new building. The site is known as 531 to 537 Fifth Avenue.

A monumental building, to be one of the finest business structures in the city, is planned. H. Craig Severance, the architect, has drawn plans for a thirty-story structure, fifteen of which will be devoted to a tower. A banking floor over attractive ground floor shops is provided in the plans. The building will cover the entire plot up to the fifteenth floor, where the zoning law requires a setback. From there the tower, for fifteen stories upward, will have 3,000 square feet of rentable area on each floor.

The design of the building will be classical. Facades on Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street will be limestone, rising from a granite base for the first four stories. The upper part will be of limestone with terra cotta trimmings, forceful in design, without projecting cornices. Marble and bronze will be used in the finish of the entrance foyer, and the arcade and elevator lobby will be of marble and bronze, with marble extending from floor to ceiling. The general finish, such as doors and trim, will be of baked enamel steel, and the doors, show-windows, elevator doors and entrances to the shops will be bronze.

This new business edifice will be known as the New Harriman Building and will produce approximately $1,500,000 in yearly income. David Kraus, Inc., and Bertram L. Kraus were attorneys for the selling interests. Walter M. Wechsler and Alexander S. Natanson were attorneys for the purchasers. Charles F. Noyes Company, who exclusively handled all financial details, will be the agents of the new building.

The Harriman National Bank purchased the Delmonico corner several years ago as a site for a towering business structure and new home. Plans for this project were filed last Fall, but the bank subsequently bought the building it now occupies at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street and the A. G. Spalding site adjoining. The building on the latter site is now being altered to conform with the Harriman building at a cost of $5,000,000.

Figures in the purchase of the Spalding property throw some light on the value of the Delmonico corner. When it acquired the Spalding building last Fall, the Harriman Bank paid $1,000,000 for the property, at the rate of $304 a square foot. At that time the price was hailed at the highest unit value ever obtained for property on Fifth Avenue or anywhere in the city. The Delmonico property, being a corner, is known to have brought a higher figure, which has been estimated by some realtors at $312 a square foot.

When the old Delmonico property goes into the hands of housewreckers in July, New Yorkers will bid farewell to the city's most famous restaurant landmark. Oddly enough, the land has never carried any building other than a hotel. The present building is obsolete so far as the avenue is concerned. It could not be remodeled for business purposes as was Sherry's, diagonally across Fifth Avenue, which was remodeled into offices by the Guaranty Trust Company a few years ago.

On the night of May 21, 1923, the orchestra at Delmonico's struck up "Auld Lang Syne," and the establishment which dated back to 1825 closed its doors. Many diners prominent in society bade farewell to the place that night.

Delmonico's was founded by John Delmonico. The first restaurant was at 21 William Street. After a fire in 1835, a new start was made at 76 Broad Street, John bringing in his brother Peter, who, with his nephews Francois, Lorenzo and Siro, has been summoned from Switzerland. After two other locations at Fourteenth Street and at Twenty-sixth Street and Fifth Avenue, the restaurant moved to its last location at Forty-fourth Street on Nov. 15, 1897.

The interior decorations of the place went under the auctioneer's hammer in 1923, and the building has recently been occupied as offices by a real estate firm.

BEATS HIS WIFE'S ANNOYER.

On complaint of Senator John A. Hastings of 700 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, Thomas Fay of 424 Central Avenue was held in $1,000 for examination next Monday by Magistrate James V. Short in the Gates Avenue Police Station yesterday.

The Senator and Mrs. Hastings were on their way home when he stopped in a cigar store on Reid Avenue. Mrs. Hastings waited outside. A man who Senator Hastings and his wife said was Fay approached and was annoying Mrs. Hastings when the Senator returned. The Senator, it is said, administered a thrashing to the man and then took him in a taxicab to the Ralph Avenue Police Station where he charged him with disorderly conduct.

GERMANY URGES BAN ON POISON GAS WAR

VOTES FOR AMERICAN PLAN

PARIS, May 25.—Herr Von Eckardt, the chief German delegate to the Arms Traffic conference, this morning announced that his Government is ready to adhere without reservation to any international agreement providing for elimination of chemical warfare.

The declaration, which was wholly unexpected and which came at rather a critical moment of discussions concerning the United States' proposal for complete prohibition on export of all gases manufactured exclusively for the purposes of war, helped considerably to clear the atmosphere.

Each time in the discussion of the Burton proposal to extend the provisions in the draft of a convention to prohibit the export of poison gases, delegates from a number of small non-producing States hastened to declare that such provision would bring about an even greater state of inequality between producing and non-producing States than publicity on arms. Publicity on arms would simply result in exposing armaments secrets, they said. Prohibition to export gas would, they contended, effectively take this means of warfare out of the hands of non-producing nations while permitting producing nations to manufacture at will in anticipation of war. This problem was first sent to a legal commission and by it to a special subcommittee which returned it to the legal commission with a request for further instructions. The legal commission passed the issue finally to a general committee of the conference which promptly avoided the matter by placing it in the hands of a technical commission of military, naval and air affairs. This commission immediately passed it to a special subcommittee.

During the morning's discussion, the German delegate voted in favor of the American proposal. Immediately a Serbian delegate declared that as Germany had made no statement on the essential question—the prohibition of chemical warfare—or had given no solemn engagement not to wage this warfare, and as Germany was the greatest chemical producing nation, he was forced to name his Government as refraining from supporting the American proposal. Herr von Eckardt, immediately declared:

"Germany is ready to adhere without reserve to all international agreements providing for the elimination of chemical warfare. By this declaration, I seek at the same time to give a satisfactory reply to the remark of the delegate of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes on the subject of a formal engagement on the part of Germany not to wage chemical warfare."

No decision by the subcommittee on the United States' proposal is expected before tomorrow.

KURDS KILLED TEN OF BRITISH COLUMN

BAGDAD, May 25.—Further particulars of the attack made on the Second Regiment of Levy Cavalry while marching from Suleimanie to Halebja show the Kurds, excited by Turkish propaganda, began the fight by desultory sniping on May 20. They did no damage and retired during the night.

On the following day the column was strongly attacked while passing through a valley three-quarters of a mile broad, between high hills, which were occupied by tribesmen, who retired into caves when airplanes came to the assistance of the column.

While the advance guard was engaged with the enemy a strong attack was made on the rear guard and baggage, which threw the hired civilian transport into confusion and caused it to be stampeded. The British column commander, however, successfully reorganized the transport and charged the enemy's position. The enemy did not wait to receive the charges, but fled. These charges were the deciding factor of the day, as the tribesmen were driven into the open, where they suffered heavy casualties from the aerial attack.

Subsequently the Kurds were seen only on hill tops at long range and the cavalry drew clear of the defile without further trouble.

On May 22, Halebja was reached without further opposition. On this, the first occasion the Levy cavalry has been in action, it displayed great steadiness and gallantry. Aerial assistance was invaluable. Machines which were hit repeatedly escaped without serious damage and inflicted over fifty casualties on the enemy.

The cavalry lost ten men killed and eighteen wounded. There were no European casualties. The more seriously wounded were evacuated from Halebja by airplane.

TELLS JEWS ENGLAND WILL KEEP WORD

LONDON, May 25.—Whatever political party was in power in England, Lloyd George told the Jewish Historical Society tonight, England would keep its word in the matter of Palestine and a national home for the Jewish race. It was not, however, his conception, and he was certain it was not the conception of the Arabs, that any one should be driven out of Palestine who was there now and who did not want to go.

It was one of the glories of the British Empire that it was an empire of all races. Palestine was never the land exclusively of the Jews. It ought to be the glory of the Jews as it was the glory of every other country that anybody who was willing to work side by side with them should be there. Any policy of expropriation or anything that suggested it would only make difficulties in the path of Zionism.

There undoubtedly was room for a very considerable population in Palestine, and if the Arabs liked to work there why should they not? But that was no reason why the Jews ought to be kept out of their country and why they should not be permitted to fertilize the beautiful valleys which were at one time the topic of song and poetry.

Israel Zangwill, President of the society, referring to Dean Inge's remark that the Jews should build their holy city and temple in New York because there were enough Jews and plenty of Christians there to fleece, said he had taken the Dean to task for a remark so peculiarly dangerous at a time when anti-Semitism raged more furiously throughout the world than ever before.

From a letter received from the Dean he gathered that at the back of the Dean's mind was the conventional idea that the Jews could not live without having some Gentiles to live off. That, of course, was true where Jews formed an imperfect economic organism, but to make them a self-contained, economic organism was the very purpose of Zionism. However, the Dean had authorised him to tell the meeting he never dreamed his words would be taken seriously and to express his regret.

PLEAD FOR BRITISH ART.

LONDON, May 25.—A strong plea for preservation of British art treasures, particularly from the "ravages" of American collectors, was made today at the annual meeting of the National Art Collections Fund.

Sir Robert Witt, chairman, quoted figures showing that American public collections could not bear comparison with the great public collections of Europe but that American private collections now held the first rank in the world.

Of 650 Rembrandts, 120 were now in the United States; of 200 known pictures by Frans Hals, fifty; of thirty-five Vermers, ten; and of 100 by Velasques twelve.

Those figures were instructive as showing how much had gone from Europe to America and a greater number went from this country. He suggested wealthy men in Britain should set out to make collections and repeat in the twentieth century what was done in the eighteenth.

Another lesson from America was in the care of pictures. The Archbishop of York, referring to the passage of beautiful works to America said when recently he saw a magnificent new art gallery in Chicago he was reminded of what an eminent citizen of Chicago said, that, "America had no time for culture, but when she had she would make culture hum."

He saw some signs of that beginning, he said, and he could never forget the effect of seeing two magnificent Raeburns in private collections in Baltimore. It was a beautiful collection, but he might be forgiven if he said the two Scotsmen portrayed by the great painter looked like dejected and forlorn exiles.

VIENNA TALK STIRS MOSCOW

Soviets Plan a Protest Note to Austria on Propaganda Charges.

VIENNA, May 25.—According to Moscow reports the speech last Thursday by Herr Matajas, Austrian Foreign Minister, denouncing Soviet Government for propaganda activities, has aroused a storm of indignation there.

Official Soviet circles contrast the Matajas speech with that of Premier Mussolini, who paid a tribute to the correct behavior of the Soviet diplomatic and commercial representatives in Italy.

M. Tchitcherin, Soviet Foreign Minister, is planning to send a protest note to Vienna.

Adolf Joffe, who officially is still Soviet envoy in Vienna but who for some time has been back in Moscow, declared in the Soviet press that his stay in Vienna has been made unpleasant and made other charges. Joffe added that he left Vienna in order to spare Austria further inconveniences.

The general opinion, however, is that Joffe left Vienna owing to a failure of his Balkan revolution projects, especially those in Yugoslavia, where the parties are now united.

It is believed here that Mr. Fletcher, who is familiar with Mexican politics, will back Mr. Sheffield's request for a clearly defined Mexican-American policy.

home of Mrs. Whitney and Andrews to his home in Orange. After a conference of an hour between the eleven jurors and the Women's Club officials at the Whitney home the eleven jurymen returned to the Superior Court and entered Judge Avery's chamber to plead with him to accept their personal bond and release Miss Macri on bail.

Every juror pledged $2,000 toward a bail bond.

Statement of Eleven Jurors.

This evening the jurors dictated the following statement, which is regarded as without precedent in the history of American jurisprudence:

"We, the undersigned, the eleven jurors of the Macri case, in favor of acquittal, have weighed every possible particle of evidence and feel that the accused was innocent of any crime and that she should have been found not guilty. We feel that the girl acted in self-defense and that the shooting was justified in law and in fact.

"The little girl, Olympia, has suffered excruciatingly, and in face of the fact that she was absolutely innocent. If only eleven men could have acquitted her and sent her to her baby vindicated!

"We believed her story completely and it breaks our hearts that she has to go back to jail instead of going out into the fresh air, a free girl and a wonderful mother to her baby.

"We sincerely express to Joseph Koletsky, attorney for Olympia, our warmest sympathy and appreciation of the heroic way in which Olympia was defended. He fought unaided and alone and valiantly for his client.

"We extend to the accused our heartfelt sympathy in her hour of great tribulation. We are willing to do anything to legally bring about her freedom which she so justly deserves. We are all anxious to go on her bond for $22,000 ($2,000 apiece), until such time as she goes free.

"Frank N. Platt, Daniel P. Perry, Frank J. Beach, N. W. Cranshaw, Howard E. Smith, Frank O. Abbott, James M. Chase, William H. Jones, Walter I. Candee, Sebley D. Bartlett and Charles Perry."

Andrews's Statement.

Irving A. Andrews, of Orange, the lone juror who insisted on a verdict fastening some degree of guilt on the girl, defended his stand in a statement in which he said:

"I feel that I have done my duty to justice. I was asked by the instructions of the Court to consider all the facts of the case according to certain criteria. This I feel that I did according to the satisfaction of my conscience. From the very start I made known my views to my fellow jurymen and I adhered to them to the end, regardless of all other considerations.

"I did not follow the lead of the other juror who at first voted for a verdict of murder in the second degree and then was swayed from his opinion. Instead I stuck to my opinion. Let me say, too, that I am opposed to capital punishment. This I made known from the very start. Both sides knew just how I stood when they accepted me as juror. Life is the most precious thing that we have. I regretted that Olympia had taken one and I felt that she should have been punished to some degree for so doing.

"Few were moved as I was by the pathetic story which the little mother told. It was a sad tale of suffering. It moved me to tears. But I had sworn to follow a definite line of duty. I felt sorry for the girl, but I did not see that I could honestly vote for her acquittal under the evidence offered. What impressed me as calling for a verdict of guilty was that the girl walked around for a whole week toting a revolver. I could not see defense when she fired at Bagnano. The circumstances under which she killed him were such that I saw only a second degree verdict of murder."

RIVAL ARTIST SUES ROBERT W. CHANLER

CITES CRITIC TO REFUTE IT

Asks $50,000 for Alleged Libel and Says Chanler Stormed "You Stole My Designs!"

Suit for damages of $50,000 for alleged libel has been started in the Supreme Court of New York County against Robert W. Chanler, artist, of 147 East Nineteenth Street, by Roy MacNicol of 67 West Fifty-second Street. Service was made on Chanler at his studio on Saturday.

The alleged libel occurred in a letter written to a resident of Palm Beach in February, 1924, when MacNicol was holding an exhibition of his work. Chanler is said to have written in the letter "That Roy MacNicol stole my designs and is a copyist. * * * MacNicol is a joke."

MacNicol, at the offices of his attorneys, Kendler & Goldstein, 1,540 Broadway, said yesterday that he called on Chanler at his studio last week, and when he introduced himself Chanler said:

"So you're the man that stole my designs. I've waited for two years to tell you this. You're a joke."

The studio was filled with people, according to MacNicol, and after the outburst on Chanler's part the latter showed him the door.

MacNicol was formerly an actor. His last appearance was as leading man in "Twin Beds." He has followed art for a number of years and has taken as his theme the decorative design of birds and animals. This theme is also used by Chanler.

An exhibition in the Anderson Galleries in November, 1923, MacNicol said, is what precipitated Chanler's wrath. One of the critics said of his work there: "He (MacNicol) is no copyist—he has his own point of view, which combines a freshness of vision with an individual and unexpected arrangement of shapes and colors. Nothing morbid or unhealthy, as in Bob Chanler's works."

MacNicol, who is the husband of Fay Courteney, one of the Courteney Sisters, a vaudeville team, is now stopping at his Summer studio, Courteney Crest, Queens, L. I., having closed his studio in Fifty-second Street.

In his complaint he alleges that his reputation and credit as an artist have suffered by Chanler's statement to the Palm Beach resident, and that he has been annoyed many times by remarks made by people who have seen his work, who have repeated the statement that he was copying Chanler's works. His visit to the Chanler studio last week was prompted by a desire to find out from Chanler if he really meant the statement he is alleged to have made, he said. Before he was able to explain the purpose of his visit, he said, Chanler turned on him and accused him of being "the man who stole my designs."

At the Chanler studio yesterday it was admitted that service of papers had been made last Saturday, but it was said that "Mr. Chanler is out of town and left instructions to say nothing about the suit until his return on Wednesday."

WOMEN BESIEGE GIRL ACCUSED OF BURGLARY

'Music Teacher' Says She Entered Apartment to Await 'Pupil's' Arrival.

Rescued by the police from a dozen screaming women, who were berating her and attempting to pull her hair, Miss Anna Levens, 18 years old, of 204 Eldredge Street, who says she is a teacher of music, was arrested yesterday on a charge of burglary at 152 South Eighth Street, Brooklyn.

On the complaint of Mrs. Becky Levinson, who lives in an apartment on the fourth floor of the house, the girl was taken to the Bridge Plaza Police Court, where Magistrate Rayfiel held her in $10,000 bail on the burglary charge for examination today.

Mrs. Levinson said she had returned from a shopping trip and found the girl robbing her home. A number of articles of clothing had been piled near a kitchen window, which had been forced open from a fire-escape outside, and her $500 fur coat had been thrown out of the window and had fallen upon a clothes-line below.

As the girl fled Mrs. Levinson shouted for help. The girl was cornered in the hallway by a number of women who began beating her. Their shouts attracted the attention of three detectives from the Clymer Street Station, who made the rescue.

Miss Levens told the Magistrate she had entered the apartment by mistake, believing she had been engaged to give music lessons to the daughter of a "Mrs. Dreyfuss," who had given her that address. When she had received no response to repeated knocks, she said, she had found the door open and had entered to await the arrival of "Mrs. Dreyfuss."

At the Eldredge Street address it was learned that the girl gives piano lessons. She lives with her parents and has two brothers and two sisters. She is short and has black bobbed hair.

WIFE SUES, HE PRAISES HER.

More Beautiful Than Ever, Husband Says, Opposing Separation.

Nathan Cohen of 2,144 East Nineteenth Street, Brooklyn, owner of the Monroe Press at 225 East Twenty-ninth Street, Manhattan, answered a suit for separation by his wife in the Brooklyn Supreme Court yesterday by describing her as "charming" and "more beautiful" than when he married her sixteen years ago. These compliments to his wife, Mrs. Minnie Cohen, were contained in her husband's affidavit to the Court, in which he said:

"My achievements in the commercial world, the comforts I have been able to give my wife, and the attentions I have shown her, render her a charming and stunning woman; so that, after sixteen years of married life, she is today more beautiful than when I married her. I am, in a measure, the reverse."

He denied the charges made by Mrs. Cohen, who is now living at 1,688 East Eighteenth Street. His affidavit was supported by another from Miss Sadie Miller, his bookkeeper, who defended herself and her employer from his wife's charges. Mrs. Cohen told the Court that her husband's property was valued at more than $500,000. Justice James C. Van Siclen reserved decision.

WAR A POSSIBILITY, SAYS VISCOUNT GOTO

ASSAILS EXCLUSION LAW

He Asserts "Colonization of California by the Japanese Is a Life-and-Death Question."

By T. R. YBARRA

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 25.—Japan is under no illusion that war may result from threatening antagonism between herself and the United States. That is the salient feature of a startling interview granted by Viscount Goto, Japanese Minister of the Interior until 1923, to Frith Witkowski, a representative of the Vossische Zeitung, a prominent Berlin newspaper, which will be spread across most of the front page of that paper tomorrow.

Viscount Goto told the German that Japanese immigration into California was a life and death question for Japan. The German reporter then asked:

"If, as you say, it is a life and death question, but, on the other hand, America is unwilling or unable to take this into consideration, will war be the last means of resolving the problem?"

Viscount Goto replied:

"An immigration law of the United States is irrevocable. Even today there are influential and respected men in America who fight that law. I merely mention the name of La Follette. And the new American Government will surely give a new answer to the California question. But naturally, if in the course of events, Japan sees no change in the American attitude, then the possibility optioned by you must be brought into the realm of possibilities. The politician, unfortunately, must sometimes think of a war, but he must never talk about it."

Asked whether the transfer of the American naval manoeuvres from the Atlantic to the Pacific has been considered an anti-Japanese move, Goto answered:

"At first, yes. But we do not believe America would loose a war which would meet the unanimous resistance of the peace loving Japanese people. Our personal, scientific and financial relations with America are the best imaginable.

"Even if we unconditionally must insist upon a solution of the Californian question in our favor, nevertheless I believe and hope that such a solution will be feasible."

Viscount Goto, when he was asked whether the Russo-Japanese treaty made the California question unimportant, exclaimed:

"Unimporant! I assure you the colonization of California by the Japanese is a life and death question for Japan."

When the German newspaper man remarked that Americans say it is not so important to Japan because Northern Japan still provides space for 4,000,000 peasant colonizers Goto replied:

"No nation can play politics far in the future. It is our duty now to foresee the day when Northern Japan will be inhabited and cultivated. Moreover, the Northern provinces are unsuitable climatically and naturally for the present-day Japanese. On the other hand, California offers all needed agricultural and climatic advantages for the Japanese. We deny to the United States, which is the country which grew up only through immigration, the right to forbid immigration into its territory.

"Moreover, the American Immigration law is an unprecedented piece of ingratitude toward Japan, since it was the Japanese farmers exclusively who made enormous tracts of American territory arable and opened them to cultivation."

Asked how Japan would stand toward another disarmament conference Goto answered:

"Japan is ready to take part in any conference which means progress toward peace among nations. But it stands to reason that Japan must exact as a condition the participation of America in such a conference. And I may add that personally I would welcome the participation of Germany in such a conference and Germany's entry into the League of Nations."

Apropos of the recent Japanese-Russian rapprochement, Viscount Goto said that there is no danger of the Bolshevization of Japan, as the monarchistic idea is too deeply ingrained in all strata of the Japanese population.

"To be a Japanese means to believe in the godly majesty and mission of the Mikado," he said, adding that even the Japanese Socialists limit their demands to the economic and social realm.

PLANS TREASURY RESERVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 25.—With his monocle fixed firmly in his right eye, Finance Minister Caillaux this afternoon in a speech of two sentences introduced into the Chamber his bill for supplementing the budget and increasing the country's revenue.

One of these two sentences described the measure as "directed to assure complete balancing of the budget through raising new resources." Among Herriot's supporters this statement was greeted with a certain coldness, while the Communist Jean Renaud interpreted the thought of the whole Chamber when he interjected: "What, has not the budget been balanced all this past six months?"

The bill which the Finance Minister introduced asks for an increase in taxation of 5,100,000,000 francs. In the preamble, which is clear, decisive and vigorous, M. Caillaux sets forth that "no sane finance is possible in a country which is burdened by a debt if its representatives do not see to it that all public expenditures, without exception, are included in a single budget and entirely covered by revenue.

As already nearly half the financial year has run, M. Caillaux finds himself forced to be content with 1,600,000,000 francs new revenue for the purpose of balancing his 1925 expenditure, but today he gave formal notification that the whole 3,500,000,000 francs will be collected next year. He does not propose to increase the income tax for the good reasons that the income tax has not yet been established on a just and extensive basis. His system is a general increase by varying percentages of existing taxes on property, death duties and investments. Postal and telegraph rates are increased and certain additional benefits accrue to the State from excess profits on gasoline and crude oil imports.

A reform which while unlikely to yield much this year may be fruitful in the future is contained in a scheme for modification of taxable profits on agriculture. This proposed for revision of taxation of the agricultural community and other parts of the plan may meet a certain opposition, but in the present disposition of the Chamber and in the present situation of this country there is no doubt increased taxation will as a whole be voted.

In the preamble the Finance Minister sets forth very clearly and emphatically this business of getting the budget really balanced is to be only a preliminary task and that others even greater will have to be faced. This is the kind of hope he holds out to Deputies and the country.

"Once the budgetary problem has been settled, once the country is cleared of the burden of reconstructing liberated regions, once the question of interallied debts has been settled, that is to say, when we get rid of all uncertain obligations, we will find ourselves in the presence of the problem of crushing internal debt: 150,000,000,000 francs consolidated and 120,000,000,000 in short term and very short term engagements.

"With that problem we can do nothing until the franc is stabilized. Everything can be done when it is stabilized. But stability of the franc will never be achieved so long as the great preliminary operations which I have outlined have not been accomplished."

About the immediate problem of repayment of bonds falling due this year Caillaux is not altogether pessimistic. In one of the few passages in which he allowed himself the pleasure of criticising his former antagonists, the National Bloc, he condemned bitterly the policy which permited the accumulation of these short term engagements without precautions against reimbursement. He said nothing had been done to provide a sinking fund and announced that the Government would shortly ask passage of a bill which would place at the disposal of the Treasury the sums necessary to meet any temporary shortage caused by reimbursement of the bonds.

This measure would be surrounded by every precaution so that neither Parliament nor the country need have any fear of abuse. He declared at the same time his confidence that holders of the bonds would not seek repayment to any such extent as to cause more than a slight and temporary embarrassment.

PLANS 46-HOUR TRIPS ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—Full details were placed today before Sir Sefton Brancker, Director of Civil Aviation, of the scheme for transatlantic airplane flights from London to New York in forty-six hours, and London to San Francisco in four days. The Oceanic Airways Company, which is promoting the project, proposes to effect a crossing, according to The Morning Post, in a series of flights between canal floating airdromes or station ships. Special aircraft, which combine the qualities both of a flying boat and a seaplane have been designed and patented by J. G. Navarro, who was engaged in aircraft design during the war.

The flying boats will carry sufficient fuel to allow them to span the distances between every other ship so that if they hear by wireless that weather conditions are bad near one ship they can fly on to the next.

The station ships, which will be between 700 and 800 feet long and 120 feet wide, will not be anchored but will remain at set distances apart. On the northern of two routes proposed between London and New York they will be 330 miles apart, and on the southern route 406 miles. The aircraft will alight on the sea near a ship and will take in fuel through pipes.

The fare for the London-New York journey would be £125. It is proposed to link up the transoceanic service with the present New York-San Francisco air line.

PREMIER VISITS D'ANNUNZIO

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 25.—Premier Mussolini, who left Rome suddenly and secretly, is at Gardone, where, it is announced, he will be the guest of d'Annunzio for a few days. Though the reason given for the journey is that the Premier personally wishes to take over the villa which the poet presented to the nation, the news of his visit created something of a flurry in political circles where d'Annunzio hitherto is credited with regarding the Fascist movement with scant favor.

D'Ansunzio, in fact, immediately after the conclusion of his Fiume adventure, retired into voluntary seclusion at Gardone, refusing to have anything to do with the governments which succeeded each other in power since then. His anti-Fascist attitude, though, has been implied rather than expressed in any active participation in politics but was so pronounced that he at one time was considered almost the head of opposition against Mussolini.

The reunion of the soldier-poet and the head of Fascism, therefore, ranks as a political event of first importance.

It is rumored also that d'Annunzio may come to Rome to participate in the nation-wide celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of King Victor's reign. Such a spectacular sign of reconciliation between d'Annunzio and Fascism—for it would be the first time that d'Annunzio will have left Gardone since he retired there—would certainly influence public opinion enormously. D'Annunzio has become a kind of legendary hero and his first reappearance in public would be considered an event of almost international importance.

A few days' rest at d'Annunzio's villa will be much appreciated by the Premier, who has been working under a tremendous strain lately owing to the huge volume of work entailed by the four Ministries he now holds.

AMUNDSEN MISSING 112 HOURS IN ARCTIC

Greenland some years ago, believes that at least eight days must pass before hearing from the North Pole expedition of Captain Roald Amundsen. Colonel Koch said today, in discussing the lack of news from the expedition:

"Naturally this flying trip is a gamble, but despite the manifold dangers the silence is in no wise disquieting as yet. From the outset I reckon that at least eight days must pass before hearing from the fliers. I take it for granted that Amundsen will not reach the Polar point at the first attempt even with the best navigation.

"Suppose he landed, say, seventy kilometers (about forty-five miles) from the Pole. When he discovered his position I feel sure, knowing Amundsen's character, he would be dissatisfied and would fly on; probably even then he would not reach the exact Polar spot and would continue afoot until he reached the Pole. I do not think it particularly dangerous to land on the ice, which is flat and unbroken for stretches. He might, of course, hit a socalled sastrugi, or windfallows, which would probably damage the planes, but without endangering the lives of the fliers.

"Amundsen is capable of many surprises and doing unexpected things. Therefore he may decide to land at Alaska instead of Spitzbergen. I disbelieve most decidedly he would land at Cape Columbia except he were in desperate straits. Amundsen is no longer young and a march of 300 kilometers to Lady Franklin and thereafter 700 kilometers to Cape York would be too much."

Oslo Recalls Amundsen's Advice.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OSLO, May 25.—Owing to Amundsen's advice to the public before he left for Spitzbergen not to expect a too early return of the expedition, little anxiety is yet felt here as to its fate. Meanwhile pending receipt of news the public is on the tiptoe of expectation.

The most reassuring fact of the situation is that the expedition is abundantly supplied with map material of the polar basin, as also with all conceivable means of confronting any emergency.

Navy Prepared to Send Airship.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Admission was made at the Navy Department today that the establishment is fully prepared, if called upon, to undertake an expedition for the relief of Amundsen and those who accompanied him in the quest of the North Pole.

An appeal to the navy for help, made either by the Government of Norway or some accredited organization or group, would result in the immediate dispatch of the dirigible Shenandoah or its sister ship, the Los Angeles, to the frozen North.

Naval officials say that it would be idle to send airplanes in search of Amundsen. The paper plans that could at once be utilized in any emergency of the kind that might arise call for the use of a dirigible, with the chances favoring the detail of the Shenandoah in the event that the Secretary of the Navy is asked to act.

Naval officials declare that this time the United States is the only country that could promptly send an adequate searching party into the polar regions.

Unless Amundsen reports or is heard from within the next few days, it is the general expectation that a request will come to the Navy from Norway asking for cooperation in an effort to locate the explorer.

Several weeks ago, as a detail of preparations for the MacMillan expedition, on which the Navy will be officially represented by an aviation unit, the possibility that a call for help might be raised was taken into consideration. Accordingly, the commanders of the Shenandoah and Los Angeles were notified that they would be sent north if any untoward incident marked the progress of MacMillan.

The plans that were made for relief for MacMillan can be utilized, naval officials say, should an appeal now be made for the sending of a relief expedition for Amundsen and his men.

It was said today that the island of Disko, on the west coast of Greenland, is the farthest northern point which could be used as a base for such a searching party.

It was indicated that the first step would be to rush the U. S. S. Patoka, mooring ship for the two dirigibles, to Disko. This vessel, now at Hampton Roads, has a speed of from twelve to fifteen knots and could reach Disko in fifteen days.

Either of the navy dirigibles could be used, but expert airmen say that the Shenandoah is better suited for such service. The Shenandoah is now deflated in her hangar at Lakehurst, but she could be conditioned in short order and probably reach the base long before the arrival of the Patoka. The Shenandoah is given preference in discussions of possible relief work because she is regarded as of sturdier build than the Los Angeles, which has developed structural weaknesses since her memorable voyage across the Atlantic.

Disko is 1,200 miles from the Pole. The Shenandoah has a cruising radius of 4,000 miles and would have the support of the Patoka and supplies for a long search in the Artic.

Upon the return to the department tomorrow of Secretary Wilbur consideration will be given a probable request of the navy for the up an expedition for the relief of Amundsen. It is believed that Secretary Wilbur will direct that arrangements be perfected to put the navy in a state of preparedness in case it is asked to send a party in search of Amundsen and his comrades.

Airship Crews Eager to Go.

NAVAL AIR STATION, Lakehurst, N. J., May 25.—Officers and enlisted men of the crews of the naval dirigibles Los Angeles and Shenandoah were discussing with considerable animation tonight the possibility of either of the dirigibles being sent to the North Pole to search for the Amundsen polar expedition. The fact that no official recognition of such an exploit had come from Washington did not lessen the enthusiasm of the men, all of whom expressed anxiety to be members of the relief expedition, if one is to be sent.

Officers at the station thought the trip could be made from Lakehurst, using the Patoka as base.

"June is the best month of all for such an expedition," they said. "It is during June that weather conditions are best in the Arctic.

"Either the Shenandoah or the Los Angeles could fly to Etah or Spitzberger, load up to capacity there with either helium or hydrogen from tanks on the tender and then set out for the Pole, in search of the Amundsen party."

Asked what the dirigible could do to aid the Amundsen expedition, the officers said it could at least provide the six men with provisions and might even pick them up by flying low and dropping rope ladders for them to mount to the control car.

Either of the dirigibles could cruise from 3,000 to 4,000 miles, using helium gas, without refueling.

Explorers Are Still Optimistic.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—Increasing general anxiety is felt over the continued absence of news from Amundsen and his companions, but it is noteworthy that polar explorers are still inclined to be hopeful, and Nansen is quoted in a Copenhagen dispatch as saying there is absolutely no reason for anxiety, Amundsen being a man capable of surmounting the most difficult obstacles. It would appear that the more optimistic feeling is entertained by those personally acquainted with polar regions, based on the assumption that Amundsen made a safe landing from his flying boats and will undertake a long trek of some 400 or more miles from the region of the North Pole to the nearest land, a contingency for which every preparation possible was made.

Weather conditions, says a Copenhagen dispatch, are variously interpreted but seem mainly to point to the probability of Amundsen having succeeded in reaching the North Pole and then finding himself unable to being the return flight has been led to descend en route to await clearer atmospheric conditions in North Spitzbergen.

It is even suggested in Copenhagen that Amundsen may have landed on North Eastland Island, from whence he has been unable to establish communication with King's Bay.

Captain C. L. B. Ellis, airman, who hitherto has held the world's record for the nearest approach to the North Pole by an airplane, a feat accomplished by the Oxford expedition last year, today expressed the conviction that Amundsen had reached the Pole, abandoned his planes and was now making his way back across the ice. Captain Ellis said:

"Amundsen is safe, I do not think he could ever have seriously hoped to return by air. The only real landing places for his flying boats are lanes in the ice and the gaps in the huge ice-field as big as streets with water in the bottom, and these lanes are treacherous things. A shift in the wind would close them up in half an hour and airplanes would be crushed to a pulp by the ice.

"Amundsen with his two planes must have landed his food and his scientific instruments and then abandoned his machines. At this moment he is probably on his three-month journey back across 500 miles of dangerous ice toward Spitzbergen.

"It is a desperate journey over mountains of ice, for there is not a square foot of solid land between the Pole and Spitzbergen and not a living soul in all those wastes, but there is plenty of food, and his party have guns with them with which they can kill wild things of the Arctic.

"No news I think is comparatively good news. If one of the machines had met with disaster the other would have returned. If they had found it impossible to land at all, they would have returned.

"There is an alternative theory. Amundsen may have miscalculated the amount of petrol he required. The air at the top of the world is very thin and more petrol is needed to propel an airplane to the North Pole than is needed in other parts of the world. If he decided not to land at the Pole and then found on his return journey his petrol was failing, he would probably come down at Liefde Bay, which at this time of year would be open in places. He would then get to King's Harbor by sledge."

Grettir Algarsson, young explorer, who had intended rivaling Amundsen by attempting to reach the North Pole in a dirigible which has been specially constructed for him in England is now hurrying preparations to help rather than outdo Amundsen. In an interview with the Daily Express he declares that probably one of Amundsen's machines was forced to land on the ice and the second went to its help, wrecking both. In that case he doubts whether Amundsen carried enough supplies to reach Cape Columbia.

"The most hopeful conjecture," said Algarsson, "is that Amundsen reached some spot where he is safe but out of communication. Possibly he landed at the Pole and is waiting to leave again. This is unlikely, judging by his published plans, which contemplated a stay of only twenty-four hours at most.

"What I am afraid is that one of the machines has got into difficulties and the other boat made a mistake in landing to render assistance, thereby most probably crashing both machines. I am biased against heavier than air craft as my own expedition has decided in favor of lighter than air machines. The landing speed of Amundsen's class of machines is in the neighborhood of sixty miles an hour, and those most ignorant of Arctic conditions can appreciate what it means to land on rough ice at this speed, particularly when one takes into account the extreme difficulty of judging ice surface from the air.

"In the event of Amundsen's having reached the pole and crashing, the march back to the nearest land is fraught with great danger. In his published plans it was stated Amundsen had thirty days' food with him and I do not think at this season he can reach Cape Columbia in thirty days. I am basing my opinion on the difficulty Nansen had in his famous march from the fram.

"The delay of my expedition is due to the fact that the new gas bag constructed by designers would not lift the necessary weight. Naturally, we are rushing our preparations to the limit so that if necessary we can render assistance to Amundsen. If it is certain Amundsen is in trouble we may attempt to save time by flying the airship right up to the Arctic by way of various coasts instead of carrying it to Spitzbergen in our ship, the Iceland. The race is still there, but competitors now are MacMillan of the American expedition and myself of the British, and the stake is who shall be first to reach Amundsen."

MACMILLAN EXPLAINS HIS PLAN OF SEARCH

Will Visit Food Bases That Amundsen Might Be Expected to Use.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., May 25.—There is no reason for believing, as yet, that Roald Amundsen is lost simply because he has not been heard from, declared Lieut. Commander Donald B. MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, today. According to MacMillan, the discoverer of the South Pole still has a good chance of coming through in safety, although it may be weeks and even months before he is heard from. MacMillan said that if conditions in the vicinity of the North Pole were unfavorable for making observations, Amundsen would undoubtedly want to remain until he could get the position of the sun. If he found land on his journey, he might be delaying his return to explore it to some extent.

The MacMillan expedition leaves Wiscasset on June 20, and if there is still no news from Amundsen by the time the expedition reaches the Arctic region, MacMillan's first object will be to go to the relief of the South Pole discoverer.

Amundsen's plans, according to published reports, MacMillan explained today, were, in case of accident, to retreat toward Cape Columbia. Here MacMillan deposited a cache of food at Ward Hunt Island, Cape Columbia, on the Peary North Pole expedition in 1909. This is 413 miles from the North Pole.

If Amundsen finds the cache, which he undoubtedly would, it would give him a two weeks' supply of food with which he could continue his trip to Fort Conger, at Lady Franklin Bay, ninety miles away. The old buildings of the Greely expedition still remain there, and here Amundsen would find an ample supply of food in the shape of musk oxen, ducks and other animals and birds. There is also an abundance of coal which could be used for fuel.

If, upon arriving at Etah, MacMillan finds that nothing has been heard from Amundsen, he will immediately go to Lady Franklin Bay by airship, only two hours' run, and if he is not there will continue on to Cape Columbia and search for him there. If no trace of him can be found at either place, there would be little further that MacMillan could do, and he would then start to carry out the original plans of his expedition.

FUNDS ARE RAISED FOR RELIEF PARTY

Hans Nansen and Haakon Hammer Plan to Send Airplane After Amundsen.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 25 (AP).—Hans Nansen of the First National Bank of San Diego, a nephew of the noted explorer, Fridtx of Nasen, announced here today that he was raising the funds to finance an expedition for the relief of Amundsen and was certain his plans would be a success.

Nansen said that he was in communication with Haakon H. Hammer, an associate of Amundsen in previous Polar ventures, who now is recuperating from eye trouble at Los Angeles, and that he had assured Hammer he was virtually certain of raising funds to finance the program to go to Amundsen's assistance if the explorer is not located within twenty-four hours.

LOS ANGELES, May 25 (AP).—Haakon H. Hammer, leader of the expedition to Amundsen's relief in 1923, who is at present residing in Hollywood and is organizing a second expedition to rescue the Norwegian explorer if he is not heard from by tomorrow night, confirmed the statement of Hans Nasen of San Diego, that the latter was arranging to finance such an expedition.

Hammer on Saturday telegraphed Admiral W. H. Moffett, Chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics at Washington, D. C., asking for the services of Lieutenant Ralph Davison, U. S. Navy, as navigator for the airplane relief party. Davison is at present on duty on the airplane carrier Langley in Hawaiian waters.

Hammer said that there is a plane available in Switzerland for a dash by air to the relief of Amundsen and that he could obtain it fully equipped on two weeks' notice.

TRUST AMUNDSEN'S SKILL.

Philadelphia Scientists Say There Is No Reason to Fear for His Safety.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—Amundsen's chances of coming out of the polar regions alive are good, even should his planes be wrecked and his food supply fail. That is the opinion of scientists here and of officers of the Philadelphia Geographical Society, who believe the explorer is experienced enough to reckon with the possible mishaps that might befall him.

"It is a little premature to say just what the fate of Amundsen probably will be," Henry G. Bryant, Vice President of the Geographical Society, said today. "I think we should give the man a little leeway before we become alarmed about his fate. His chances for living in the north polar regions are good. He got through the South Pole region, and that is worse than the section he is exploring now. He will be able to subsist on fish if his food supply gives out. His experience with the conditions he is likely to meet is wide, and he surely has taken enough food to last long.

"The flight will be a feather in the cap of aviation, but what it will contribute to science is somewhat vague. If the party was stopping at various points it could take soundings and do other work the results of which would be most valuable additions to the knowledge of that part of the globe. One of the most important things the party could determine would be whether that northern basin is deep or shallow. The present assumption is that it is shallow."

Dr. Monroe B. Snyder said it was almost impossible to divine the weather conditions facing Amundsen. Weather conditions, he added, would play a large part in the success or failure of the expedition.

"Personally I think all thoughtful persons, especially those versed in science, feel that the whole proposition is somewhat foolhardy," Dr. Snyder added.

"There is no need for great anxiety over the fate of this expedition," Dr. Paul J. Sartain, another officer of the Geographical Society, said. "Amundsen is too efficient and careful a man to start out on such a journey without being prepared for the worst.

"A matter of seventy-two hours in an exploration expedition is nothing. We may not hear from him for longer stretches of time, but his perishing for want of food and water is possible but not probable."

SAYS AMUNDSEN AGAIN WILL SURPRISE WORLD

Friend of the Explorer Believes He Is Safe and Will Be Found Later at Cape Columbia.

The belief that the Amundsen expedition had discovered land near the North Pole and had stopped there to make observations was expressed yesterday by Captain Jen Munthe Cappelen of White, Weld & Co., 14 Wall Street, who has known Amundsen for many years. Captain Cappelen was formerly District Officer of the Norwegian Naval Station at Horten. In 1909 he received Amundsen's polar expedition ship, the Fram, in the navy yards for a thorough overhauling.

"I know Amundsen well, and I know he is a man who always does the unexpected thing," said Captain Cappelen. "Didn't he tell us that he was going to make a trip to the North Pole when he was outfitting for his expedition to the South Pole. We were all surprised when Amundsen sailed south, and still more surprised when we learned of his success in reaching the South Pole.

"This is the way he does things. He likes to create surprises. Amundsen and his party started off in fine weather. When they came near the North Pole, where it is all water or ice, as Peary proved, they undoubtedly kept on flying, and somewhere about 150 or 200 miles beyond their goal they must have sighted land.

"There have been many explorers who have asserted that there was a continent near the North Pole in the direction of Point Barrow. It is my belief that Amundsen and his companions sighted that continent and landed there.

"In that case we should not expect to hear from them for weeks. They had guns and ammunition, in addition to a supply of food for thirty days. They could well afford to land on any continent that may have been sighted. That's what Amundsen wanted to do. He set out to discover land. And if he sighted any it is not logical to suppose that he would have continued in flight without stopping to make a study of his discovery.

"The probability is that Amundsen and his party picked a spot on the polar continent to land and run up the flag of his country. While they may stay there for weeks, they may stay there for only a few days.

"In considering his return flight, I believe that Amundsen, after reaching his goal, would not undertake to continue on to Point Barrow. Before reaching the North Pole he would have flown approximately 550 miles over the air line between the Pole and Alaska beachart in THE NEW YORK TIMES of today. To add to that distance probably 200 or 250 miles which he covered on the line between the pole and Alaska before he sighted a polar continent, and you have a total of approximately 800 miles.

"By the time Amundsen had flown 800 miles he would have used up a large part of his fuel. In view of the heavy fuel consumption he must have made before he sighted land in the north polar region, it doesn't seem probable that he would have undertaken to make another hope from there to Point Barrow, a distance of approximately 1,000 miles.

"No, I believe that Amundsen and his associates landed on the continent they found near the pole. Some of them made minor repairs and adjustments to the planes while other members of the party were making scientific observations. Then, when they came to check up their fuel supplies, they found that the best thing to do was to take the shortest route for the return trip.

"That route, as shown by THE TIMES map this morning, lies between the North Pole and Cape Columbia, on the northernmost tip of Grant Land. The distance is approximately 420 miles.

"I am convinced that they chose that route for the return flight not only because it was the shortest, and because they had to conserve their gasoline, but also because she two high peaks that mark Cape Columbia would make it easy for Amundsen's pilots to find their place of landing.

"Now, we have the Captain Donald B. MacMillan expedition starting for Greenland in June. I firmly believe that Captain MacMillan will find the party of Captain Amundsen safely camped at Cape Columbia or elsewhere in Ellesmere Land. They will be found there with one, or both, of their airplanes."

Captain Cappelen was asked what he thought of the possibility of a smash destroying the Amundsen planes, and he said:

"All this talk about a smash—I don't think there is anything in it. Amundsen is such a cautious man. He would not have risked making a landing until he was pretty sure of conditions and, don't forget, he had the finest kind of planes and the most expert pilots available. There isn't a chance that Amundsen would attempt to make a landing if he didn't see a safe place to land."

Captain Cappelen said he chanced to see Amundsen in London a year ago. It was about the time he abandoned his attempt to make the transpolar flight from Point Barrow. Captains Cappelen and Amundsen went to lunch together and the explorer told of his plans to fly across the north polar region. He said Amundsen at all times was confident of the success of his expedition.

Anthony Fiala, who led the Ziegler expedition into the Arctic in 1903, 1904 and 1905, said yesterday that he still felt no alarm over the absence of messages from Amundsen and his party.

"The length of their absence will all depend on how interesting the trip is," said Mr. Fiala. "If they have discovered land near the North Pole and count on making observations to determine the exact center of the earth, they may be there for several weeks.

"Did you say crashed?"

"By no means, I said cached," explained Mr. Fiala.

NEW VACCINATION STATIONS PLANNED

CITIZENS HELPING DOCTORS

Appeal for All to Undergo Preventive Treatment Brings Rush of Applications.

With eight new cases of smallpox reported yesterday in Nassau County, the disease made its appearance in Manhattan. Health Commissioner Monaghan received word that a case of smallpox was reported in Harlem Hospital. He said the patient was a negress and that he understood she was suffering from a mild type of the disease.

At the same time health authorities of Nassau began establishing additional clinics for vaccination. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company announced that it had sent 359 of its agents and sixteen nurses into the district to distribute a pamphlet on the importance of vaccination.

The total number of cases in North Hempstead Township, including the villages of Great Neck, Great Neck Station, Port Washington, Manhasset and smaller communities, has mounted to thirty-three over the week-end, according to Dr. Charles A. Steurer, Health Officer of the township. Dr. Steurer said that the citizens of the communities were responding intelligently to the call for general vaccination.

The smallpox scare has spread to Glen Cove, where the Summer places of J. Pierpont Morgan, John W. Davis, former Democratic candidate for President, and many other prominent persons are located. The residents of Glen Cove are particularly concerned over the visit to their village last Friday evening of several hundred persons from infected districts, who attended an elocution contest in the Glen Cove High School.

Glen Cove Offers Hospital.

The Glen Cove Medical Association yesterday offered the facilities of the community hospital to Dr. Joseph B. Connelly, Glen Cove Public Health Officer, for a vaccination clinic. Dr. Connelly said he would establish two clinics to serve Sea Cliff, Locust Valley, Glenwood and Glen Head.

Dr. Steurer announced that the establishment of new clinics was to insure the vaccination of those persons who might not feel able to pay a physician's fee. He said he would establish clinics at the following places:

Manhasset Health League headquarters, Mitchel Avenue, Manhasset; Westbury Neighborhood House, Main Street, Westbury; Village Welfare Rooms, Main Street, Port Washington; Rosiyn Neighborhood House, School Street, Roslyn, and North Roslyn Neighborhood House, Main Street, Bull's Head.

Dr. J. D. Hall, Health Officer of Oyster Bay, said no case had been reported in his jurisdiction, but as a precaution, the School Board of Oyster Bay had asked the children who had not been vaccinated within the last five years to get vaccinated.

The Nassau County Medical Society will hold its monthly meeting tonight at the Hempstead Country Club. In view of the epidemic it has decided to devote the entire session to a discussion of methods of prevention, defense and control.

7,000 Were Vaccinated.

In all the towns of North Hempstead Township the doctors are rushed with applications for vaccinations. Each doctor has a long waiting list. Yesterday morning the total vaccinations in the township aggregated 7,000, showing a gain of more than 3,000 over the week-end.

After two new cases in Manhasset the attendance at the village school was less than half. The decrease was due not only to the scare from the epidemic but to the announcement by the School Board that all pupils who were not vaccinated by yesterday would be suspended for twenty days.

At the office of Dr. John H. Barry, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent in charge of Queens, it was said that no cases of smallpox had been reported in Queens up to Sunday night. He explained that the case reported by the Flushing Hospital was an old one.

Dr. Monaghan in the afternoon conferred with Dr. Barry and Dr. Victor Mildenberg, Borough Chief of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases of Queens. Dr. Monaghan announced that physicians and nurses of the Department of Health had started their intensive campaign of vaccination in that part of the Borough of Queens which is contiguous to the infected districts of Nassau County.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's decision to take a hand in the fight to stop the spread of the disease was explained in part as follows:

"Experience in various cities is cited to prove the protective power of vaccination. In Detroit, 1,508 cases and 140 deaths from smallpox occurred in the first six months of 1924. No individual who had been successfully vaccinated within the last five years contracted smallpox. More than 800,000 people were vaccinated in this one city to stop the epidemic.

"Of 154 deaths in Minnesota from January to November, 1924, none of the victims had been successfully vaccinated within the last seven years; 127 of those dying had never been successfully vaccinated. In States where vaccination is neglected, smallpox is deadly.

SOFIA, May 25 (AP).—King Boris of Bulgaria, who opposes capital punishment, today confirmed the death sentences of three men who took part in the Sveti Kral Cathedral bombing, in which 160 people were killed. These are the first death sentences King Boris ever has approved. He said the plot justified it.

The three men are Peter Zadgorski, sacristan of the cathedral; Marco Friedmann and Georgi Koeff.

Now that King Boris has broken his rule of never sanctioning the death penalty, the State Prosecutors hope he will approve other death sentences of Bolshevist plotters who sought to overthrow him.

CHANGE IN JAPAN CURRENT.

Ship's Report Indicates Influence of the Oyashiwo Current.

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—A change in the Japan Current 500 miles east of Japan was reported to the Navy Hydrographic Office today, and it was believed here to be comparable to the change recently observed in the Humboldt Current off the northwest coast of South America.

The steamship India Arrow reported the change, which indicated that the current had been invaded by the Oyashiwo, ordinarily a weak counter current, setting southwestward between the Japanese coast and the Japan Current, and whose influence seldom reaches below the thirty-eighth parallel of latitude.

The report said that on April 19, when in latitude 36 north, longitude 146 east, the India Arrow encountered a current setting approximately 150 degrees with a drift of one-half a knot. The temperature of the sea water dropped suddenly from 66 degrees to 40 degrees and changed in color from blue-green to dark olive green. The temperature of the air dropped from 64 degrees to 56 degrees.

Five hours later the temperature of the sea water began to rise, and in three more hours had risen again to 66 degrees in latitude 37 north, longitude 148 east.

ROCKEFELLER JR. BUYS PLOT UPTOWN

WOULD MEET CONDITIONS

Purchase of the block front on Morningside Drive from 117th to 118th Street has been made by John D. Rockefeller Jr., it was learned yesterday, as the probable site for the new Park Avenue Baptist Church to comply with one of the conditions laid down by the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick when he received the call last week to become pastor of that church, succeeding Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin. The property was purchased on May 1 and is considered the logical location for the new "edifice near Columbia University" asked for by Dr. Fosdick.

The site comprises an entire block front overlooking Morningside Park with a frontage on the Drive of 201.10 feet and a depth on the side streets of 125 feet. It was purchased in the name of the Empire Mortgage Company, a real estate holding company for the Rockefellers, through William A. White & Sons, real estate brokers, of 46 Cedar Street.

Harry Hall, Vice President of William A. White & Sons, admitted last night that the property had been purchased through his firm for Mr. Rockefeller, but said that he was not at liberty to say that it had been definitely selected as the site of the new Park Avenue Baptist Church.

Hague Court and New University Court, two apartment houses in four seven-story units, known as 70 to 74 Morningside Drive, occupy the site. In the neighborhood the property has been talked of as the site for the new edifice and tenants in the apartments said they had been asked to move out by the first of June. Mrs. Hall said last night that the tenants had not been asked to move out the first of the month, as the leases on the property do not expire until Oct. 1.

In answer to the recent call of the Park Avenue Baptist Church to become its pastor Dr. Fosdick set forth several conditions of his acceptance. These provided that the church build an edifice near Columbia University, a skyscraper affair on the plans and idea of Dr. Christian F. Reisner's Broadway Temple, with living quarters, clubrooms and other institutional figures; that the church shall not insist upon that principle of Baptist faith which requires baptism by immersion, and that the church open its membership to all Christians, becoming a place of worship for all denominations irrespective of dogma.

Last week the Park Avenue Baptist Church voted to accept the terms of Dr. Fosdick after opposition had been expressed by seventeen members of the congregation.

No architectural plans for the new church have been drawn, but it has been decided to make the new auditorium large enough for an audience of from 2,000 to 3,000 persons. The site is one of the largest available plots for improvement in the immediate vicinity of Columbia University. It was sold by the Major Realty Corporation and is assessed for taxation purposes at $610,000, according to the 1924 rolls.

It could not be confirmed last night through officials of the Park Avenue Baptist Church whether this block front had been definitely selected as the site for the new edifice. Elmer E. Sanborn, a deacon, said he was not familiar with the plans to acquire a new church location. He said it was not likely that the committee arranging the purchase would be willing at this time to announce that a definite site had been agreed upon. At the home of Edward L. Ballard, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Church, it was said Mr. Ballard was dining with Mr. Rockefeller.

$70,000 MORE INVESTED IN BROADWAY TEMPLE

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Chelsea Methodist Church, 178th Street and Fort Washington Avenue, obtained $70,000 yesterday of the $300,000 he needed to claim the $250,000 which John D. Rockefeller Jr. will invest in the proposed $4,000,000 Broadway Temple to go up on Washington Heights. The remaining $230,000 must be raised by June 1 next. Dr. Reisner now has $1,770,000 and he is required to have $2,000,000 worth of bonds sold to claim the Rockefeller investment.

Dr. Reisner sold the $70,000 worth of bonds in blocks of $500 to $10,000 at a luncheon given at the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway, to fifty prominent Methodist laymen. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, resident Methodist Bishop in New York, was the host.

The presiding officer was General Samuel McRoberts, Chairman of the Board of the Chatham and Phenix National Bank, and he subscribed $10,000. He had already invested heavily. Others who invested $10,000 were Arthur J. Baldwin, Walter R. Comfort and R. W. Gwinn. There was one subscription for $5,000. Bishop Edgar Blake of Paris, through Dr. Reisner, invested $500 in addition to a former subscription.

The speakers all took for their topic "What Shall We Do to Help?" Bishop Wilson warmly endorsed the temple project and praised Dr. Reisner for his vision, courage and unceasing labors.

Dr. Reisner pleaded for support by every Methodist minister and laymen in New York and vicinity. "We have to throw ourselves upon the city to raise the balance in order to claim Mr. Rockefeller's magnificent offer," he added.

"The other day Mr. Rockefeller spent two hours looking at our plans. Then he came back bringing Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick with him, and they spent two hours and a half studying them. Dr. Reisner recalled that Dr. Fosdick had made it one of the conditions of considering the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist Church that the congregation would build a great temple near Columbia University, similar to the Broadway Temple.

Dr. Reisner quoted the Right Rev. Arthur S. Lloyd, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, in saying that if people knew about the project they would invest in the bonds.

A committee was appointed to communicate with other laymen and urge them to join in the final drive. Its membership consists of: Senator Royal S. Copeland, who is an officer in St. Andrew's Methodist Church, West Seventy-sixth Street; C. R. Saul, S. S. Kresge, F. L. Reed and W. S. Downes.

278 KILLED, 526 HURT IN JAPANESE QUAKE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINOSAKI, May 25.—The damage caused by Saturday's earthquake was confined within sharply marked areas. Although the shock was felt strongly 100 miles from here, there are no signs of damage ten miles from the town.

Out of the 2,000 houses whereof the town consisted, only one stone building remains.

So far 127 charred bodies have been recovered.

This attractive hot springs resort consisted principally of one very long and very narrow street, lined with shops, between the river and the precipitous hillside. The houses fell into the street pinning down the people who ran out. Other persons who began to climb the hillside, but were unable to reach the summit, later fell victims to the whirlwinds of flames which ignited the trees.

Of the six bath houses four collapsed and everybody who was bathing at the time was killed.

The greatest difficulty is being experienced in ascertaining the number of casualties owing to the large number of strangers who were visiting the place for the cure.

Already rebuilding has begun. Beautiful weather is lightening the hardships of the refugees. Most of the refugees are in a camp, and some are in boats.

Firemen and 500 sailors from the Maizuru dockyard are clearing up the wreckage and collecting the bodies. Many of the injured were taken to the Toy-Oka Hospital, which escaped the flames, although half of Toy-Oka was burned.

OSAKA, May 25 (AP).—An official Prefectural report today from Toyo-Oka, Kinosaki and Minato villages shows that 278 persons were killed and 526 injured as a result of earthquake and fire on Saturday. The same report shows that 444 houses collapsed as a result of the earthquake and 2,324 houses were destroyed by fire. The detailed figures follow:

MODERNISTS WIN IN WARM CONTEST

had as yet been suggested, that the proposal was merely a paper in the hands of the Committee on Church Cooperation.

Dr. Clarence E. Macartney, former Moderator and the stormy petrel of the fighting Fundamentalists, attacked the report and spoke for the Kirkland amendment. He declared it was beyond the tradition and policy of the Presbyterian Church to encourage any Presbytery to go ahead and work out a plan of union without the Church as a whole laying down principles on which union should be effected.

Dr. Macartney interpreted the report to mean that the Presbyterian Church would surrender its creedal foundations and its policy of independence if it accepted the resolution offered by Dr. Stevenson's committee. Such a course, he said, meant that the Presbyterian Church would dissolve and the members would enter the Congregational Church as individuals or that the Congregational Church would dissolve and its members would enter the Presbyterian Church as individuals. While the measure sounded like unity, Dr. Macartney asserted it really was divisive, and he predicted that it "would split the Presbyterian Church wide open."

Would Unite Presbyterians First.

The former Moderator suggested that the first duty of the Presbyterian Church was to unite with the United Presbyterian and the Reform Presbyterian Churches. The present proposal, he asserted, was similar to the plan of 1801, which resulted in a schism, "and this will result in a schism again," he added. He would leave it to the most liberal member of the Presbytery of New York, he said, if it were not true that the Congregational Church was drifting, "perhaps slowly, perhaps rapidly, from the standards of the Presbyterian Church."

Dr. Macartney asserted that the union of Presbyterian and other churches in Canada had resulted in a great tragedy.

The Rev. J. Duncan Harley of Montana declared that the estimate of Dr. Macartney concerning the union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches of Canada was "a falsehood," and asserted there was no movement as significant as the Canadian movement for union.

"If this is to be the stand of the Presbyterian Church," he declared, referring to the attitude of Dr. Macartney, "then I, for one, want to leave the Presbyterian Church and join a Christian Church."

The Rev. Dr. John F. Carson of Brooklyn favored the union of the churches of all denominations, but "not by way of the back door." In opposing the resolution for union he said the Presbyterian Church "would become the ridicule of mankind if for the sake of nominal union it would minimize our essential principles in doctrine and polity."

The Rev. Dr. Joel M. Hayden of Cleveland, asserted that the Presbyterian Church stood on a highway and had to choose whether it was interested in perpetuating a denomination or in the living Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Dr. Stevenson, for the Committee on Church Cooperation, told the Assembly that the substitute amendment would invite the Congregationalists to become good orthodox Presbyterians. He did not believe this was fair, nor would he have the Congregational Church accept the union with the Presbyterian on condition that the latter's members become orthodox Congregationalists. Union, he said, was "a matter of give and take."

The amendment was then put to the Assembly and defeated by an overwhelmingly viva voce vote. Then the original motion was adopted.

Seeks Election by Presbyteries.

The Assembly adopted a resolution asking the General Council to report some method of electing a Moderator by the Presbyteries, thus taking the election out of politics.

The Standing Committee on Christian Education recommended that the Assembly "urge all Presbyterians to remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, and hereby emphatically condemn commercial Sunday amusements and sports and all other unnecessary business." One commissioner sought to have the committee include a ban on Sunday newspapers, but his amendment was lost amid some laughter.

The committee commended the attitude of President Coolidge on prohibition, the work of the Coast Guard, the fidelity of Commissioner Haynes and the prosecuting of offenders by the Department of Justice. The committee added:

"We urge the continued campaign of education in behalf of law observance and law enforcement and the fixing of a minimum penalty for violation of the national prohibition act, which will prevent judges from imposing petty fines, as some have done."

It was voted to hold next year's General Assembly in Baltimore.

CONVICT THE FOURTH SHATTUCK ROBBER

Captured in France in Hunt Led by Shattuck—Identified by Former Comrades.

Paul Camilieri, alias "the Jockey," was found guilty in Judge Rosalsky's part of General Sessions last evening of participating in the hold-up in the home of Albert R. Shattuck, the retired banker at 19 Washington Square North, and theft of gems worth $85,000 on Sunday afternoon, April 2, 1922. He was the last of the four Shattuck robbers to be convicted. They looted the Shattuck home, after driving the banker, his wife and seven servants into an old wine vault in the cellar, in which the victims narrowly escaped suffocation. Mr. Shattuck freed himself and the others by unscrewing the lock on the vault door with the blade of a pocketknife, after Mrs. Shattuck and several of the servants had fainted.

Camilieri, who could receive a maximum term of sixty years' imprisonment, will be sentenced on Thursday. He was arrested in France about a year ago, after a search led in person by Mr. Shattuck. Gabriel Alphonse Mouray, formerly a butler in the Shattuck home here, and who was the leader of the robber quartet, had been arrested in Paris in connection with the robbery. He and Camilieri had escaped the police dragnet for them in this country. Mouray, soon after his arrival in France, was sentenced to Devil's Island on a murder conviction, but escaped. He was wounded during an encounter with gendarmes, who did not know that he was a fugitive from the French penal colony at the time.

After a trial in France for the Shattuck hold-up on evidence furnished by District Attorney Banton, Mouray was convicted. His sentence to be put to death by the guillotine subsequently was commuted to life imprisonment on the plea of the aged banker and his wife.

Camilieri then was brought to this country in irons by Detective Sergeant James J. McCoy of Inspector Coughlin's staff, who had accompanied Assistant District Attorney Owen W. Bohan to France to aid the authorities there at the Mouray trial. The prisoner denied ever having been in this country before. Mrs. Shattuck, shortly before her departure for the Shattuck home in France last Summer, identified Camilieri on his first arraignment before Judge Rosalsky for pleading to the indictment against him. Her testimony, taken at a special proceeding, was read into the record at Camilieri's trial. Her husband was unable to identify Camilieri when Mr. Bohan called him to the witness stand last week.

Mrs. Shattuck's identification was corroborated by Moise Bagnoli and Horace Cruciani, alias Eugene Diaset, who had been arrested soon after the hold-up and sentenced to from forty to sixty years each by Judge Rosalsky after they had pleaded guilty. They were brought from Sing Sing to testify for the prosecution. They swore that Camilieri was Mouray's chief lieutenant in the robbery plot. They said the robbery was planned in a restaurant in Seventh Avenue near Twenty-sixth Street, and that Camilieri accompanied Mouray on several trips to Washington Square Park when the plans for the Shattuck hold-up were being worked out.

Camilieri, in giving his pedigree, said he was 35 years old, and was born in Gibraltar. He admitted that he had been convicted five times in France for larceny and other offenses.

Niagara Falls Glows Under Electric Lights As Vast Beams of Colors Flash Upon It

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., May 25.—The ocean of water that pours down from Lake Erie over the falls of Niagara was illuminated tonight by electric light of 1,300,000,000 candle power, generated by its own power. It made a picture that will linger in the memory of the thousands who looked upon the spectacle of the tumbling waters illuminated by the most powerful lights ever directed on a river.

On top of an old spillway in Victoria Park on the Canadian side, midway between the Horseshoe and the American Falls, a battery of twenty-four 36-inch Ryan scintillators had been placed, under the direction of W. D'Arcy Ryan, illuminating engineer of the General Electric Company. When night settled the lights were turned on. The initial beams were of white light, and the falls took on the appearance of milk pouring from the higher to the lower level.

As the display progressed color screens were brought into service. There were red, orange, green, blue and violet of the spectrum colors and deep red and magenta of the special colors, while the soft colors were pale blue, orange and rose. A change of screens made the falls look like a torrent of blood. Another change gave an orange hue to the falling waters, which turned to green with another shifting of screens.

A blending of colors featured the Aurora Borealis, and on June 8, when the climax of effect is expected to be reached, it is promised that Niagara will be shown under light corresponding to that during the recent total eclipse. There will be celebrations on both sides of the river at that time, for the illumination of the Falls is now an international pleasure.

The illumination of tonight was in special observance of Victoria Day, and the weirdness about the falls and gorge was intensified by a display of fireworks on the Canadian side. There were visitors from all parts of Ontario and Western New York.

EXPLAINS HIS DUAL ROLE.

Dr. Hastings Says He Wanted to Forget Asylum and Love Affair.

Special to The New York Times.

ERIE, Pa., May 25.—Dr. Chester Hastings of New York City, who on Sunday was discovered here in the rôle of John Hugh, toy maker, when he was traced as the heir to $50,000 left him by his mother, Mrs. Caroline Hastings, of Ithaca, N. Y., today attributed his masquerade to his desire to forget his seven years' confinement in an asylum and a love affair with a Washington girl, which he said was ended by his parents' objections.

Hastings' previous assertion that he was "happy" as John Hugh was disproved when the sheriff walked into his small toy shop today to attach a notice of public auction because of the proprietor's failure to pay his rent. The sale, set for Thursday, was prevented by a reporter, who used his influence to have it deferred until Hastings has had an opportunity to get his bequest.

tions are proceeding in the Eastern Zone of the Protectorate for an approaching operation with a view to capturing the stronghold of the rebel tribesmen at Alhucemas.

Both military and naval aviators have received orders to report the number of airplanes available about the middle of June for participation in the bombardment, but it is generally believed that the activities will not begin until later.

At the same time large numbers of tribesmen are being recruited in order to strengthen the irregular native contingents, which, according to the intention, will be employed as attacking forces with the support of the Foreign Legion.

The military men say that the preliminary plan of attack, as drafted, indicates that landing parties will be disembarked in the vicinity of Atkamara after intense artillery preparation from warships and batteries, assisted by airplanes amply supplied with gas bombs.

LONDON, May 25 (AP).—The Tangier correspondent of The Westminster Gazette says he learns that France has been promised an important interest in the Alhucemas mines in return for cooperation with Spain against the Riffians.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 25.—Because the negotiations with Spain in regard to the Riff have not been completed, the Chamber, at the first meeting of the session today, adjourned the discussion of Moroccan affairs until Wednesday.

The decision was taken at the last minute when Deputy Malby, who has been conducting the negotiations with the approval of Premier Painlevé, informed the Radical group that in his opinion it would be best to delay the debate until everything had been signed and settled.

Various interpretations are being put on this action, some naturally pessimistic and others of a quite different character, while it is being whispered in the lobbies that the Government is anxious not to divulge the accord until the consequent military preparations have been made.

Though the opening of the Chamber was in this way deprived of the spectacular outburst which was expected, it was not without disturbance. Twenty-nine Communists on the extreme Left kept up an almost continuous interruption during the few minute of the debate as to what should be done, with cries of "Down with war!"

M. Painlevé declared he would leave it to the Chamber to fix the date for the two interpellations by the Communist Deputy Doriot and the Socialist leader Renaudel, but it had been already understood by the majority that a vote should be cast for Wednesday. For this date the Government obtained a majority of 312 to 178, which indicates fairly well its strength in the Chamber.

Both M. Malvy and the Government are keeping a close secret of the progress of the negotiations with Madrid. Whether they will be of any value is still in considerable doubt. Even among M. Malvy's political friends there is a tendency to think that too much importance has been attached to what he has accomplished.

On Wednesday, when the debate is scheduled to open, Finance Minister Caillaux will place before the House the Government's request for an appropriation of 20,000,000 francs for the war, and the debate will in this way take on a general character and will clear up the political situation.

Today the Socialists and the Radicals held several long conferences with the Ministers to examine the situation and define their position. These conferences were not without incident. With greater frankness than has yet been shown in official statements Premier Painlevé reviewed the seriousness of the situation.

Today's news that half a dozen blockhouses are being evacuated in the Taouna district because it is impossible to prevent them from being repeatedly surrounded has made a somewhat disagreeable impression despite the official statement that it is being done in order to relieve mobile columns for the task of constantly clearing this ground.

It is only four days since the Taounat Massive was recaptured and cleared, and it is difficult for the French to understand why posts should be only now withdrawn.

Would Win War or Quit Africa.

Several Deputies who spent their vacations in North Africa have returned with far from optimistic accounts of the task which must be faced, especially on the eastern end of the front near the Algerian border. Abd-el-Krim seems to be massing his forces for an attack in the direction of the railway line to Fez near Kiffane. There the group under Colonel Cambal has been reinforced from the general bodies of reinforcements which are now arriving regularly and in considerable numbers.

The Socialists are inclined to attach the blame for the gravity of the situation on Marshal Lyautey for having failed to take proper precautions against attack. That kind of wisdom after an event, however, can attach blame to many others than the Marshal and with probably greater justice.

In the face of the seriousness of the situation, there is in the chamber a disposition to forget for the moment the party quarrels which during the past year have so largely contributed to preventing progress. Even for the Socialists the situation can be summed up today as was done by one of their number in a committee meeting:

"We must go on with this war or make up our minds to the abandonment of Morocco. There is no medium course."

It is in that spirit that it is expected the party will in the end consent to vote the necessary credits. It must either do so or split the cartel.

GRAUBARD DENIES HE'S MARKET 'BOSS'

NEVER GOT MONEY, HE SAYS

Alderman Moritz Graubard of the east side, whose name had been mentioned by pushcart peddlers in connection with the investigation now being conducted in the City Hall before Magistrate George W. Simpson into alleged graft and oppression among peddlers in the open air markets, took the witness stand yesterday and denied all allegations and insinuations made against him by previous witnesses. The Alderman's counsel, Hyman Bushel, was permitted to interrogate his client before turning him over for cross-examination to Jacob Gould Schurman Jr., who is directing the inquiry.

Adolph Goldenberg had testified that he had been three times ousted from the Orchard Street market and each time had been reinstated through intercession by Alderman Graubard and that after each reinstatement the Alderman had suggested that Goldenberg "see" him. The same witness also had declared that Joseph Holdner, representing himself as a relative of Graubard, had visited the witness just before the last ouster and had told him he should "pay at least $100 of the $600 you promised Alderman Graubard" with the alternative of losing his stand.

Examining his client, Mr. Bushel asked: "Did you ever say to Goldenberg, 'Come and see me?'"

"I never did," Graubard replied.

"Did you ever receive any money from Goldenberg?"

"I never did," the Alderman repeated.

Interceding for Peddlers.

Regarding his intercessions with Deputy Commissioner of Markets Mrs. Louis Reed Welzmiller for Goldenberg, Graubard said it was customary for him to visit her almost every day in behalf of various peddlers. It was brought out that the Alderman learned it "made a hit" with Mrs. Welzmiller in interceding for peddlers to tell her of "the poor man's children who will suffer more than he will."

When Mr. Schurman cross-examined the witness he asked if Graubard were acquainted with Morris Loopesko. Loopesko is alleged to be operating several pushcarts, in violation of the Markets Department regulations, which provide for only one cart to a man. He also is head of a peddlers' association.

Graubard said he had known Loopesko several years, but when asked by the special prosecutor about the number of carts Loopesko operated the witness was hazy.

"You don't even know whether he has one cart?" Mr. Schurman queried.

"No, I don't," Graubard asserted.

Mr. Schurman then asked about a testimonial dinner given to Loopesko in the Eagle Rathskeller, on the east side, at which Graubard acted as toastmaster.

"Were any gifts given to Loopesko?" Mr. Shurman asked.

"Who asked you to be toastmaster?", Mr. Schurman asked.

"Nobody," replied the witness. "A few of us were together and decided on the dinner and I appointed myself.'"

Referring again to Goldenberg's testimony, Mr. Schurman cited a hearing held by Mrs. Welzmiller at Graubard's request because of a rumor in Orchard Street that Goldenberg attributed his return to his stand after his third ousting to the payment of $200 to "somebody."

Mr. Schurman pointed out that the rumor had not mentioned Alderman Graubard. The Alderman, however, said his name was inferred because he had helped Goldenberg regain his stand.

Referring to a statement he was quoted as having made to Goldenberg, in effect to "beware of fixers," Graubard was asked to explain what he meant by "fixers" and if there were any in the Orchard Street market. He said he knew of none in the market, but explained: "Some man might walk with me in front of the peddlers and then go to them and say, 'See, I am in right with the Alderman; if you want something I can fix it for you.'"

"Did that thought about a man walking with you just occur to you now or did you always have it?" Mr. Schurman queried.

"I always had it," said Graubard.

Denied He Was "Boss."

"Do the peddlers in Orchard Street look at you as the boss of the market?" Mr. Schurman asked.

"Some of the citizens think so," the witness said.

"No."

"Are you a power in the market?"

"Well, I'm the Alderman," was the answer.

When his testimony for the day was concluded Alderman Graubard was excused until tomorrow morning. The last witness of the day was Charles Solomon of 169 Ludlow Street, who had been accused by another peddler of having threatened expulsion from the country if the other man joined an "independent" peddlers' organization. Solomon denied the charge.

Earlier Becky Goldberg of 179 Orchard Street told of paying a man $25 on account of $75 asked for getting her stand changed. He gave her a receipt, she said, but she never saw him again.

Bessie Lapinzohn, 70 years old, of 64 Willett Street, also told of demands for money by strange men who offered to get her privileges, but she did not pay them anything.

The hearing will be resumed this morning.

3,350 STILL ACCUSED HERE AS SLACKERS

Federal Prosecutor Plans to Clear Calendars of Indictments for Draft Evasion.

An echo of the excitement that prevailed here during the World War was heard in the Federal court yesterday when United States Attorney Buckner announced that he would at once begin the work of clearing the calendars of 3,350 indictments against persons charged with evading the draft. Similar efforts were made by previous administrations, but they stopped when it was discovered that many of the men charged with evasion were at the front or in army camps awaiting shipment oversea; that some of them had been killed in battle; that others had died at home and that all track had been lost of some of the others.

Mr. Buckner asked Assistant United States Attorney Mildeberger to investigate the pending cases, so that action might be taken on each. It was suggested that the majority of the indictments would be dismissed and that efforts to proceed against the accused would be made only in cases where the offense esemed to have been flagrant. It was pointd out that almost all of the indictments were against persons of no especial prominence and that some were against members of a class more or less migratory.

The names of the defendants have been carried into the third administration of the Federal offices. Attempts to punish defendants who may have been genuine slackers met with little success when the charges were new, and doubt was expressed as to the value of any such effort now.

Mr. Buckner is anxious to get rid of as much of the red tape of his office as he can. As long as the names remain on the calendars they must be listed and sent to Washington every year. He said that wherever it appeared that a defendant had been really guilty of evasion of war service and could be reached, he would be prosecuted.

Mr. Buckner also wants to dispose of petty actions against enlisted men on charges of having failed to turn in their accoutrements and other property of small value belonging to the Government. These are all civil cases. It is believed that many of the men who retained property of this description did so because they desired to have some memento of their fighting days.

Driver's Elbow and Housemaid's Knee

Motor cars are notoriously hard on clothes. Many a motorist knows what it is to have one sleeve suffering from "driver's elbow"—not so plebeian a complaint as housemaid's knee, but much the same in cause and effect!

D'Andrea Brothers' clothes stand up under the rough and tumble of motoring because they are soundly tailored from durable materials. On a long trip a D'Andrea suit will hold its shape and be neat and presentable when a poorer garment looks like the proverbial potato sack.

Motoring, of course, is an extreme test. But the durable presentability of D'Andrea Brothers' clothes is an essential part of the big value they also give in design, fit and style.

MISSIONARIES BACK FROM 14 YEARS' TOIL

A party of missionaries returning on furlough after fourteen years' service at West China Union University, at Chengtu, in the Province of Szechuan, arrived yesterday from London on the Atlantic Transport liner Minnekahda.

Captain A. J. Brace of the Y. M. C. A. at Chengtu, who has been made a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society in consequence of his work in the West China Border Research Society, described the expeditions into Thibet which he has made every Summer.

"It is easy to get into Thibet, but don't go too far," he warned. "Lhassa is still a forbidden city. The most interesting fact about the Thibetans is that they in no way resemble the neighboring Chinese, but are quite like the Americans.

"Nobody can teach the Chinese anything about farming. Despite the fact that their methods of agriculture date from before Christ, the peasants raise three and four crops a year and support 7,000,000 population in an area within a forty-mile radius of Chengtu.

"One teacher at the university tried to teach the farmers about the use of a hotbed. As soon as they saw what he intended to do, they duplicated his efforts and, using their own methods, surpassed his results."

Dr. Claude W. Freeman, who has been Medical Missionary at Chengtu for sixteen years, representing the American Methodist Mission, said that the mountains of Thibet were higher than had been supposed.

"There are many peaks higher than Mount Everest," he declared. "Once you get inside the forbidden land, you are surrounded by a ring of stupendous peaks, the least of which is 25,000 feet high.

Another notable passenger on the Minnekahda was Hyacinth Patrick O'Kiillikelly, the Irish-American tenor. He was born in Georgia of Irish-French ancestry and served through the war in the French Army, gaining the Croix de Guerre. He has just completed his studies in France and Italy.

He was heard by Mme. Galli-Curci in London, who predicted that in the near future he would become a world star.

The Rev. John Freeman, Canadian novelist, was among the passengers. He has come to this country after sixteen years of residence in England to accept preaching engagements in Brooklyn, New York and Jersey City pulpits, and to engage a publisher for his books here. His five novels have previously been published only in Canada and England.

A party of Irish tourists under the leadership of J. D. McCarthy, barrister, of Carlow, complained bitterly at being forced to go to Ellis Island for the night. They included Joseph Brennan Sandon of Cork, a friend of Judge Cohalan, and John J. Duggan, a Dublin attorney, with friends in St. Louis.

FIND BABY IN HALLWAY.

James Hughes, janitor of a tenement at 80 Nassau Street, Brooklyn, found a three-weeks-old boy in a corridor of the second floor of the building yesterday. The baby was wrapped in a pink woolen blanket and dressed in clothing of good quality. Hughes utrned the infant over to Detective James Powers of the Poplar Street Station, and the youngster was taken to the foundling ward of the Cumberland Street Hospital.

People living in the vicinity told Detective Powers that they had seen a well-dressed woman with black bobbed hair enter the apartment with a baby and later come out alone. Some children who were playing on Pearl Street told him that they had seen a woman answering that description get into a limousine and drive off.

SUBWAY AGENT HELD UP.

Thief Loots Change Booth Just Before Collection Train Is Due.

Only two men were on the downtown platform of the Lexington Avenue subway station at Thirty-third Street at 9:10 o'clock last night when one of the men pointed a pistol at John Crimmins of 139 East Ninety-seventh Street, the station agent, and commanded him to open the door of the change booth.

The armed man scooped up currency and silver amounting to $295, stuffed it into his coat pockets and ran from the station, followed by the second man.

Crimmins followed and notified the police, but the latter said his description of the robbers was meagre. Several hundred dollars was in a safe in the change booth but no attempt was made to open it. The collection train was due at 9:20 o'clock.

CITY BREVITIES.

At a luncheon at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn, the teams engaged in the campaign of the Knights of Columbus to raise $250,000 to furnish and decorate the two-million-dollar centre at Prospect Park Plaza, yesterday reported that they had raised $45,000 since the opening of the drive last Thursday. There will be another luncheon at the St. George at noon today.

Feitx Cohen has been appointed editor-in-chief of the student newspaper of the College of the City of New York, The Campus. He has been on the staff of the publication for over two years. The new business manager is Aaron Orange, who has been on the paper for two years.

Commencement exercises of the Biblical Seminary in New York, Lexington Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, will take place tonight in the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street. Dr. Walter Scott Athearn, Dean of the School of Religious Education, Boston University, will deliver the address. Class Day exercises were held last night in the auditorium of the seminary.

A testimonial dinner will be given tomorrow evening at the Hotel Astor to Dr. Henry Silosberg, Russian jurist and scholar. The speakers will include Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, Dr. Samuel Schulman, Dr. Nathan Kraus, Herman Bernstein, Jonah J. Goldstein and Leon Savage.

Dr. Henry M. Whelpley, dean of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, received the Remington honor medal, emblematic of outstanding service to the profession, at a dinner given in his honor by the New York branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association at the Hotel Pennsylvania last night.

WANTS PLAYGROUND ON RIVERSIDE DRIVE

SAYS FEW RIDERS USE IT

Children's Aid Society Plans to Raise $30,000 for Equipment in Cigar Coupon Drive.

Conversion of the bridle path along Riverside Drive, from Seventy-second Street to 116th Street, into a playground for children is suggested in a movement endorsed yesterday by the Women's League for the Protection of Riverside Park, of which Mrs. John Clapperton Kerr is President.

The sponsors of the project state that with the congestion of wheeled traffic on Riverside Drive the bridle path is seldom used by equestrians and the few who use it could easily ride in Central Park instead. Thousands of children living on the Drive and adjacent streets have no safe place to play, it is argued, and the long stretch of graveled bridle path would make a fine playground.

The idea is advanced that the bridle path, which is seventy-five feet wide in places, could be inclosed with a low vine-covered fence to protect the children from traffic. The row of shade trees between the north and south bound bridle paths would provide mothers with a comfortable place to sit and watch their children at play.

Another plea for playgrounds is made by the Children's Aid Society. This organization will begin a drive for a playground equipment fund on June 1. Instead of asking for cash, the managers of the campaign have made arrangements to have coupons issued by the United Cigar and Happiness Candy Stores redeemed in cash. The public is asked to send in these coupons to the organization when the drive begins.

In addition, there will be installed in the stores of these concerns receptacles in which buyers are asked to deposit their coupons. The society will collect them and use them to buy playground equipment. The organization expects to realize $30,000 by this means. Jackie Coogan will participate in the opening of the drive.

YOUNG McDAVITT IN JAIL.

DETROIT, May 25.—Believing that the news of his plight is being withheld from his mother, William McDavitt, 22, son of Louis McDavitt, General Manager and director of the Colgate Products Company of Jersey City, awaits arraignment on a charge of passing two worthless checks totaling $55.

The McDavitt home is at Orange, N. J., and the Summer home is at Chester, N. J. Mrs. McDavitt is at Chester now, the defendant told the police.

"My mother would come here and help me if she knew I was in jail," McDavitt said.

McDavitt is a cripple, in the position of a ne'er-do-well of fiction. But his story is of a struggle against heavy odds in spite of his father's wealth.

After he was dropped from the rolls of the Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken two months ago, according to his story, his father gave him $300 and a railroad ticket to Detroit and told him no fare for himself. A girl jilted him at the same time, he said.

Here he got a job in an automobile factory but failed in the physical examination and was dropped from the payroll after working one day.

PRAGUE, May 25.—The Boersen Courier relates the details of a suicide in jail of Captain Miroslav Novotny, which occurred last August but had been hushed up until now.

Novotny attempted suicide by driving a nail through his head. The first two nails, which he hammered with a wooden shoe, were bent, but the third, a rusty nail about 4 inches long, pierced the skull and could later be removed only with great difficulty. When unable to bear the pain any longer Novotny cut his arteries open, but did not die even then until three days later in a hospital.

HYLAN DISAPPOINTS BOYS' FEDERATION

14-YEAR-OLD TACKLES JOB

Rockefeller Foundation Head Sees Environment as Biggest Factor in Training Young.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Boys' Club Federation, an organization of 248 separate clubs, began at the Hotel Commodore yesterday without the formality of being welcomed by a city official. Mayor Hylan was to have performed that function, and it was extensively advertised that he would do so at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

But when the time came and passed without the Mayor appearing, the 450 delegates who had assembled in the west ballroom of the hotel, became restless. Chairman William Lewis Butcher was plainly annoyed. Finally, First Assistant Corporation Counsel Arthur J. W. Hilly, who is Acting Corporation Counsel, appeared and said he woud represent the Mayor.

Mr. Hilly explained that at the last moment the Mayor had decided that he would not be able to appear, as he had to attend a meeting of the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate and had asked the head of the Law Department to appear in his behalf and extend official greetings to the delegates. He further explained that he was very busy himself and asked permission to be allowed to make his speech at once.

Chairman Butcher could not see it that way. He explained to Mr. Hilly that the principal speaker of the day was to be Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, and as the time had arrived for Dr. Vincent to make his address, would Mr. Hilly mind waiting.

But Dr. Vincent also was late. He was scheduled to make his address at 3:30 P. M., but he did not appear until nearly 4:30. He spoke for fifteen minutes and then Mr. Butcher announced that the delegates would hear from Mr. Hilly. There was an awkward pause while messengers tried to locate the official from the Law Department.

Hotel Searched in Vain.

Nowhere in the hotel could he be found and word finally reached Mr. Butcher that, having grown tired of waiting, Mr. Hilly had returned to his office. There was nothing left to do but find some one who would make a welcoming speech. This office was finally performed by Gaetano Petranio, a 14-year-old boy representing the St. George Boys' Club, one of the several organizations of its kind in New York City. Then the regular program was taken up.

The morning session was occupied in registration and distribution of badges, and reports from officials of divisions. A comprehensive program covering the four days of the convention includes a presentation of the New Zealand flag on Thursday to the boys of New Zealand by A. Stuart, Commissioner of Railways and Tranportation of New Zealand.

A feature of the convention is the industrial exhibit, showing handicraft work contributed by a dozen or more clubs. Ten trophies will be awarded as prizes for the best work in these exhibits. One interesting exhibit is cartoons by the Boys' Club of Menominee, Mich. Every one of the thousand boys of that town, which has a population of 10,000, is a member of the Boys' Club. The foreign delegates at the convention are from Canada, England, Australia, Holland, New Zealand and India.

William Edwin Hall, President of the federation, told the gathering that the organization had grown in eight years from a membership of 61,000 to 191,000, and from 104 clubs to 248. Last year, he said, there were affiliated with the Boys' Club Federation, twenty-eight additional clubs, of which eleven were newly formed. The boy membership grew by 20,000 within the year, an increase over last year of 12 per cent.

Dr. Vincent Gives Address.

Dr. Vincent, in a keynote address entitled "The Growth of Personality," said that control of environment is the secret of child control. The greatest factor in environment, he said, is the influence of the right individuals. The child is naturally imitative and consciously or unconsciously will copy that which he admires. The big thing in the work of influencing and directing the life of a child, he explained, is to bring the right men into the federation's clubs as leaders, and to safeguard the associations of the young.

"Abstract virtues in verbal form make little impression on boys," Dr. Vincent continued, "because lads do not generalize well. The theory that children can be molded like so much clay is a wrong one, as are the extreme doctrines that boys either are totally depraved or entirely angelic."

Children, he maintained, are bundles of instinctive activity, and it is the function of the leaders to direct these instincts so that they will develop into stable reactions of personality and individuality. Pick out the best in environmental influences and give it to the boys, was his summing up.

Youth and His Father Charge They Operated Negligently.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 25.—Supreme Court Justice George H. Taylor Jr. and a jury at White Plains today began hearing testimony in a suit for $250,000 damages brought by Charles J. Davis Jr., 22 years old, against Dr. John J. Erdman of Manhattan, Dr. John Fielding Black and Dr. Edward W. Weber, both of White Plains, for an alleged unauthorized and negligent operation performed on him on May 18, 1918. His father, Charles J. Davis of Quimby Avenue, White Plains, is also suing the physicians for the expense he underwent.

According to the plaintiffs, Young Davis was taken to the White Plains Hospital on May 8, 1918, where Dr. Erdman was called into consultation and advised an operation for appendicitis. It was stated that after the incision was made the appendix was found normal and Dr. Erdman found the right kidney diseased. Without obtaining the consent of the youth's parents, it was alleged, he operated on the kidney. For months Davis was under the care of physicians, the plaintiffs charged, and finally the wound healed. Then, it was said, in 1923 Young Davis's left kidney became infected and it was necessary to operate on it. It was charged that the unauthorized operation on the right kidney had caused the left kidney to become so diseased that it was necessary to remove it.

The physicians deny that the operation was carelessly performed, and say the operation on the right kidney was done to save Davis's life.

ASKS FOR FINANCIAL DATA

If Lincoln Proposition Is a Good One "I Will Go Along With It," He Says.

Although Mayor Hylan, followed by the Board of Estimate, went on record several weeks ago declaring that the City of New York would not take over and operate Lincoln Hospital, a private institution in the southeastern section of the Bronx, the Mayor and the board, in committee of the whole yesterday, indicated that they might reverse their earlier attitude.

They directed that a financial statement be prepared to enable them to determine whether it would be more advantageous to the city to take over, renovate and operate the old institution or invest approximately $1,200,000 in a new South Bronx hospital, as recommended by Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Public Welfare, and Dr. John J. McGrath, President of the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals.

After the city officials had refused to take over the old hospital, following the course recommended by Dr. McGrath in a full report, in which he pronounced the Lincoln Hospital buildings obsolete, dilapidated, little better than fire traps, and declared it would be better policy to build a new institution, the trustees of the Lincoln institution announced that they would close their doors and liquidate their assets at the end of the present calendar year. They said they could not meet current expenses at the rate paid by the municipality for city patients, that they had a deficit of $40,000 and could not hope to meet a demand by the State authorities that they build a new home for nurses at a cost of about $700,000.

Subsequently a committee composed of Alderman Edward W. Curley of the Bronx and Commissioner of Public Works William J. Flynn selected a tentative site in the Southeast Bronx, near 145th Street and Jackson Avenue, for the erection of a city hospital of 100 beds at the cost of $1,200,000.

There was general surprise yesterday therefore when the board took action on the Lincoln Hospital's former offer, instead of on the proposed new city hospital site.

Mayor Hylan said that when the matter first came up he had not sufficient information at hand and it was necessary that he should not "be rushed off his feet by propagandists."

Borough President Henry Bruckner of the Bronx reminded the Mayor that he was originally opposed to taking over Lincoln Hospital.

Mayor Hylan replied that at the time he was "backed into a corner" and did not wish propagandists to put anything over on him. "Homer Folks and his people come out every four years at Mayoralty election time," the Mayor added, "and make attacks on hospitals. These propagandists even get some clergymen to join in the attacks. He got a couple of clergymen, who don't know the truth about hospital conditions, and later when I saw them they told me they regretted that they had been misquoted and misinformed. This administration has expended $14,000,000 in hospital improvements. This 'gum-shoe' artist, Homer Folks, supplies these attacks for politicians in Mayoralty election time."

Mayor Hylan directed that a financial statement be prepared to show what it would cost to acquire Lincoln Hospital and to improve and renovate it, so that it could be put into such a condition that "the propagandists can't later assail the city and say we bought a lot of junk unfit for hospital purposes." The Mayor directed that the financial statement be prepared so that a comparison may be made between the cost of renovating and improving Lincoln Hospital and the cost of buying a site and building a new hospital.

"If the Lincoln Hospital proposition is a good one I will go along with it," said the Mayor. "If not, we will build a new hospital."

The statement, it is expected, will be prepared by next week.

Juniors and Sophomores Elect Ten Members for Next Year.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 25.—M. A. (Dolph) Cheek, captain of the Harvard football team next year, baseball letter man and track performer, received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate for the Harvard Student Council, it became known last night when returns were available at Cambridge.

The voting was by postal ballot. Members of the junior class voted for seven of fifteen nominees, and members of the sophomore class chose three out of seven. The ten men elected will assume office next Fall and at that time will appoint three more seniors and two juniors to the council.

The three sophomores elected were Leo Laly, football man; Carl Lundell, who won the 220 against Princeton Saturday, and Fred Field, one of the editors of The Crimson, the only non-athlete chosen from either class.

ENGINEER KILLED AT POST.

Leaning From Cab of Century Limited He Is Struck by Waterplug.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 25 (AP).—Edward H. Peck, 60, of Buffalo, engineer on the New York Central's Twentieth Century Limited, eastbound, was fatally injured when struck in the head by a water plug as he was guiding his train through Amboy, a few miles west of here, shortly before 3 A. M. today. He died an hour later in a local hospital.

So great was the force of the blow that Peck, who was leaning through the cab window, was knocked to the floor of his engine. The water plug had been left extending out over the track or blown there by the wind.

G. H. Schoolmaster, fireman of the locomotive, also of Buffalo, took the throttle and raced the train to Syracuse.

SUES BORGLUM FOR $8,500.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 25 (AP).—Gutzon Borglum is expected to be in Superior Court tomorrow when Judge Arthur F. Ells starts hearing an $8,500 action brought against him by the James McCrery Realty Corporation of New York City.

The corporation says it permitted the International Sporting Club, Inc., of New York City to occupy a suite of rooms in a Forty-second Street building because Mr. Borglum personally guaranteed, in writing, the rental of $6,000 yearly. Rent for a long period is said to remain unpaid.

Mr. Borglum has answered that any written document he may have executed was done so in his capacity as an agent and authorized officer of the club, and not as a private individual.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer,
Cleveland, Ohio.

ATTENTION: Mr. B. A. Collins,
National Advertising Mgr

Gentlemen:

We have always been sold on the value of the Plain Dealer as an advertising medium. This is demonstrated by the fact that from year to year we place the Cleveland portion of our National Newspaper Campaign with your paper.

The year 1924, however, brought us to a new high level of appreciation of what the Plain Dealer really means to Brunswick. As you know, we introduced the new musical instrument, the BRUNSWICK-RADIOLA, to our trade for the first time early in the fall. A Plain Dealer advertising campaign was started as soon as the machines came on the market, and it was continued on to the end of the year. Pronounced public interest was stimulated very early in the campaign, and we give the Plain Dealer full credit for it, as many telephone calls from retail buyers were received at our office on the same day our copy would run, these prospects asking where they could buy the new Brunswick-Radiola.

Our dealers were quick to realize their opportunity. Each succeeding Plain Dealer ad saw more and more of our dealers running tie-up copy. The last advertisement of the 1924 campaign, run in December, had more dealer tie-ups than ever before. It goes without saying that all of this dealer co-operative advertising, which gave so much more weight to our message to the public, was secured only thru the very efficient and intelligent efforts of your sales staff.

The year ended with each and every one of our dealers in Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown, Canton, etc., enthusiastically selling Brunswick-Radiolas --- 100% dealer coverage --- complete public acceptance of a new product!

Very truly yours,

THE BRUNSWICK BALKE COLLENDER CO.

L. S. McLeod,

A unique situation—unusual coverage of the BUYERS—the people with the money to spend and the inclination to spend it.

RESULTS, such as obtained by Brunswick, justify the judgment of national advertisers who placed over 175,000 MORE lines in The Plain Dealer ALONE in 1924, than in all other Cleveland newspapers combined.

SHOCK KILLS FATHER OF VICTIM OF GAS

DOG AWAKENS FAMILY

Overcome by the shock of finding his daughter lying on the floor of the gas-filled kitchen in their apartment at 27 Washington Square North, John Angus Kerr, former treasurer of the Ledoux Laboratories, 99 John Street, collapsed and died yesterday morning before he could reach the gas jet and perhaps save her life. The daughter, Mrs. Madeline Secec, was dead when her husband reached her side. Mr. Kerr was 68 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, their daughter and son-in-law, Alexander Secec, occupied an apartment on the ground floor of the Washington Square apartment house. According to Mr. Secec his wife had been subject to fainting spells lately. It is believed that she got up at about 8 o'clock yesterday morning to prepare breakfast, while the rest of the family was in bed. She turned on the gas, it is thought, and was reaching for a match to light the jet when she was taken with one of the spells and fell to the floor in front of the stove before she could strike a match.

Lulu, a French poodle dog, which had followed Mrs. Secec to the kitchen, became uneasy at the stillness of her mistress and ran to the room of Mr. Kerr. Leaping upon the bed, the dog began to pull at the covers. This aroused the father and as he got up the animal began to yelp. Mr. Kerr started for the kitchen, saw the still form of his daughter and collapsed on the floor.

Secec, aroused by the barking of the dog, came into the hall from his room a few minutes later and at once turned off the gas and opened the kitchen windows. He then rushed upstairs to the apartment of Dr. Thomas Darlington, former Health Commissioner. Dr. Darlington applied first aid without success. Mrs. Secec had died from the effects of the gas and her father from a heart attack brought on by shock.

Mr. Kerr was a native of Scotland and had lived in this country for many years. Until he gave up active business a few years ago, he was treasurer of the Ledoux company, chemists and assayers on a large scale.

Mrs. Secec was 35 years old. Her husband is secretary of the Argus Radio Corporation, 25 West Eighteenth Street. Secec was overcome by the double tragedy. He said the action of the dog in awakening the family probably had saved the lives of the others in the apartment.

GIRL PRAYS TO SAINT, NOW GETTING BETTER

Roberta Wagner, 13 years old, of 1,739 West Eleventh Street, Brooklyn, who was expected by five doctors to die last March, prayed to Sainte Theresa to get well, and yesterday she sat up and began to plan for a vacation in the country.

Roberta has been an invalid since August, 1923, when she was operated on for appendicitis. Immediately after her recovery she suffered a complication of diseases which her physicians declared would either be fatal or leave her unable to move. Month after month she lay in bed, not responding to treatment, apparently wasting away.

Two weeks ago, according to her mother, Mrs. George Wagner, Roberta read of the canonization of Theresa, a Carmelite nun. She began praying to the saint, firm in the belief that after she had completed her novena, she would improve. The ninth day of prayer was Sunday, and immediately, said the mother, Roberta began to show improvement. Yesterday she was able to sit up in a wheel chair.

"It's a sort of miracle," said Dr. J. Louis Simpson of 97 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, who is Roberta's attending physician. "I met one of the surgeons who had been called on the case today and he asked, 'When did that little girl die?' I answered that she didn't die but that she was getting better, and he thought it was impossible.

DIES IN FOUR-STORY DROP.

David Greenthal, clothing manufacturer, was killed by a fall yesterday afternoon from his bedroom window on the fourth floor of an apartment house at 420 Riverside Drive. He was alone in the apartment and it is assumed by his family that he fell as a result of a fainting spell.

When he arrived at his place of business, 102 Canal Street, yesterday morning, Mr. Greenthal complained of feeling faint, according to an employe, and left for home shortly before noon. At about 1:30 he was seated in an armchair by a window when his wife left him to go to a drug store. When she returned a few minutes later she was met by neighbors who informed her of what had happened. Some one had called Dr. Hyman Cohen of 112 East Eighty-fifth Street, who arrived a few minutes later and pronounced Mr. Greenthal dead.

Monroe Greenthal, the only son, said that his father had been ill for some time. He believed that, in opening the window to obtain fresh air, Mr. Greenthal had become dizzy and had fallen over the sill, which was only two feet high.

BRITISH CABINET GETS BRIAND'S REPLY TODAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—Foreign Minister Briand's reply to supplementary questions put to him by Austen Chamberlain on the subject of the proposed note to Germany with regard to the proposed guarantee compact to cover the Rhine will be in the hands of members of the Cabinet tomorrow. It is understood the question of the Government's attitude toward the French note will be discussed by the Cabinet Thursday.

"The French reply may be summarized as follows," says the London Times: "The French Government desires to be able to say that the note, although coming officially from the Quai D'Orsay, only represents the unanimous view of the Allied Governments, but M. Briand clings to the original contention that the pact, being merely an amplification of clauses of the Treaty of Versailles, dealing with demilitarization, cannot be allowed to infringe directly or by implication on any of the political or territorial rights established by that treaty on any of the frontiers of Germany.

"The French Government cannot agree to a pact in any way reducing France's right under the treaty to defend the status quo. It cannot allow the Rhine to become at some later date under the pact a barrier which would prevent France from going to the aid of her allies in Eastern Europe. If, as the German Government has suggested, new arbitration treaties are concluded between Germany and neighboring States, these treaties must be entirely in harmony with the Treaty of Versailles and must be placed under the protection of its signatories as members of the League of Nations, to which Germany must also belong.

"The issue before the Cabinet is much wider than a mere question of the attitude to be adopted toward the French note. The political situation in Europe is developing in a manner which makes it imperative to arrive at a clear decision on the principles by which British foreign policy is to be guided during the eventful months to come. Not only must the question of a guarantee pact be decided, but also that of the Geneva protocol, which, from all indications, is not considered dead by certain Continental States.

"Mr. Chamberlain has communicated to the Cabinet a memorandum on the subject of the guarantee pact proposal in which the whole problem of foreign policy clearly is set out."

The Westminster Gazette says that M. Briand's reply unmistakably reveals the fact that French policy on security and German disarmament is as remote from the British policy as the French attitude on reparations was from the British attitude in the days of Poincaré. Unless some compromise is reached, the paper adds, it looks as if Great Britain and France would have to pursue separate paths.

COPELAND SAYS PUBLIC IS GOUGED ON SUGAR

Pays a Vast Daily Toll to the Trust, Senator Declares in a Speech to the Osceola Club.

American housewives pay a tribute of $200,000 a day to the Sugar Trust, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland asserted last night in a discourse before the Osceola Club, the Tammany organization of the Fifteenth Assembly District, at its headquarters, 1,019 Madison Avenue.

"Every housewife contributes to this sum, and ft all goes into the hands of the trust," Senator Copeland declared. He said that tariff changes had been proposed to relieve the situation, but that two years had gone by without action, for which he suggested that President Coolidge has some responsibility.

"Warren (Charles Beecher Warren, rejected nominee for Attorney General) is the head of the sugar business in Michigan," said the Senator, "Smoot is the head of the industry in Utah. Do you think Coolidge is going to hurt these sugar friends of his?"

Senator Copeland then spoke of aluminum ware, mentioning Secretary of the Treasury Mellon as interested in this business. "Mellon is not Secretary of the Treasury for his health," the speaker declared. "Every time you buy an aluminum pot or any other utensil made of aluminum you pay half of the price in profit to Mr. Mellon. Since Mellon owns the Aluminum Trust he gets the profit."

The proposed $100,000,000 federal road program was attacked by the Senator. He said that 27 per cent. of all federal taxes are paid by New York State, but that New York would receive practically no benefit from the road program.

A great issue in government now, said Senator Copeland, is whether an "oligarchy of wealth," in the Senate, the members of which were elected mainly bcause of their wealth, shall control the affairs of the country, or whether the power shall be kept in the hands of the people.

DIES IN A CAVE-IN.

Buried under tons of earth when the shoring holding up one side of an excavation at 82 and 84 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, gave way yesterday afternoon, Benjamin Marulla, a laborer, of 2,355 Pacific Street, was suffocated. Irving Wartman of 2,965 Lorington Avenue, the Bronx, in charge of the work, was dug out and taken to St. Catherine's Hospital for minor injuries. Two other workmen who were caught by the cave-in refused medical aid and left the scene without giving their names.

Eight men were working in the ditch at a depth of thirty feet when there was a ripping and tearing of the planking.

One workman shouted a warning and with three others got to safety. Their cries attracted other men in the neighborhood, who clambered down ladders and frantically dug away the earth which partly covered two of the men.

By the time they had them freed firemen from Hook and Ladder Companies 108 and 104 arrived and within a short time Wartman was brought to the surface. It was almost an hour before the body of Marullo was found. Physicians from Beth Moses and St. Catherine's Hospitals worked in vain over his body with a pulmotor.

SCOPES IS INDICTED ON TENNESSEE LAW

whether or not the law has been violated, and if it has, it becomes our duty to uphold the law and preserve its integrity.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, it is your duty to investigate this alleged offense without prejudice or bias, and with open minds. And if you find there has been a willful violation of the statute you should promptly return a true bill. Otherwise you should return 'no bill.' You may proceed with your inquiry."

Dayton began today to set the stage for this dramatic trial, which will bring thousands of visitors to the little city, among them some of the eminent educators of the nation, who are interested on both sides of the question involved. The young teacher faces the trial with the belief, he said, after the indictment, that a principle, which must be decided upon sooner or later, is involved and that it is necessary that the teachers of the State have the interpretation of the courts before the opening of the next school terms.

Scientists to Aid Defense.

DAYTON, Tenn., May 25 (AP).—The American Association for the Advancement of Science has joined actively in the evolution case. Dr. George W. Rappleyea, who instigated the court test, announced that Professor M. I. Pupin, President of the association and member of Columbia University Faculty, had pledged support to the defense, promising a "scientific expert adviser" for the trial. Mr. Rappleyea also quoted Dr. Watson Davis, editor of Science Service, of Washington, as saying "We are coming to your support, 14,300 strong."

With Dayton already crowded for today's preliminaries, attention was turned to the problem of caring for the still larger crowds expected to gather for the trial. Plans are being considered for abandonment of the Court House and erection in the baseball park of a temporary structure which would have a seating capacity of 20,000.

Scopes is prepared to continue the case through the higher courts.

ROBINSON ELECTED ROBINS' PRESIDENT

ALSO TO REMAIN MANAGER

Uncle Robbie reached out and annexed another title yesterday. Eleven years manager of the Brooklyn ball team and uncle of all Flatbush fandom, he is now Wilbert Robinson, President—successor to the late Charles H. Ebbets and head of one of the biggest and most prosperous properties in baseball.

His unanimous election as President of the club took place at Ebbets Field yesterday morning at a meeting of the stockholders. With due solemnity the man who was a two-fisted catcher on the Baltimore Orioles thirty years ago was ushered into the ranks of the magnates. Excepting Christy Mathewson and Clark Griffith, Robbie is the only club president who gained his qualifications by taking the full course of hard knocks in the school of baseball experience.

As a team-mate of John McGraw's on the famous Orioles Robbie was a powerful hitter, an excellent base stealer and a fine catcher. He is the only man in the game who ever made seven hits, consecutive or otherwise, in one game. He has been through the mill and knows every rope—as player, coach, manager and now magnate.

And he is still a manager. A new field leader may be named next season, but for the present Uncle Wilbert will carry on as the dugout as well as in the business sanctum sanctorum. It had been reported that Zach Wheat would take over the reins immediately, but the Brooklyn fans can rest easy for the present.

Robinson's election represents a compromise between the Ebbets and McKeever interests. At an earlier meeting Stephen W. McKeever, who owns 25 per cent. of the stock, balked at electing the portly manager, seeking the office himself. Robbie was backed by the Ebbets estate, which holds 50 per cent., and by Mrs. Edward J. McKeever, widow of the late Vice President of the club, whose death followed closely on that of Mr. Ebbets. Mrs. McKeever also owns a quarter of the stock.

Choice Is Unanimous.

Yesterday Steve McKeever was won over to Robinson's side and the election was made unanimous. McKeever was chosen Vice President and Treasurer, and Joseph A. Gilleaudeau, son-in-law of Mr. Ebbets, secretary.

Robbie was born in Hudson, Mass., about sixty years ago. When he was thirteen years old he was manager of an amateur team. The youthful Napoleon hired a horse and wagon, drove it himself and thus conveyed his team from Hudson to Bedford for his first match game.

From that modest beginning he branched into professional ball in 1885, with the Haverhill (Mass.) team of the old New England League. John K. Tener, later Governor of Pennsylvania and President of the National League, was a team-mate. In 1886 Robbie was sold to the Philadelphia Athletics of the old American Association, and in 1891 he joined the Baltimore Orioles.

Here came his greatest playing days. On the Orioles was a little third baseman named John McGraw; a red-headed shortstop of the name of Hugh Jennings; an outfielder who answered to the cognomen of Willie Keeler; another outfielder, one Joe Kelley.

When the National League abandoned Baltimore Robbie went to St. Louis, but in 1901 and 1902 he was back in Baltimore as a catcher on the infant American League team of that city. The new league then switched the Baltimore franchise, but Robbie stuck to his old love and became connected with the Baltimore outfit of the Eastern League (now the International).

In 1911 McGraw summoned his old colleague to the Giants as coach, a position which he filled with great results in 1911, 1912 and 1913. As coach of pitchers he had marked success.

Became Manager in 1913.

However, in November, 1913, he was offered the managership of the Robins (then the Dodgers and Superbas) and McGraw let Robinson go to accept this proposal. His first season across the bridge was 1914. In 1916 he won a pennant. In 1920 he won another. Last year he was a nail's breadth away.

Last Winter the Brooklyn idol was taken seriously ill with pleurisy and underwent two operations in a Baltimore hospital. After a long confinement he took charge of the Robins at Clearwater, Fla., but was still too weak to do any active work.

Robbie's promotion was hailed yesterday with great satisfaction, especially by the "practical" men of baseball. President John A. Heydler's comment was as follows:

"The election of Robinson to be President of the Brooklyn club is a tribute to a man who won his way up from the ranks of the game. It will not only be well received in Brooklyn, where Robbie is loved by everybody, and among the players and fans, but it will be well received among baseball men generally, I am sure.

"Robinson is one of the fine characters of the game. He invested his money in Baltimore of the American League back in 1901 and was part owner of that club. He was coach for McGraw's Giants. Then he served twelve years as manager of the Brooklyn club, showing rare executive ability, winning two pennants with ordinary teams and coming within one game of a third flag.

"It will be seen that Robinson's record is one that entitles him to anything in the gift of baseball. He has always stood for the highest and best interests of the game. He was not alone one of the greatest catchers of all time but he was a success as a field leader and one of the most popular and best loved characters of the game."

Players Congratulate Robbie.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—The promotion of Wilbert Robinson to the Presidency of the Brooklyn Baseball Club was heartily endorsed by members of the team when they were informed of the news here today. Robbie, who attended the meeting in Brooklyn, left as soon as it was over and came here, where the team is playing in a series with the Phillies.

Robbie announced that he has appointed Zack Wheat to act as assistant manager of the team for the remainder of the playing season and that Jack Fournier has succeeded Wheat as field captain.

"Wheat," said Robbie, "will assist me in managing the team and I think he will make good in his new job. As captain, Fournier should be successful, for he is aggressive and like Wheat, very popular with the Brooklyn fans. I will continue to direct the managerial end in addition to assuming the duties as President.

"However, when my new duties make it impossible for me to be on the bench, Wheat will have absolute charge of the team on the field. As President I will have to make myself familiar with the duties of the office. My new job has not affected the contract I signed to manage the team. It is a three-year one, which expires at the end of next season."

Although Robbie announced that he still will be the actual manager of the team, he intimated that at the end of the season he will resign as pilot and devote all his time to filling the office of President.

Selection Pleases Giants.

BOSTON, May 25.—The Giants expressed themselves as being highly pleased over Wilbert Robinson's elevation to the head of the Brooklyn club. Wires of congratulations were sent to him by the Giants' officials and the Boston owners.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 25.—Pittsburgh won the first game of its series with Chicago today, 5 to 3. Morrison was effective in every inning except the seventh, when the Cubs bunched four hits for three runs. Barnhart, with a single and a double, hit in his twenty-fifth consecutive game.

Rabbit Maranville, infield star, who returned to the Cub's line-up yesterday for the first time since he sustained a broken leg during the Spring training, got into today's game for a short time when he batted as a pinch hitter in the ninth for Pitcher Brett. The former Pirate failed to get a hit, however.

Guy Bush started on the mound for the Cubs, but was relieved in the sixth by Jacobs, who, in turn, gave way to Brett. Both teams played errorless ball. Grantham and Smith each got two hits in three times at bat.

O'ROURKE WINS GAME.

A single by Jack O'Rourke in the seventh and last inning, chased "Red" Scully home with the run which gave George Washington High School's baseball team a victory over the Haaren High School nine yesterday at the Catholic Protectory Oval, and enabled the Washington lads to maintain their position in the lead for the Public Schools Athletic League championship of Manhattan, Bronx and Richmond.

Washington's margin of victory was measured by the lone tally chased in by O'Rourke. The score was 3 to 2. The triumph witnessed the ninth victory of the Washington nine in as many P. S. A. L. games, one of the contests going to the team by forfeit.

YALE NINE LOSES TO SYRACUSE, 4-1

HANSEN IN BRILLIANT PLAY

Makes Spectacular Two-Ply Killing, While Greve Also Stars—Pond Yields 9 Safeties.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 25.—Syracuse's whirlwind ball this afternoon swept the Yale nine down to a 4 to 1 defeat. Yielding only three safeties in all, Schlegel's pitching was airtight except for two hits in the fourth, while the infield support Hansen and Greve accorded him was of major league quality.

Two of Greve's dazzling plays nipped near singles while Hansen's ten chances included a spectacular play in which he flung himself at full length on the ground to grab Neale's sizzling liner. Still stretched out he whirled the ball to first to double up Kline. Syracuse's errorless ball consistently checked score possibilities.

The Orange was the first to score, counting a run in the first inning, but the Elis evened the count in the fourth on Noble's single and Kline's triple. In the fifth, however, Syracuse again took the lead with a run and practically clinched the game in the seventh by scoring two more runs. All told, the Orange collected nine hits off Pond, Mahoney leading the attack with three singles.

TRIS SPEAKER SUSPENDED.

Klugman Also Put Out Indefinitely for Protesting Decision.

CLEVELAND, May 25 (AP).—Manager Tris Speaker and Second Baseman Joe Klugman, have been suspended indefinitely for protesting a decision of Umpire Clarence Rowland in Saturday's game with New York, for which both were ejected from the game. Notice of the suspension was received today before the Indians departed for St. Louis.

The argument arose when Rowland called Klugman out at the plate, the Indians claiming that Catcher Steve O'Neill failed to touch him as he slid in.

IVY WINGO LOST TO REDS.

Fractured Finger to Keep Him Out 3 Weeks—Bruggy to Join Squad.

CINCINNATI, May 25 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds lost their second catcher for a period of at least three weeks today, when an X-ray report made by the club physician showed a fractured finger on Ivy Wingo's throwing hand.

Wingo has been catching regularly since a similar injury took Bubbles Hargrave, the first string backstop, out of the game several weeks ago. Frank Bruggy, the old Philadelphia Athletic catcher, has been called upon to help out Douglas, the third string catcher, and will report for duty tomorrow.

YANKS PLAY TWICE AT STADIUM TODAY

The Yankees open their act on the double-header circuit this afternoon at the Stadium. With only nine games in five days, including three double bills, the Hugmen will find time hanging heavily on their hands. Miller Huggins's pitching staff, which has been tested thoroughly as to its quality, will now be examined as to quantity.

The opening salute will be fired against the Boston Red Sox at the Stadium today. Two games will be played, starting at 1:30. Another bargain bill is on the cards for Thursday, with a single game sandwiched in tomorrow.

Huggins is keeping the matter a secret, but it is suspected that he will shoot Urban Shocker and Herb Pennock against the Sox today.

But Will Have to Go Back to Hospital, Doctors Say.

Babe Ruth's immediate ambition failed to materialize yesterday when he wasn't allowed to leave St. Vincent's Hospital permanently. The mighty mauler of the New York Yankees had hoped to be discharged as a patient from the building where he has been confined since early April when he returned from the Spring training trip with a multiple of maladies. However, the staff of physicians and attendants agreed that it probably would be best for the Babe to remain in their company for a day or two more. So he remained.

Ruth may be allowed to go to his apartment today and he may not be allowed to leave until tomorrow. In the meantime he continues to make his daily visit to the Yankee Stadium, where he is learning all over again to swing his battering bat. Yesterday afternoon he took his usual workout and at the end of a half hour said that he felt "fine." Whether or not the Babe will be allowed to don a uniform today, he will be at the Stadium when the Yanks play the first game of their scheduled double header against the Red Sox.

AUTO DRIVERS AWAIT TEST.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25 (AP).—Final tuning up in preparation for the qualifying trials tomorrow was under way today in the garages of most of the drivers entered in next Saturday's 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis Speedway.

Qualifying speed has been advanced from a minimum of 80 miles an hour for ten miles to 85 miles. Starting positions will be determined by speed, the fastest driver drawing the pole. The trials will be continued through Wednesday and Thursday.

So much speed has been exhibited in the practice drives that it has been predicted Tommy Milton's one-lap record of 108 miles an hour average will be shattered in the qualifying trials. Milton, Benny Hill, Harry Hartz, Pete Depolo, Earl Cooper and other stars of the sport apparently have their mounts about ready for the starter's flag Saturday at 10 A. M.

New York Boxer Outpointed.

COACH MILLER OUT, HAINES TAKES HOLD

STATEMENT BY COMMITTEE

M. I. T. Mentor to Begin Training Blue and White June 1 for Poughkeepsie Races.

Fred Miller, head coach of the Columbia crews for two years, resigned his position yesterday and will be succeeded by William D. (Bill) Haines, Massachusetts Tech head coach, on June 1, the day following the American Henley at Philadelphia, in which the Blue and White 150-pound boat is entered.

The following statement of Miller's resignation and of the acceptance of Haines was issued late yesterday afternoon by Maxwell Stevenson, Chairman of the Columbia Committee on Rowing:

As the Columbia crews have not met with the success expected it has been arranged, by mutual agreement, that Mr. Miller will relinquish coaching for the rest of the year. Mr. Haines has been engaged to finish out the season as coach. He will be available for the work, as the Massachusetts Institute of Technology varsity finished its racing schedule a week ago Saturday. Mr. Haines will take charge immediately after May 30.

We wish to state that Mr. Miller has been most faithful in his work with the Columbia crew and has cooperated in every way for the best interests of the crew.

It was expected by crew followers at Columbia that Miller would resign after the Poughkeepsie regatta on June 22, but few were prepared for his resignation at this time. Even The Columbia Spectator, the college daily, did not sense the impending change, for in its editorial columns yesterday it stated that "criticism of the crew regime at this time, with the most important race of the season still to be rowed, would be neither helpful nor in good taste. Spectator assumes that the Rowing Committee is fully capable of solving the problem which confronts it."

Miller made his début as the Lions' head coach on Nov. 14, 1923, succeeding the veteran James C. Rice. In its last six races the Blue and White finished last in five. After a season of losses last year Miller was given another year's contract in the hope that he would turn out improved crews. But this year Columbia has slipped further to the rear among college crews.

In the first race this season Miller's navy trailed the eights of Yale and Pennsylvania. Confidence in the successor of Rice began to waver at that time, but there were still hoped that Columbia would take a brace and give the M. I. T. varsity a hard tussle on the Harlem two weeks ago. But again Columbia rowed to defeat when Tech won in the varsity event and Syracuse in the junior varsity race. The climax came last Saturday when the Columbia varsity, junior varsity and freshman boats finished poor thirds to the eights of Pennsylvania and Princeton in the historic Childs Cup regatta on Columbia's home course, the Harlem River.

Haines will have only three weeks to put the Columbia squad in condition for the Poughkeepsie regatta, but crew followers are of the opinion that he may be able to do so because of his record at M. I. T. In his two years at M. I. T. he prepared successful crews in an institution where rowing was almost an unknown sport. Previous to that he had served in a successful capacity for two seasons as assistant coach of Harvard eights.

RAIN KEEPS GIANTS INACTIVE IN BOSTON

BOSTON, May 25.—The rain washed two ball games right into the harbor today and the Giants and Braves will have another try at a double-header tomorrow. Jack Bentley, who hasn't been on the mound for some time, probably will get into one of the games tomorrow and Zeke Barnes may pitch the other.

Heinie Groh joined the club here today, having been in Rochester, where his left knee was treated by a bone specialist. Heinie says the kneecap is in fine shape and he is ready to go into the game right now if necessary. With Lindstrom going so well at third, however, it isn't likely that the present winning combination will be disturbed.

Groh's return brings the club's reserve power up to its full quota and Acting Boss Jennings now has enough spare talent to make up two strong clubs if necessary. The way that Dean and Greenfield produced on their last trips to the mound proved that these youngsters are ready to take their regular turn in the box.

For the Braves, Manager Dave Bancroft is going to send Johnny Cooney and Genewich against his old teammates. The impression among the Boston players is strong that the Giants are going to make a runaway race for the pennant this season.

The only good the rain did today was to brighten up the pansies on the Boston Common and the outlook for good weather tomorrow is none too good.

Today's pair of games will have to be played on the next visit of the Giants to the Hub. The club returns to the Polo Grounds on Friday for the series with the Phils. On Memorial Day two games will be played in the afternoon instead of one in the morning. On Sunday and Monday the champions play in Brooklyn, and on Tuesday, which is an open date, a postponed game will be played with the Robins. On Tuesday night the club jumps to St. Louis to open the first Western invasion on next Thursday.

High School Girl Leads Women Golfers in Baltusrol Play

TWO ARE TIED FOR SECOND

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

Special to The New York Times.

SHORT HILLS, N. J., May 25.—Miss Maureen Orcutt, eighteen-year-old Englewood High School girl, who plays from the White Beeches Club at Haworth, today won the qualifying medal in the twenty-fifth annual championship of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association at the Baltusrol Golf Club. Her score was 91, 47 out and 44 home, and in gaining her prize she outscored one of the largest and most representative fields in the history of the championship, nearly one hundred and thirty players teeing off for the event.

Lest there should be any misapprehension as to the correctness of Miss Orcutt's score it is hereby again stated that it was 91. Seldom, if ever before, has a metropolitan medal gone that cheap, but seldom also has a score of 101 entitled the owner thereof to pass on into the match play for the district championship, which it did today. Upon first glance it might give the impression that women's golf in the district was on the down grade or that the field was not up to standard, or that Baltusrol was Lido or the National or Pine Valley.

None of these indictments, however, are true. The standard of golf in the district is higher, if anything, than ever. The field, except for the absence of Miss Marion Hollins, the 1924 champion, who was unable to defend on account of illness; Miss Alexa Stirling, the 1922 and 1923 titleholder, who has married and moved to Canada; Mrs. Quentin F. Feltner, Mrs. G. M. Hecksher, Mrs. J. L. Anderson, Miss Georgianna M. Bishop, who elected to play in the conflicting Connecticut State championship, and possibly one or two others, was the strongest that the district can muster.

Weather Makes Play Hard.

Partially offsetting these absentees were two former national champions competing and quite a number of lesser titleholders. To remove the last remaining alibi it is stretching the truth to call Baltusrol either overly difficult or exacting.

The weather was the responsible culprit, for the conditions meted out for the anniversary tournament were abominable. The ground was soft and soggy, giving no roll to the ball after it landed; the traps were either flooded or filled with tenaciously clinging mire; the rough was wet and unyielding. The November sky was overcast with ominous gray clouds. In between there was a cold, raw wind that penetrated woolen sweaters and chamois jackets. In short, it was a fine day for pneumonia but not for golf. However, the greens were true—and, strangely enough, fast. It was this last-named condition that threw a great many off in their computations.

As is generally the case with qualifying rounds, there was little excitement and only few adventures. The stars were so closely grouped in the pairings that it was impossible to watch any of the players for more than a few holes, and consequently it was a case of discriminatory believing without actually seeing. The most untoward happening was the failure of Mrs. F. E. DuBois to qualify, something that has not happened to her in several years of playing in this event. For quite a time the Westchester Biltmore golfer was kept suspended between hope and despair by the knowledge that her 102 was on the border line, but when Mrs. Carroll B. Alker of the Women's National brought home an even 100 Mrs. DuBois's suspense was ended and her sentence pronounced.

It was then that the 101's began to writhe for one or two low scores, and they, too, would be out of it. Among the three bracketed with this rodeo total was one of the most interesting competitors in the tourney, Mrs. Charles T. Stout of Apawamis, winner of the first of these tourneys, back in 1900, and of three others and who had gained the first of her two national titles over this same course. Others were Mrs. W. S. Bird of Sleepy Hollow and Mrs. G. W. Savage of Deal. Just how close the members of this trio came to being crowded out was soon demonstrated. After the scores were all in they had to play off for the two remaining places in the championship division.

Mrs. Savage Put Out.

Late in the afternoon, when the sun had finally succeeded in penetrating the clouds, they started out. The first hole was halved in 6's, Mrs. Stout and Mrs. Savage topping their tee shots and taking four strokes to reach the green, while Mrs. Bird required three putts after getting home on her third. Mrs. Savage eliminated herself by topping three successive shots on the way to the next hole.

Miss Orcutt's feat of turning in the low medal was more or less expected, especially in view of the day, which put a premium on length. Nevertheless, she had no great margin, for Miss Marie Jenney of Hudson River and Mrs. Wright Goss of Baltusrol finished only a stroke behind her and each of them had the medal as good as won up to the last few holes. Miss Jenney, a tall, athletically built girl with a sound game that will carry her to further heights if it continues to show the improvement it has in the last two years, played the most consistent golf of any today, her card showing nothing worse than 6's and nothing better than 5's. One or two 3's at the short holes would have changed things considerably for her and Miss Orcutt.

If one had to single out the day's stars the choice would fall on Miss Orcutt, who is the present New Jersey State champion; Miss Jenney, Mrs. Goss and Mrs. Stout. It was the last of these who played the heroine rôle. For several years she has forsaken the links, and only because this year happened to be an anniversary did she consent to play. A week ago, just before her first competitive appearance in almost a decade, she purchased a new and therefore strange set of clubs. In spite of all this she succeeded in qualifying where so many others failed, and in spite of breaks, some deserved, others not, that would have disheartened a less resolute player. For instance, after she had gone out in 49, she ran into a nonsensical 9 at the very next hole.

Misses Tee Shot.

The details of how it all happened follow: She missed her tee shot and it went into a road. She was unable to get it out on her first attempt and went into a bunker on her next. Her fourth stroke went into another bunker and her fifth was on the edge of the green. Using a jigger to chip up, she went past the hole and then took three putts, failing to get down a four-footer for an 8. Considering that all this happened on a par 3, 150-yard hole, made it even more discouraging. From there on, though, she played bravely and while her short game and her putting showed rustiness, her long game was a sight for envious eyes.

Just a trifle less spectacular was the showing of Mrs. Goss, who has been out of competitive golf for a year or more. It took her two holes to get her bearings, taking 7s at each through topping and putting, but from there on to the seventeenth her play was admirable. Carrying on close to par, she came to the seventeenth with the medal almost in sight. Three putts from the edge of the green were costly enough, but a 7 on the home hole, resulting from two excursions into the trees, was even more so, when a 5 was all she required to win the medal.

Miss Orcutt's start was almost like Mrs. Goss's, for she, too, began with a pair of 7s. A dubbed drive started her on the road to her first 7, and four putts from quite close to the pin were responsible for her second. A birdie 2 at the next helped and she made the turn in 47. Her play from there on to the sixteenth was all that could be desired. At this one and the one following she wasted strokes on the putting green, and at the last hole she was trapped on her second shot and forced to play her third safe, giving her two 6s and a 7 to finish with. Mrs. Thomas Hucknall, the former New Jersey champion who was qualifying with her, led Miss Orcutt by two shots, going out only to lose them and several more coming home. An 8 at the eleventh, where she had a good drive only to be stymied by a tree, and two 7s at the sixteenth and seventeenth, where she was in bunkers, spoiled an otherwise excellent card. Unfamiliarity with a local rule gave Mrs. Jackson an 8 at the fourth hole and a penalty stroke for lifting out of a water hazard, plus too much putting, another 8 at the fourteenth. At the fourth, the pond hole, she got over the water on her drive, but her ball lay deeply imbedded in mud. Instead of lifting, as she might have done, she tried to play the stroke and only imbedded her ball deeper. As a result she was forced to lift with a two-stroke penalty and played five to the green when she might have played two. On the fourteenth she took four putts, three of them from a distance of four feet or less.

White Spats and Overalls Fail To Aid German in British Golf

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WESTWARD HO, England, May 25.—Hans Samek, stalwart German golfer, the first from the Fatherland to play in a British tourney since the World War, today was eliminated from the British amateur championship, but not until he had attracted as much attention as any individual ever did on any links. He has been practicing for the event in overalls, flowing to the arches in approved English fashion, but from underneath a pair of white spats have been glistened in the sun. Today, when he met defeat at the hands of Cyril Tolley, 4 and 3, he was in formal golfing attire, wearing a bright Scotch plaid jersey and enormous plus fours, but the white spats were missing. He said that he was "unfortunate in having met Tolley" in his first match.

HOLDERNESS LOSES ON THE HOME GREEN

GRANT DEFEATS WETHERED

Conquers Former Titleholder by 2 and 1—Dailey of Rochester Wins; Cochrane, Chicago, Loses.

WESTWARD HO, England, May 25 (AP).—The first day's play of the British amateur golf championship brought about the downfall of two of the "Big Three" stars favored above all others to capture the title and the trophy.

The reigning champion, Sir Ernest Holderness, was beaten on the eighteenth green by the Argentine champion, Robert A. Cruickshank, a native of Scotland, who for five years has lived in Buenos Aires. Roger Wethered, who held the amateur title two years ago, was vanquished by Douglas Grant, a former California champion and an American by birth, who for several years had had his home and business in England.

The margin of Grant's victory, achieved by golf that was sound and steady in every shot, was 2 up and 1 to play. The defeat of Wethered and Holderness leaves only Tolley remaining of the big three of Britain's amateur golfing world.

Halved First Two Holes.

Holderness and Cruickshank halved the first two holes in 5s. The Argentine player went 1 up at the third, where Holderness played poorly, but the champion squared the match at the fourth, only to go down at the short fifth where Cruickshank got a birdie 2. The next two holes were halved with par 4s. Cruickshank got a 3 to win the eighth and became 2 up.

Coming home Cruickshank, after winning the tenth with a 4 and squaring the eleventh and twelfth, was bunkered on the next two holes and lost both of them to become 1 up. The remaining holes were halved so that he retained his lead and triumphed over Holderness, who was out to win his third championship in four years.

Cruickshank's opponent for the third round tomorrow afternoon is D. Dalziel-Hollis of Northumberland, who today defeated the former French champion, G. D. Hannay.

Out—
Cruickshank	5	5	5	5	2	4	4	3	5—38
Holderness	5	5	6	4	3	4	4	5	5—41

Cruickshank	4	4	4	5	4	4	3	5	5—38—76
Holderness	5	4	4	4	3	4	5	5	5—37—78

Dailey Is a Victor.

Of the Americans who crossed the Atlantic to play in this championship, only two were called upon to show their wares today. One of them, J. F. Dailey of the Oak Hill Club, Rochester, N. Y., got through with a victory over C. T. Osborne of the Temple Golf Club by a score of 2 up and 1 to play. The other, L. V. Cochrane of the Onwentsia Club of Chicago, was conquered on the eighteenth green by last year's British boy champion, a nineteen-year-old Scotsman, Archibald Mathieson of Edinburgh.

Out—
Dailey	5	4	6	6	2	4	5	2	5—39
Osborne	4	5	5	7	4	5	5	4	7—46
In—
Dailey	4	6	5	6	4	4	3	5	—
Osborne	5	5	5	5	4	4	4	5	—

Out—
Mathieson	5	6	5	4	3	3	4	4	6—40
Cochrane	7	4	5	5	3	5	5	4	5—43
In—
Mathieson	4	6	5	4	5	4	3	6	5—42—82
Cochrane	5	5	4	5	4	4	4	5	5—41—84

The other two Americans who have entered the amateur championship, R. A. Stranahan of the Inverness Club, Toledo, Ohio, and A. F. Bourne of Garden City Club, New York, both drew first-round byes and therefore will not have to play until tomorrow.

Grant Has Fine Record.

Except for the defeats of Wethered and Holderness, there were no upsets in today's play. In fact, the defeat of Wethered was not in reality an upset, because Grant for several years has been one of the best amateurs in this country. The only thing that has prevented his election as a member of the Walker Cup team and other international teams has been his American nationality.

The former California champion is the holder of the amateur record for many of the best golf courses in the British Isles, this course and even the more difficult Royal St. George's links at Sandwich, which is his home course, being among them.

Years ago at Deal Grant reached the semi-finals, being eliminated by Robert Harris of Scotland on the same day that Roger Wethered disposed of Francis Ouimet in the other semi-final match. Wethered, who is spending the last part of his honeymoon here, had to fight an uphill battle from the start today, as Grant gained the lead almost as soon as the match began. Never lapsing into errors, he held and extended it and then tenaciously clung to his advantage until victory over the slim young Englishman came at the seventeenth hole.

The weather for the first day's play was variable, the morning being calm and balmy. At luncheon a wind arose and there followed for almost an hour a heavy downpour of rain. When the rain ceased the weather cleared completely and the final matches of the afternoon were played in brilliant sunshine.

WILLIAMS WINS ON LINKS.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., May 25.—Williams College golfers dealt out a surprisingly one-sided defeat to Dartmouth on the links here today, 7 points to 2. Only Captain Taft and one of the Dartmouth foursomes were able to turn in victories, the Green leader defeating Captain Comstock of Williams, 4 and 3. Dempsey Will Train Abroad; Cables for Boxing Supplies

"Send immediately two punching bags with six bladders, one pair boxing shoes, gym wear, punching bag gloves, Hotel Claridge, Paris."

DUNDEE TO FIGHT JOHNSTONS' CLAIM

Will Appear Before the Boxing Board Today to Explain the Dropping of Pilots.

The State Athletic Commission, at its meeting this morning, is scheduled to pass on the validity of Johnny Dundee's abrupt and complete withdrawal from business relations with the Johnston brothers, Jimmy and Charlie, Secretary Dan Skilling of the commission announced yesterday that the matter had been listed for judicial action at the request of Charlie Johnston, last manager of record for Dundee. Johnston subsequently announced that he has protested to the commission against Dundee's announced intention of ignoring a match with Sid Terris at the Coney Island Stadium, which Johnston said he had arranged for the Italian veteran, prior to Dundee's break with his former manager.

It is his purpose, Johnston said, to petition the commission to compel Dundee to fulfill his engagement and to seek to have the Italian veteran compelled to box at the Queensboro Stadium, Long Island City, on June 29, in a match which Charlie Johnston also claimed to have arranged before he and Dundee parted company. Jimmy Johnston announced that he will accompany his brother to this morning's commission session.

Speaking for his brother, Jimmy Johnston yesterday outlined the basis of his protest to the commission, asserting that the Terris match was made with Dundee's consent, although the Italian boxer has disclaimed any knowledge of the bout beyond announcements he read in the newspapers. In his petition to dissolve the partnership in which he was associated with the Johnston's, Dundee last Friday declared that his contract with Charlie expired on March 27 and that he had not renewed the document. Jimmy Johnston yesterday declared that Dundee's application for a renewal of his boxer's license expired on April 29 and that in his application for a renewal of the license Dundee included the name of Charlie Johnston as his manager.

QUEENSBORO SHOWTONIGHT

Terris to Clash With Paluso and Goldstein Will Face Taylor.

The cold weather of yesterday, following on the heavy downpour of Saturday night and Sunday, which drenched the arenas exposed to the elements, caused postponements of two outdoor boxing shows scheduled for last night in the local battle sector. The Queensboro Stadium, in Long Island City, has arranged to hold its show tonight, and the Oakland A. A. of Jersey City likewise plans to hold its attraction tonight.

At the Queensboro Stadium Sid Terris, promising east side youngster, will engage Lew Paluso of Salt Lake City in a return bout of ten rounds. Abe Goldstein, former world's bantamweight champion, will face Bud Taylor, Terre Haute (Ind.) bantamweight, in the ten-round semi-final. Bud Dempsey and Lew Hurley, Harlem ring rivals, are to clash in the first of the ten-round events.

Three ten-round bouts are down for decision at the Oakland. The principals will be Corporal Izzy Schwartz vs. Joey Rose; Murray Layton vs. Joe Clifford; Mickey Walters vs. Giovanni Salerno.

A ten-round bout between Tony Palmer and Artie O'Leary features the card arranged for the Twenty-seventh Division Train Armory in Brooklyn tonight. Abe Fruchtman and Billy Ryckoff will clash in the eight-round semi-final.

WANDERERS IN TIE GAME.

MONTREAL, Quebec, May 25.—The Brooklyn Wanderers played a fast game against the Province of Quebec soccer team here today, but were unable to score and the contest ended in a scoreless tie. Although Nelson, Hasle, Yule and Hogg had frequent chances to tally their efforts were nullified by the splendid work of the Quebec goal tender, who spent a busy afternoon as the Brooklyn team attacked with persistence. The game was said by critics to be the fastest and most sensational seen in Canada this year.

Jack Sharkey Beats George Cook.

PAAVO NURMI READY FOR FAREWELL RACE

Paavo Nurmi takes his competitive farewell of America tonight. In the Yankee Stadium, on the occasion of the first outdoor athletic meet at night to be held in this city, the wonderful Finish runner is to make his last appearance in competition here. Nurmi will run in a special half-mile race, in which his chief rival will be Alan Helffrich, Penn State flier, and the objective will be a closing bid to add to the remarkable string of records and track exploits provided by Nurmi since his arrival here.

The event is the feature attraction on a promising card arranged under the auspices of the Finnish-American A. C., and is expected to be witnessed by a large gathering if the weather is favorable. Nurmi is scheduled to sail for his native Finland on Thursday.

Nurmi will seek tonight to improve on the nine-year-old record of Ted Meredith —1:52 1-5— for the half-mile. The Finn, victorious in all but one of the scratch races in which he has competed since the start of his American campaign, last Jan. 6, is reported in superb condition. He had his final workout in preparation for the race yesterday and expressed satisfaction with his condition. Helffrich, too, went through a last drill in anticipation of the race and appeared in excellent condition.

The race is scheduled for 10 o'clock as the closing feature of a program which will be started at 7:45 o'clock this evening. It is expected that this early start will enable the promoters to conduct part of the program in daylight. When dusk settles over the field powerful lights are to be turned on, so that the competitors will be visible to the crowd at all times.

Coaches Favor Helffrich.

Nurmi, conqueror of all who have opposed him in races at from three-quarters of a mile up to 10,000 meters since his arrival here, will have the sensation of going to the post tonight a second choice. Close followers of athletics, among them officials and coaches who have years of experience to support their predictions, have expressed a preference for the chances of Helffrich to win the struggle.

The attention of the public is naturally riveted upon Nurmi and Helffrich, although Willie Sullivan, Georgetown runner, is scheduled to race, and John J. Barnes, St. Anselm's A. C. runner and former local champion, also is entered. It was announced yesterday that Sullivan's participation in the race, however, is doubtful because he presumably will not be able to get away from Georgetown for the race.

Nurmi will strike to do a 1:50 half-mile against Helffrich. According to Hugo Quist, his American adviser and trainer, the Finn plans his race so as to run the first quarter in 54 seconds and the second double furlong in 56 seconds. That even the great Nurmi is capable of this time is doubted by Nate Cartmell, Penn State coach, and Lawson Robertson, Pennsylvania track mentor, who was in charge of America's athletes at the last Olympic Games. Moreover, Robertson has expressed the opinion that Helffrich will flash his heels in the face of Nurmi when they speed over the finish line tonight.

Hour Race to Open Program.

The program will open with a one-hour race which will witness the début of Albin Stenroos, Finland's marathon runner who holds the Olympic title for the classic distance. Arrayed against Stenroos will be Charles L. (Chuck) Mellor, American marathon champion; Jimmy Henigan, Boston veteran; William Kosnl, runner-up to Willie Ritola last Saturday in the Bronx-to-City Hall marathon; Fred Wachsmuth, national hill and dale champion, and Willie Kyronen, Finnish-American A. C. veteran.

This race will be followed by a 440-yard handicap run and a 100-yard special sprint.

BAYSIDE HANDICAP TO AMERICAN FLAG

ROYALITE TAKES DOMINO

Has 4 Lengths' Margin Over Tester —Bombshell Scores in Woodmere —30-1 Shot Captures Sixth.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Running like a colt of the first class the Glen Riddle Farm's Man o' War colt, American Flag, easily accounted for the Bayside Handicap at the Belmont Park course yesterday and thereby qualified for the Withers Stakes which will be run on Thursday afternoon. Shouldering top weight of 130 pounds and with Johnson in the saddle, American Flag, which looks more like his sire than any of the others of the latter's get, ran the mile in 1:40 over a track deep in slop and finished with such speed that he appeared to outclass the other three in the race.

The Bayside, restricted to the three-year-olds, was the featured number of an interesting card which was nearly ruined by scratches due to the changed track condition. The weather was about as unpleasant as is encountered all season and the cold kept all but the inveterate regulars from the course. Winter clothing was in order, but the spectators who stuck through the six races were rewarded by seeing five favorites come first to the wire.

American Flag paraded to the post in the perfection of condition for his first start as a three-year-old. He is partial to heavy going and two of his two-year-old victories were scored in the slop at Saratoga. Only four faced the barrier out of an entry of thirteen and the Riddle colt was the even-money favorite, James Butler's Bright Steel being the second choice at 9 to 5.

Bright Steel flashed to the fore when the barrier snapped, but quickly gave place to A. C. Bostwick's Scorcher, which had shown fine form in his Maryland racing. American Flag was slow to gain his stride but Johnson did not hurry with him. He moved up gradually on the outside from last position, keeping out in the best of the going. He took command in the stretch with consumate ease and won breezing four lengths in front of Scorcher.

Hildreth Saddles a Winner.

Bright Steel does not fancy the mud and while he was hard ridden by Coltiletti failed to race up to his recent form, finishing a length and a half back of Scorcher. George D. Widener's Felix was outrun from the start. The fractional times for the race were as follows: 0:24, 0:47 2-5, 1:13, 1:40. The second quarter was run in 0:23 2-5, the third in :23 flat and the fourth, in which American Flag was eased up, was run in 0:27 flat. American Flag conceded three pounds to Bright Steel, thirteen to Felix and fifteen to Scorcher.

Scratches cut the field in the race for the Domino Purse from fourteen to five. It was a dash of six furlongs on the main course for three-year-olds and upward. Sam Hildreth saddled the winner for the Rancocas Stable in the filly Royalite, which has run some of her best races in the mud. She liked the going and led the field from the rise of the barrier to win easily by four lengths from G. C. Winfrey's Tester.

Around the far turn W. S. Kilmer's Sunsard challenged the filly, but could not hold the pace and tired from his efforts on the outside. Tester was outrun in the early part of the race, came through on the inside in the stretch run and outgamed Sunsard to take the place by three-quarters of a length. The winner, which had Laverne Fator up, was a 9-to-10 favorite. She raced the distance in 1:13 and it was her third victory in as many starts this season.

The thirteen two-olds that ran the four and a half furlongs of the straight course in the race for the Woodmere Purse ran all over the track in the early part of the race, and there was a good deal of bumping and swerving. Failure to run a straight course undoubtedly cost S. Pettitt's colt Happy Birthday the race, for he had a lot of early speed and tired in the last sixteenth.

There was a good start up the chute, Happy Birthday taking an early lead and opening a length on Mrs. Joseph Scisscaluga's Hand Grenade colt Bombshell, the 11-to-5 favorite. Bombshell was always nearest the leader, drew clear at the paddock gate and won by a length and a half in a driving finish. Happy Birthday had a head advantage over A. B. Gordon's Pecora at the finish. The race was run in 0:54 4-5.

Form Students Jolted.

Woods Garth's Crimper filly Ingrid, a despised outsider at 30 to 1, was the winner of the Bramble Rose Purse, a dash of four and a half furlongs on the straight course for two-year-old maidens. Eight ran and the winner was the last to go home. In her previous start she had been left at the post and she might as well have been this time for all the chance she seemed to have. But she ran straight and worked her way through the field, drawing away in the last furlong to win in a driving finish by a length and a half from Mrs. K. W. Hitt's Skipalong, the 7-to-5 favorite. J. S. Cosden's Shampoo took third money.

PROGRAM BOOKS OUT FOR AQUEDUCT MEET

$10,000 Brooklyn Handicap to Feature Opening of Summer Meeting on June 15.

The Summer meeting of the Queens County Jockey Club will open at the Aqueduct race course on Monday, June 15, with the thirty-seventh running of the famous old Brooklyn Handicap as the feature of the first day's card. Books for the twenty-day meeting were distributed yesterday by Racing Secretary Fred Rehberger.

The Brooklyn Handicap at a mile and a furlong for 3-year-olds and upward, with a value of $10,000, should be one of the really great races of the year. All of the stars were named among the seventy-eight nominations, among them being Sarazen, Ladkin, Sting, Spot Cash, Wise Counsellor, Ordinance, Mad Play and others. A number of the best of the 3-year-olds may go to the post in the classic.

Another stake for the first day is the Bayside Claiming Steeplechase, which drew thirty-three nominations. The Queens County Handicap, with $5,000 in added money, is another of the important stakes for three-year-olds and upward and will be run for the twentieth time on the first Saturday of the meeting. There were seventy-five nominations for the stake, with the best that were named for the Brooklyn included.

One hundred and fifty-seven two-year-olds were nominated for the thirty-fifth running of the $10,000 Great American Stakes, which will be run over the five-furlong course on Saturday, June 27.

The $5,000 Carter Handicap, at seven furlongs, will be run on Thursday, July 2. Probably the best racing of the meeting will be on the holiday, Saturday, July 4, when the $10,000 Tremont Stakes, for two-year-olds, and the Dwyer, for fillies and entire colts, will be run. It was in the latter that Man o' War and John P. Grier had their great duel in 1920.

Many Wager Pennies on Butcher's Horse To Beat King's in Classic English Derby

LONDON, May 25 (AP).—England punctuates its sporting season with periodical big events, and Britishers high and low are looking forward to one of the exclamation points in the classic mile-and-a-half race for the Derby Stakes over the historic course at Epsom Downs, to be run Wednesday.

It is the one racing event of the year when all England turns out, and nimble workers rub shoulders with the highest in the land as the three-year-olds sprint down the homestretch.

Derby Day is always the most colorful of the Summer racing events, not even excepting Ascot Week, and the prospects of fine weather held out by the meteorological experts promises to make the 1925 running among the most picturesque in the series.

From the point of view of the mere connoisseur of racing flesh, however, the race is not likely to be so interesting, for the year's entries are admittedly below the usual standard.

The latest London betting shows Lord Astor's Cross Bow and E. R. Morris's Manna to be joint favorites at 5 to 1 against. Lord Derby's Conquistador and Captain Jefferson Davis Cohen's Solferino II. each quoted at 10 to 1 against; Solario, 100 to 7 against; Runnymede and St. Boom, each at 100 to 6 against; Dignity and Zionist, each at 20 to 1 against, and Vicot, 33 to 1, taken and offered.

Ptolemy II., despite the fact that he arrived from France in the greatest of splendor last week, accompanied by detectives and with the utmost precautions taken to assure against accident, will be unable before he goes to the starting post to overcome the unfavorable impression caused by his loss of the French 2,000 Guineas race.

For the first time in a number of years one of the King's horses, Runaymede, is conceded more than an outside chance at the coveted honor, and, although only quoted at 100 to 6, he has been figured by a number of experts to place, at least.

The American interests in the event are represented by A. K. Macomber's Sirdar, which is considered an outsider. He will be ridden by Frank O'Neill, American jockey, who has had much success on the French turf.

Steve Donoghue, England's star rider, will have the leg up on Manna, while the American jockey George Archibald will ride Priory Park, owned by a Chichester butcher, and upon which, at long odds, nearly every man, woman and child in Chichester has placed something, from a penny up.

WILSON BEATS KUHN IN STRAIGHT SETS

BEHR PUTS OUT FISHER

Turns Back Brooklyn Player, 6-3, 7-9, 7-5, After Two-Hour Battle at Kew Gardens.

Chop stroke met chop stroke yesterday in the Queensboro tennis championship, and Ernest Kuhn, who sliced his way to an unexpected victory over Percy L. Kynaston on Sunday, dropped out of the running for the title at the Kew Gardens Country Club. E. W. Wilson, who as a senior at the University of Chicago won the Western collegiate title last year and who resides in Bronxville, showed himself to be a better exponent than Kuhn of the stroke made famous by Wallace F. Johnson, and defeated the former George Washington High School star at 6—4, 6—4.

This match, which was played in the third round, was started on Sunday and was halted by rain with the score at 4—2 in the first set. When the match was taken up yesterday Kuhn knew what he was up against and never trifled for a moment. He played on practically even terms with Wilson, winning two games to the other's two as the first set came to a finish and losing the second set by the margin of a single break.

Both players chopped continually, varying their stroke occasionally with a stinging drive or a well made volley as the opportunity was afforded for a safe advance. The style of the two was almost exactly the same. Wilson was a little the more aggressive, planned his shots strategically for his openings and timed his advances to the net with admirable discretion. It took his best to beat Kuhn, who made any number of beautiful shots, often sticking the ball through the narrowest openings and bringing Wilson's rush to the net to a halt.

Fisher Bows to Behr.

In another match that was started on Sunday and came to a halt after a few games had been played, Allan Behr defeated Kenneth Fisher of Brooklyn at 6—3, 7—9, 7—5. The most desperate struggle of the tournament thus far was furnished in this meeting. For over two hours the players were on the courts, engaging in long, hard-hitting rallies from back court. Behr had a good chance to win the match in the second set when he led at 6—5, and in the third set Fisher looked an almost certain winner when he led at 5—2. Making a marvelous uphill fight, Behr outlasted and outsteadied Fisher in one driving duel after another and took five games in a row. The defeat of Fisher marked the elimination of the third seeded player in the tourney.

Behr will meet J. Cecil Donaldson of the Terrace Club of Brooklyn in the fourth round. Donaldson, who stood out as one of the best of the boy players in the East a few years ago, was in fine form yesterday and gained a decisive victory over W. Cauldwell at 6—3, 6—1. Donaldson's ground strokes kept Cauldwell in his back court and in the second set the Brooklyn star killed off the returns at the net with a pretty exhibition of volleying.

Hugh Oakley, who was seeded seventh in the draw, was the fourth favorite to pass from the play. S. Onda defeated him in the fourth round and gained a place in the round before the semi-finals.

The score was 6—4, 6—8. Three other players reached this round, filling all the brackets in the upper half and one in the lower. Ralph De Mott advanced at the expense of J. A. Carter Jr., 6—0, 6—1, and is now bracketed with S. Howard Voshell, the defending titleholder, who did not play yesterday. The two other fifth round brackets in the upper half are filled by Anton F. von Bernuth of Montclair and Reginald Talmadge, club mate of Donaldson from the Terrace Club.

Von Bernuth Extended.

Von Bernuth put out J. M. Greer after meeting with unexpectedly stiff opposition, winning at 6—4, 8—6. Greer put up a fight every bit of the way, playing aggressively and outsteadying Von Bernuth many times when points meant games. Talmadge was carried to three sets by Donald Lay. After sweeping through the first set with the loss of only a single game he slackened his pace in the second set and Lay, playing with much improvement, held him on even terms until 4—all was reached, after which Talmadge hit into a streak of error making and lost the set. Talmadge was at his best in the final set. His forehand drives streaked through the court and he backed them up in faultless fashion at the net. He allowed Lay only two games in the set.

In the lower half Zenzo Shimizu is bracketed with Dr. Wilson Rosenbaum. Behr with Donaldson and Walter Abels with Wilson. These fourth round matches will be played today and the brackets in the round before the semi-finals will be completed.

The summaries:

Third Round—J. Cecil Donaldson defeated W. Cauldwell, 6—3, 6—1; E. W. Wilson defeated Ernest Kuhn, 6—4, 6—4; Allan Behr defeated Kenneth D. Fisher, 6—3, 7—9, 7—5; Donald Lay defeated Chan Burroughs, 6—3, 6—3 and default.

Fourth Round—Reginald Talmadge defeated Lay, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2; Anton F. Von Bernuth defeated J. M. Greer, 6—4, 8—6; Ralph De Mott defeated J. A. Carter Jr., 6—0, 6—1; S. Onda defeated Hugh Oakley, 6—4, 6—3.

RUBINSTEIN LEADS CHESS PLAY AGAIN

Torre	2	1	Opocensky	0	4

MARIENBAD, Czechoslovakia, May 25.—By defeating Dr. Tartakower of Vienna in a queen's gambit declined in brilliant fashion in the fourth round today, Rubinstein of Poland wrested the lead from the Austrian master in the International Chess Masters, Tournament at the Kurhaus. Rubinstein had the white pieces and the game last forty-seven moves.

Gruenfeld of Austria won from Haida of Hungary and went into second place. Haida declined Gruenfeld's queen's gambit, but lost a pawn in the middle game and resigned after forty-six moves.

Next in order is Marshall, the United States champion, who defeated Opocensky of Hungary in forty-eight moves. The American selected the queen's pawn opening and took full advantage of an oversight committed by Opocensky.

Torre, the New York State champion, played the Dutch defense against Janowski of Paris and a draw was agreed upon after thirty-four moves.

Saemisch of Germany won from Michell of England by means of a clever combination involving a sacrifice after thirty-six moves. Michell had the black side of a queen's gambit declined.

Reti of Czechoslovakia adopted Alekhine's defense against Yates of England. Repetition of moves, after sixty-three had been recorded, brought about a draw.

A perpetual check ended the game between Przepiorka of Poland and Niemzowitsch of Denmark, who agreed to a draw in twenty-seven moves. Przepiorka played the queen's pawn opening.

Spielmann of Austria adopted the French defense against Sir George Thomas of England. This game was adjourned after fifty-six moves, at which time the position looked favorable for the baronet.

In the fifth round, tomorrow, the following will be the pairings: Tartakower vs. Saemisch, Reti vs. Rubinstein, Spielmann vs. Yates, Haida vs. Thomas, Torre vs. Gruenfeld, Opocensky vs. Janowski, Niemzowitsch vs. Marshall and Michell vs. Przepiorka.

MOESKOPS RIDES TONIGHT.

Three cycling features are scheduled for night at the New York Velodrome, the principal attraction being a mile match race in which Pete Moeskops, Hollander, who holds the world's cycling title, will race against Orlando Piani, Italian sprint star, and Alex McBeath, speedy Australian. Under the rules of this event the rider first winning two heats will be declared the winner.

Another mile match race will witness the season's début of Harris Horder, Australian, at the uptown saucer. Horder is to ride against Alf Goullet, American's premier all-around cyclist, in a race which will be decided best two in three heats. The third feature will be a twenty-mile motor-paced race in which George Chapman, American champion, will be opposed by Vincent Madonna, Italian; Sammy Gastman, Newark rider, and Dan Pichione, Providence cyclist.

A two-thirds of a mile handicap, miss and out invitation and a five-mile open race are other events scheduled for professional riders. For the amateurs Manager Johnny Chapman has arranaged a half-mile handicap, miss and out open and a one-mile novice race.

Post and Paddock

One of the best things of the Spring went wrong in the second race when Happy Birthday was beaten. A chosen few had the colt for a certainty and he was backed from 10 to 1 to 4 to 1 at post time.

Bombshell, which beat Happy Birthday, was bred in California by the late Adolph Spreckels. He is a nice bay colt by Hand Grenade, the latter having been bought by Mr. Spreckels a few years ago from A. K. Macomber for $10,000.

Royalite, which won the Domino Purse for the Rancocas Stable, is a great favorite of Sam Hildreth, who went to the enclosure when the filly came back to see personally that she was well cared for. She is bred for extreme speed and should make a great broodmare for the Rancocas farm some day.

American Flag qualified for the Withers. Gwyn Tompkins said yesterday afternoon that the Man o' War colt would surely be a starter next Thursday. He was not quite ready for the running of the Preakness and Tompkins wouldn't take a chance with him.

Strange to relate, the Butler colors were second, third and unplaced in three starts.

There were fifty-two scratches out of a total of ninety-seven entries, due to track conditions. It was one day when scratching was justified.

A sale of horses in training will be held at Belmont Park on Saturday, June 6, by the Fasig-Tipton Company.

2 Brothers, First on Record, Row on Navy Varsity Eight

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 25.—For the first time in the history of rowing at the Naval Academy two brothers are members of the same varsity eight, and these two giant oarsmen, D. T. Eddy, who strokes the crew, and W. C. Eddy, No. 2, have been big factors in the success of the Navy's eight. This Summer a third brother will enter the academy and join the rowing squad. Syracuse, which raced Navy and Harvard here last Saturday, has remained over for practice here in preparation for the American Henley at Philadelphia next Saturday. The Navy and Syracuse varsity, junior varsity and freshman crews will take part in the big regatta.

MULDOON CELEBRATES HIS 80TH BIRTHDAY

The eightieth birthday of William Muldoon, member of the State Athletic Commission, former Chairman of the board and for the greater part of his life associated with wrestling and boxing as competitor, trainer, instructor or adviser, was celebrated quietly last night in the east ballroom of the Hotel Belmore, at a dinner at which Bernard F. Gimbel was host. The dinner was a private affair at which only a select few were in attendance, out of respect to the wishes of Muldoon, that the occasion be not too elaborate.

Those who attended the celebration for the venerable sports leader whose athletic appearance, firm carriage and vigor belie his four-score years, were: George E. Brewer, Arthur Brisbane, John McE. Bowman, Thomas Chesney, William J. Duffy, Howard Davis, William H. Edwards, Isaac Gimbel, Frederick A. Gimble, Bernard F. Gimbel, James A. Farley, Walter G. Rooke, Joseph M. Hartfield, Charles F. Mathison, Alfred E. Norris, John H. O'Brien, Joseph Oppenheimer, Colonel John J. Phelan, William H. Rocap, Ogden Reid, George L. (Wex) Rickard, Herbert Bayard Swope, Augustus Thomas, George R. Van Namee, Guy Ward, C. W. Watson and Senator James J. Walker.

THE RIGHT TO PUBLISH A PUBLIC DOCUMENT.

Few can have been surprised at the decision of the Supreme Court upholding the right of the newspapers to publish payments of income taxes after they had been made public by the collectors of internal revenue. All the cases had been decided by the lower courts against the contention of the Government. It is true that there were some ambiguities and one seeming contradiction in the statute relating to publicity of income tax payments. But the intent of Congress seemed clear. It positively directed collectors of internal revenue to post the lists in a place accessible to the public. If this did not make them a public document, it is hard to conceive what could. The newspapers simply printed what every interested person could read in the collector's office, if he would take the trouble to go there. Newspapers did not publish the partial list of names and payments without getting the advice of counsel that such a course was legal, and that advice is now established by the Supreme Court as having been entirely sound.

Prosecutions of several newspapers by the Department of Justice were doubtless not intended in any oppressive sense or meant to interfere with the rightful freedom of the press. The aim was presumably to make a clear test of the law. That has now been had, and if any change in the practice is to follow it must be by act of Congress. Some Congressmen were willing to hide behind the alleged indefiniteness of the Revenue bill. They can do so no longer. If the majority of Congress believes that the publication of income tax payments does harm, politically, commercially and socially, all it has to do is to repeal the amendment of the statute enacted last year and put the law back where it was before, providing as it did that income tax returns and payments should be held secret. Concerning the probability that Congress will do anything of the kind, one man's guess is as good as another's. Our guess is that it will not think of doing it.

SECURITY FOR FRANCE.

Conversations between Paris and London in the matter of the German security proposal are not making headway. Our Paris correspondent speaks of something like an impasse. Great Britain thinks of security and peace only along the Rhine. France insists that she cannot purchase security for herself at the cost of her allies in Central and Eastern Europe, if, indeed, security in Western Europe is conceivable in the case of war in the heart of the Continent. To the Berlin offer of a neutral zone along the Rhine which Germany pledges herself never to cross in return for a similar pledge by France the Briand draft note replies that France cannot agree to abandon her smaller allies. Mr. CHAMBERLAIN is apparently sympathetic to the Briand point of view. The British Foreign Minister appears to believe that, having brushed aside the general European guarantees proposed in the Geneva Protocol, some other form of guarantee is called for.

If certain things had not happened, among them the World War with its scraps of paper, the present French attitude would not be easily defensible. Since the professed desire of the French people is to be freed from the menace of invasion, a German security pact with England's signature attached should suffice. France would no longer stand in need of the policy of alliances which brought her into association with Russia and which now regards the small nationalities of Central Europe as a substitute for Russia. On the plea that charity begins at home, France could turn her back on Czechoslovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia and Rumania and leave them to shift for themselves.

If France refuses to contemplate such a contingency, it is for two reasons. Since the armistice she has had experience with promises of security which have come to naught. She gave up her claims to a permanent place on the Rhine in return for the tripartite guarantee of protection which speedily came to grief. She dares not now even intimate the possibility of casting off her Central European allies without securing beforehand assurance of the promised English alliance. There are other considerations. FRANCESCO NITTI, who is far from Francophile, has just declared that a guarantee pact among Great Britain, France and Belgium "would drive "Germany into fresh alliances with "the Eastern European States." France can hardly be expected to face the possibility of the new States of Central Europe, left to themselves, entering perforce into the German circle of influence.

For the smaller nations the alternative to such submission to Germany would be war. This raises the question whether war in the heart of Europe, affecting some seventy-five million people on either side, could be kept away from the rest of the Continent. The majority opinion in Great Britain believes that it can be done. France is convinced that it cannot. In claiming the right to come to the aid of France's allies in case of an attack by Germany, M. BRIAND can argue that the peace of Europe may be rendered more secure by setting up a warning against German aggression. This would be in line with the widespread opinion that if Germany had been convinced of the inevitability of British intervention in 1914 she would not have gone to war.

AMUNDSEN'S HAZARDS.

In any speculation about the fortunes of the Amundsen expedition it should be considered that no more fuel was carried than would last for flying out, back to King's Bay and about 180 miles further. AMUNDSEN could not afford to spend a gallon of oil in looking for the land supposed to exist somewhere between the Pole and Alaska. But it might be his plan to make a march for a few days away from the Pole and in the direction of Alaska to discover the fringe of the "unknown land," leaving his planes in "camp" and ready to fly back to Spitzbergen when he returned from his reconnoissance. His party was made up for a flight to the Pole and not for pushing over ice fields, building igloos every night and doing all the rough, difficult and dangerous work of Arctic exploration.

As AMUNDSEN asked for a promise of three or four days of good weather it may be assumed that he had no intention of attempting more than a passage to the Pole and back. If he succeeded in attaining it, his thought would be that, as the weather might change, it was his duty to give the word for the return to King's Bay as soon as observations were taken. Therefore the lengthening hours of silence can but deepen the impression that ill fortune of some kind has befallen the expedition. The chances were all in favor of flying the distance to the Pole. If the planes were not too heavily loaded, landings should have been feasible, provided smooth ice could be found. It would be foolish to blink the hazard of meeting with so much "pressure ridge" that a crash could not be avoided. In that case the flying days of the expedition would be over, and there would remain for the survivors a march to PEARY's base at Cape Columbia. That might prove perilous on account of the leads, or open water, to be crossed and the lack of dogs to draw the sleds. The inexperience of some of AMUNDSEN's comrades would also weigh in the scale against success.

PEARY, with the toughest of his dogs drawing the sleds, so that his party of six could travel light, was fifty-three days on the march from Cape Columbia to the Pole and back. On the way up he worked in relays with BARTLETT, MACMILLAN and MARVIN, who went ahead to make a trail. One after another they were sent back until the time came to make the final dash with HENSON and the four hardest Eskimos of his party. Altogether more than 160 dogs were employed. At the Pole PEARY left a record in which he said: "Arrived here today (April 6, "1909), twenty-seven marches from "C. Columbia. I have with me five "men, MATTHEW HENSON, colored; "OOTAH, EGINGWAH, SEEGLOO and "OOKEAH, Eskimos." All these men were seasoned icemen and skillful handlers of dogs. "Leads," which occur at all times in the Arctic, were PEARY's nightmare. He was constantly worrying about them. On the march to the Pole he was once held up for five days by open water. One day on his final march to the Pole he "crossed "seven leads, each being from half a "mile to one mile in width, all cov-"ered with barely negotiable young "ice." On March 28 "leads" opened suddenly in his igloo camp. The sleds were saved after hard work. It was in one of these "leads" that his able lieutenant, Ross G. MARVIN, perished. AMUNDSEN prepared for the open water that he would encounter in a march to Cape Columbia by adding a canvas boat to his equipment, but the use of it would be an experiment. His party would be handicapped by having to carry its equipment and supplies over the ice. It is doubtful whether their rations would hold out if many delays on the march occurred. Dependence upon game killed with their rifles would be precarious.

IMPORTS OF RUBBER.

English statesmen have plaintively asked, the British Ambassador asked only last week, how the United States could expect the British debt to us to be paid if we did not facilitate the import of British goods. One answer to that question has just been furnished by the Department of Commerce. It has been for some time making an expert study of the growth, supply, importation and prices of crude rubber. The results are now published, and show that Great Britain controls rubber plantations in the East Indies the product of which will alone be sufficient to pay off her war debt to this country. We have to buy abroad the raw rubber of which we consume more than any other nation. The price has rapidly been pushed up in recent months, owing partly to a scheme to limit production which has been put into effect by the British Colonial Office. Exports of rubber to the United States amounted to $185,000,000 during 1924, and if the prices remain where they now are the same amount of material will cost us $400,000,000 in 1925.

In referring to the threatened scarcity of rubber, with its rising prices, the Secretary of Commerce points to the need of stimulating competitive production "in other tropical areas." What these are Mr. HOOVER does not specify. Doubtless he has in mind the Philippine Islands. Several of them are reported by American experts to be admirably fitted for rubber culture. What is first needed is the organization of developing companies with large capital behind them. But American capital is not in these days flowing freely for investment in the Philippines. The reasons are well known. Political uncertainties and the lack of efficient guarantees of a stable Government do not tempt capital. The situation respecting our supply of rubber is thus only one more argument for the need of taking steps to assure in the Philippines a régime under which the resources of the islands can be enlarged and utilized in a way to benefit all.

WANTED: A CHARTER FOR BUSINESS.

In the June Scribner's Senator BRUCE of Maryland reviews with great learning the "strides of Federal authority." He begins with the Virginia and the New Jersey plans of 1787 and comes down to the prohibition amendment. But he fails to note clearly the factor which has made our "recent strides" so great. The Federal Government has largely taken over the regulation of our affairs because, in point of fact, our affairs have so largely ceased to be local and become national. Thus the prohibitionists, to give the Puritan his due, sought their remedy through long years of strife in the several States, and were defeated by the fact that commerce in intoxicants is interstate. It is not so much a constitutional theory that confronts us as a condition which has been transformed.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, established in 1887, was and is abominated only less cordially than the abuses it was framed to remedy. Yet it is the great prototype of an institution—the administrative tribunal—which has transformed our actual Constitution—adding, as JUDSON has latterly said, a fourth "department of government" to legislature, executive and judiciary. As early as 1880 Viscount GOSCHEN diagnosed the new development in an address on "Laissez Faire and Government Interference." In 1900 Professor GIDDINGS defended the new order against the "constitutional" doctrine of WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER. But it remained for Professor ROSCOE POUND, in 1919, to write most luminously of "The Administrative Application of Legal Standards," deprecating the common cry that "government by commission" foreshadows "a decadence of constitutional government" and "a decline in liberty." Rather, he urges "a greater reliance upon standards and less upon rules; more attention to the application of legal standards and less to their abstract content." In the world of affairs today "the exigencies of economic life call for swift-moving, preventive justice." The Interstate Commerce Commission has steadily extended and consolidated its powers. The Federal Trade Commission has a record of blundering futility; but if instead of speeding its reformation we abolish it, we shall take no step back to the Constitution, but rather retrace a step which, however halting, led forward to it.

Business is progressively integrating into units more vast and more powerful than some of our "sovereign" States. The railways, the steel and other companies and literally thousands of trade associations exist without the law—except as they come in for blindly repressive measures. Surely the fathers would have extended to them also the right of freedom, of self-government. Secretary HOOVER thinks in these terms. And in the absence of a basic law, of a Magna Charta for industrial groups, he can at best hold up the example of physicians and engineers—influence business men to the higher ethical standards of the professions. But as the greatest of the fathers said, "Influence is not government." If business is to be really free, it must have a law to warrant new conditions and practices—and in all probability that will be a law of capable application only through the "swift-moving justice" of the administrative tribunal.

CONFINED RIDICULE.

When EDMUND BURKE was a student at Trinity College, Dublin, he was a member of a literary club that used to have set debates on questions of high import. One of them was whether public men ought to be treated with ridicule. Some argued that this was unfitting, but the minutes of the society recorded the fact that "Mr. BURKE held that a confined ridicule might be used." It certainly might be in the case of the latest Hearstian blandishments addressed to Governor SMITH in the interest of Mayor HYLAN. There is a United States Senator to be elected next year from New York. Also a Governor. Also in 1928 a President of the United States. All these officers could easily be Democrats if only there were perfect harmony in the party in this city. Let Mr. HYLAN be elected in one grand burst of brotherly love, and all the rest could follow. It is a lovely bribe to offer Governor SMITH.

It would be just like him, however, to laugh at it. No one can know better than he what value to attach to this sudden offer of support. After having been attacked and vilified so long by the Hearst newspapers, he can hardly figure himself as becoming their hero. He would know, as would everybody else, that if they stayed their hand against him it would be only till after the Mayoralty election. So if he takes any notice at all of this magnanimous gesture of his inveterate enemy, it will probably be only to treat it with ridicule not too confined. And this move of desperation must awaken in the heart of Tammany a joy that is unconfined.

VOTE AS YOU EAT!

If we venerate a questionnaire, we adore a referendum. A momentous one is going on this week under the auspices of the United Restaurant Owners' Association. These gentlemen have nominated a ticket of twenty-four dishes. "Vote for your favorite dish!" the ballot commands. The independent voter is at a disadvantage, as usual. If he doesn't find the name of his best-beloved cate on the official list, he can write it in. What chance will he have against the régulars? On the whole, it is a bourgeois list, though steaks and chops, not long ago regarded as the main fuel of American energy, are absent, perhaps on account of the price. Filet mignon is the chief reminder of the days when people ate for pleasure, not for vitamins. In many respects it is a "well-balanced" ticket. Thus Hamburger steak, which is easy, is corrected by boiled shad, which is laborious.

It is pleasant to know that filet of sole retains its wonted honors. There is something characteristically engaging and American about this. What true American wouldn't despise it if it dared to show itself as filet of flounder? Then there is broiled halibut, that conscientious, solid, respectable, sea-born treasure with all the virtues except taste. There is chicken salad, presumably for the ladies. No pie, the nurse of statesmen. No cake. No ice cream, perhaps taken for granted and out of the competition. Leg of lamb, roast beef, roast pork are life-members of the house of solid food. Tongue and spinach reminds us somehow of NEBUCHADNEZZAR, doubtless because so much spinach carries a faint memory of hay. Incidentally, why do the Dutch eat eggs and spinach, gingerbread and cheese, for breakfast? But what in the ticket looks kindest to the tolerant and unsnobbish palate? We vote for beef à la mode, lamb stew, pot roast, beef stew, corned beef and cabbage, corned beef hash.

We mustn't look in these gilded refectories for "beef and" and "ham and," once the sustenance of millions, the glory of OLIVER HITCHCOCK's and DOLAN's, of JOHNNY MEEHAN and "Handsome HARRY," the pride of Park Row. Though many doctors are Pythagoreans, successors, if too few, of those immortal artists still serve the Boston berry with its companion slabs of beef or ham and those hot "sinkers," of which only strong men are worthy. Chicken fricassee is on the regular ticket. What has become of chicken à la Maryland? But these are frivolities unfit for the consideration of a referendum, which is likewise to be a "survey" of 1,000,000 stomachs. There needs no referendum to show what the favorite American dish, a hundred years ago salt pork three times a day, was in 1924 and is in 1925. Husky chaps encompass it with satisfaction as they go about their business on the sidewalk. Through the windows of a cafeteria men, and even flappers, may be seen struggling with it. It barks from endless miles of roads cluttered up by cars innumerable: "Fry the franks!" "Try Ed's Eats!" "Drive in and get the prize puppies!" "Hot dogs and root beer!"

Anybody who "trembles for the future of his country" should read that last sign and be of good cheer. Sparta would never have "fallen" if her sons had been robust enough for a diet like that.

A MAGYAR REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The successful organization of a federation of those clubs of Hungarians in the United States favorable to Count KAROLYI raises a number of delicate points. Americans can have no quarrel with aliens in this country for their interest in the politics of their native land. It is only natural to expect them to be concerned with its vital problems and when they feel strongly that mistakes are being made by those in power, to seek to exert their influence for the right as they see it. We have only to recall the part played by the Czechs in the United States during the war in preparing the formation of the Czechoslovak State to realize how such political activities may often be of benefit to the whole world.

Unfortunately, however, the temptation is great for all foreign groups to endeavor to use their influence in American political life in behalf of the interests of the old country. In so doing they risk falling under the curse of hyphenism, which leads them to place the concerns of their native land above those of the United States. It is, of course, most undesirable to have the racial and political quarrels of European States transferred to American shores. To have them in any way injected into American politics is intolerable. Whether this be done by Hungarians or by Frenchmen or Germans or English or Irish or any other group of persons born in a foreign land makes no difference.

The members of the anti-Horthy Hungarian clubs are undoubtedly too sensible to show any disposition to take part as a Hungarian group in American politics. They profess to be merely adherents of the republican form of government in Hungary, and opposed to the Horthy régime. The visit of Count KAROLYI, accompanied as it was by such unnecessary attention, has given them a rallying point. His critics will probably charge that they are complying with his directions and will claim that his old character as a trouble-maker is again in evidence and that the United States must pay the penalty of having admitted him.

Be this as it may, the supporters in this country of a Hungarian republic run the risk of alienating the sympathy which was aroused when Count KAROLYI was muzzled by the State Department if they seek to make him an issue in so-called "Hungarian-American" circles. What Hungarians think about him as Hungarians is a matter of no concern to Americans. They may damn or praise him to their hearts' content. But as soon as Hungarians speak or act as Americans, their fellow-American citizens have an interest in what they say or do. The interjection of foreign political quarrels into American politics can only result in harm.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Opportunity Not to Be Neglected.

Last January the Sage Foundation and the Regional Plan Committee united in asking Mrs. KNAPP, the Secretary of State, to add to the questions to be asked by the enumerators in the approaching State census one which they considered highly important because the information to be secured would have a direct bearing on several urban problems, and especially on those relating to transit. What they wanted was to know, in addition to the place of residence of every inhabitant, the place, if any, where each worked or carried on a business or profession.

It is within the discretion of the Secretary to secure this information at no expense and with the taking of but a very little more of the enumerators' time. As yet, however, no response to the request has been received, the blanks now in course of preparation do not contain the question, and LAFAYETTE B. GLEASON, who has been appointed Chief Supervisor of Enumeration, says that he has heard nothing about it from the Secretary of State.

In other words, the present intention evidently is not to add the question to those already on the list, and thus an opportunity to increase appreciably the value of the census will be lost unless Mrs. KNAPP should be convinced that the request is entirely reasonable and change her mind.

New York City is particularly interested in ascertaining the place of work or business as well as that of residence of its dwellers and its visitors, including, of course, the great tribe of commuters from Westchester, New Jersey and Long Island. Only so can the exact nature of the tide daily flowing into and out of and through the city be ascertained, and the making of proper facilities for meeting their needs be rendered easy, or at least less hard. This is true of all the larger centres of population in the State.

Knowing where a man or woman lives tells little and it often leads to misapprehensions as to the peculiarities of different areas. London realized the worth of such information several years ago. It is carefully given in its census of 1921, and, as published, that census contains many valuable tables under the heading of "Work Places in London and the Five Home Counties."

There Was No Wreck of the Hesperus.

LONGFELLOW seems to many of us, and especially to the older, to have been a better poet than the newer and younger critics are disposed to admit. There is no denying, however, that he was careless in examining the material on which he based his poems, and several of them, including the most popular, are either inaccurate or misleading.

In "Evangeline," for example, the sympathies of LONGFELLOW's readers and admirers are turned in a direction exactly opposite to the one in which they should go. For in reality the Acadians deserved all they got, having been a most troublesome lot, utterly refusing to accept the results of the war or the treaty with France that turned them and their country over to the British. The latter treated them with a patience truly surprising for that age. It was only after they had given many and long continued proofs of their utter irreconcilability with accomplished facts that their deportation was determined upon, and the order was carried out with about as much of humanity as the circumstances permitted.

As for the Indian lore in "Hiawatha," the experts laugh at it and for years had much fun in pointing out the poet's incompetence as an ethnologist and linguist. "The Skeleton in Armor" has no basis at all in fact, and the tower certainly was not built by Norsemen, but was and is the remains of a comparatively modern windmill.

And now even "The Wreck of the Hesperus" must be added to the list of errors, for, though there was a schooner of that name, it was not wrecked on Norman's Woe or anywhere else, so far as known, and was safe in Boston harbor at the time of the great storm of which the poet had vague reports. Presumably he thought that two such charming names as Hesperus for a schooner and Norman's Woe for a reef were a sufficient foundation for a thrilling ballad, and so they are, indeed. Few ballads have much more, and even history need not look so much askance at the rhymsters.

Extortion Can Be Stopped.

If New Yorkers knew as well as they should the city ordinances under which they live, extortions by truckmen and moving van owners would not be possible. The business in question is carefully restricted and controlled by our local laws, the charges for the several services rendered, especially in regard to the moving of household effects, are explicitly set down, and at any attempt to exceed them the selected victim instantly should apply for protection to the police.

When would-be changers of residence are bidding against each other on Moving Day, it may be that the movers can charge whatever the eager client offers to pay, but even that is doubtful, for the ordinances are definite as to what can be charged for the several classes of goods, and certainly the movers cannot collect more than the sum agreed upon in the preliminary bargaining.

The current issue of Greater New York, the organ of the Merchants' Association, prints the relevant ordinances in full. One thing to be remembered is that after reaching an agreement with the moving man for a given job he must give to his customer a written memorandum of its terms, duly and responsibly signed, and any effort to get more should be firmly resisted.

The size, or rather the smallness, of some of the legal charges will be surprising to most New Yorkers. Thus, for moving a piano as a separate operation only $3 can be demanded when the distance is not more than three miles, and only 50 cents for each additional mile or fraction of a mile. The fee for taking a piano up stairs is 50 cents for each flight, and if a block and tackle must be used the fee is $5.

THE YALE COMMENCEMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You print in your issue of this date a letter from Newell Martin of the Yale Class of 1875, to which I beg leave to reply briefly.

To my knowledge, the university has no commencement dinner and has certainly sent out no written instructions regarding such dinner. The reunion classes hold their own dinners and conduct them as seems to them best. The President of the university has made no statement regarding these dinners, as Mr. Martin appears to believe, and certainly I am quite unaware of any statement of the university Secretary, such as Mr. Martin refers to.

The only formal action to my knowledge which has been taken about the conduct of these alumni class dinners originated from the alumni themselves. The class reunion committees in 1923 voted to favor "a strict compliance with the law with reference to the liquor question." This action was transmitted to the corporation of the university, which endorsed the action, and requested the reunion class committees to submit the action to individual members of the reunion classes and urge upon them their support and cooperation. Later on the resolution of the class reunion committees was approved by the Alumni Advisory Board, an organization which represents the various alumni clubs throughout the country. In March of 1925 the class reunion committees again passed a resolution similar to that of 1923. I think it must be apparent from these statements that the entire initiative in this matter has come from the alumni themselves, to whom Mr. Martin should carry his protest.

I am not able to determine whence Mr. Martin secures his impression about my views as to the use of wine. I certainly do not entertain the opinions which he attributes to me, but this is a personal matter which need not be discussed in your columns.

With this assurance that Mr. Martin will be quite able to conduct himself in any way that seems to him good and with the knowledge that the control of his class dinner is entirely in the hands of his classmates, we shall all hope to see him here at commencement, where he will be most welcome.

DRESS.

The women on the Avenue
Are preening out today
With frills and furbelows galore
And hosiery display.
I saw a girl with ebon hair
And scarf of flaming red.
I saw a portly, gray grande dame
With tulle around her head.

The South Sea, old Kahuna man,
Whose withered, parchment guile
Is coffee-brown and wrinkled tight,
Perhaps would make us smile;
While he, in turn, beholding us
With boyish bobs and teddies,
No doubt would feel a mirth whose strength
Could shake him in its eddies!

I love to dress me up, I do,
And rouge my lips and face!
I love to know my underthings
Are made of silk and lace!
I crave big beads and hoop earrings,
And shoes with slender heels;
And if I had a silver coat,
I'd love the way it feels!

And that is that—and life—and us,
In spite of what we say;
For all of us, to tell the truth,
Have felt, or feel that way!
We cannot change the leopard's spots—
And anyway—why do it?
They seem so chic and full of style,
We'd surely have to rue it!

DEMAND GOLDMAN PARK CONCERTS.

Citizens Declare They Will Continue the Fight Against Mayor's and Chamberlain's Ban—See Public Sentiment Ignored.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When four newspapers produce editorials in one day regarding the Goldman Band concerts, it seems to me that these concerts must have been worth while. It appears, however, that the Mayor is impressed only with the things with which he cares to be impressed. The signing of petitions by nearly a half million people is ignored by him. Letters and telegrams from private citizens and committees and organizations do not even receive the courtesy of a reply or acknowledgment.

Every possible obstacle is put in the way of the Goldman Band concerts just because Mr. Goldman acted as any honorable man would do and prevented the Mayor and Chamberlain from grabbing his concerts and calling them the Mayor Hylan People's Concerts.

Even though the whole city seems to be aroused over this incident, it appears to have made no impression upon our Mayor, or if it has, he does not seem to have the courage to come forward and admit that he might possibly have made a mistake. ALMA V. GREEN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The clash between the politicians and the community is becoming painfully clear. Shall the Mayor or the Guggenheims dictate the terms of the Central Park concerts? Last Summer this family gave $100,000 for this good purpose. This Summer there is reason to believe they are ready to give even more if necessary.

I formerly lived near the Mall and studied these great concerts at close range. I stake my standing as a clergyman on the wisdom and disinterestedness of the Guggenheim philanthropy.

Is there a valid reason, outside of politics, for depriving the people of this great benefit? As the Mayor himself wrote, before he recently "changed his mind," why interrupt the dignity and cumulative civic effect of these series of concerts?

In contrast with the variegated program of bands and concerts proposed, the Guggenheim plan secures the permanence of musicians for the season, preparation and research and fixed and constant rehearsals.

Cannot the Mayor and Chamberlain be led to listen to reason?

HORACE E. CLUTE.
Rector, St. George's Episcopal Church.
Brooklyn, May 11, 1925.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am sure that many citizens feel as I do in regard to the manner in which the Committee on Music has carried on its fight for the Goldman concerts, and I am glad to learn that this fight will continue, even though these wonderful concerts are to be barred from Central Park.

This committee has certainly made it clear to the entire population of this city that the Mayor and the Chamberlain are not in reality the "friends of the people," as they have claimed for so many years.

WALTER V. MILLER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement of Chamberlain Berolsheimer's plans for park concerts looks very pretentious and may possibly impress a lot of people who are not familiar with the actual facts. The Chamberlain and the Mayor are not in reality, offering anything new for this season. I have heard every one of the bands and orchestras which he has engaged for this season with the exception of one, and I have heard them in the parks. Even the New York Symphony gave one or two concerts in the park in previous seasons without Mr. Damrosch conducting. Where are the names of Sousa, Pryor and Bodansky which were given out by the Chamberlain a few weeks ago? According to Mr. Berolsheimer's statement, we are simply going back to the same bands and conductors who have conducted in the parks before and the same system of having each organization give only a few concerts. Mr. Berolsheimer is evidently trying very hard to efface the memory of the great success achieved by the Goldman concerts.

OSCAR M. RICE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Today's papers contain a great deal about the first concert given in the park by an orchestra known as "the Ambassadors." That it was not billed as a Mayor Hylan People's Concert was probably due to the fact that it was paid for by a private citizen. The Chamberlain has announced that his regular series of concerts this Summer will be known as "Mayor Hylan People's Concerts," so the people still have this piece of effrontery to look forward to.

An orchestra of twenty-five to thirty men, such as played in Central Park yesterday, even though it be composed of the finest musicians in the city, is inadequate in Central Park, and this was the consensus of opinion.

As a music lover, I am of the belief that the Goldman Band provided ideal concerts, with well chosen and well arranged programs. I doubt whether Mayor Hylan and Chamberlain Berolsheimer realize what they have deprived the people of. EUGENE GORDON.
New York, May 18, 1925.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is gratifying to note that public sentiment has been aroused to such a great extent over the action of the Mayor and the Chamberlain in regard to the Goldman Band concerts. I doubt whether any other single action of the Mayor has ever aroused such a universal protest.

If the Mayor sees fit to defy such overwhelming sentiment as displayed by the people, he will probably have cause to regret it later on.

Such concerts are are given by this unusual organization should be fostered, and it is to be hoped that they can be continued in the future under private auspices and in a place not under municipal control where politics cannot interfere with them.

FELIX BERNARDI.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If Mayor Hylan and Mr. Berolsheimer have no regard for public opinion and popular sentiment, they are certainly not doing their duty by the people. Even though these two city officials provide more and better music in Central Park than ever before, the public will not forget how shamefully they treated Mr. Goldman and the Guggenheims. The Goldman concerts built up an enormous following.

A. B. MORRIS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read the list of organizations that are to perform this year, and if the Chamberlain believes that what he has arranged will make music-lovers forget the Goldman concerts, or forget the shameful way in which the conductor and the members of the Guggenheim families have been treated, he is quite mistaken.

Mr. Goldman gave a series that had real musical value. Are the people of New York going to permit this band to be cast aside?

ANNE A. PURDY.

Calls Ban Unjustified.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Mayor and the Chamberlain as yet have not given one sensible or plausible reason why the Goldman concerts should not be given. They know very well how many people attended each and every concert during the past few seasons, and they must realize that no series of concerts ever attracted so much attention or received such universal approbation.

Because two city officials haven't been able to get enough glory from these concerts must the people be deprived of these rare musical treats?

EDNA RANDELL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Evidently the Mayor and his energetic Chamberlain have succeeded in keeping the Goldman Band concerts out of Central Park, but they have not succeeded in pleasing the public. Practically every band engaged by the Chamberlain has given concerts in the park before, as have most of the orchestras also.

It must be remembered that the Goldman Band did not achieve its popularity and fame in Central Park, as Mr. Berolsheimer and the Mayor seem to want to make the people believe. They were invited to Central Park because of the popularity they had attained on the green at Columbia University.

ALICE V. SOMERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the Chamberlain and the Mayor have given out their musical program for the Summer, I presume they imagine the people are thoroughly satisfied. If this is their idea, they are certainly mistaken. The sentiment for the Goldman Band concerts is growing every day. ELEANOR D. FINCK.
New York, May 14, 1925.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Strolling through the park last Sunday afternoon and seeing a crowd gathered around the bandstand at the Mall, I stopped and listened to a few numbers played by the Police Band, and I want to take this opportunity of saying that they did very well considering that they are an amateur organization.

But is there any music lover in New York who would care to hear such renditions in preference to the Goldman Band? ALBERT PRINCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At last the people have been aroused and are willing to fight for the continuance of the Goldman Band concerts in Central Park. The thousands of people who are signing the petitions of protest are only a small part of those whose hearts and whose sympathies are with the cause.

Are we to be deprived of this wonderful gift of the Guggenheim families? Individual concerts by numerous organizations are all right for pastime, but let us insist upon keeping the Goldman Band concerts as a series.

RADICALISM AND HYSTERIA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It must indeed be a great reassurance to all right-thinking, red-blooded, super-Americans to hear that the Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc., inspired by the warning of its ever-watchful director, Julius Hyman, has resolved to put a stop to the printing of the emblem of the flaming torch of radicalism.

Having our attention thus opportunely called to this "menace to our institutions" may well be a reminder to all of us to keep our eyes open for other bits of incendiary symbolism, of which there are undoubtedly many that ought to be deleted before they start a real conflagration.

I am at present reminded of one in particular—that colossal flaming torch flaunted in our faces by the brazen lady on Bedlow's Island. We can now realize how widespread and insidious is the "menace" from which the patriots are striving to free us. Nearly half a century ago a group of foreigners not only raised $700,000 in their own country but also tricked the Government of these United States into setting aside a part of the public domain and the people of the United States into contributing an additional $300,000 toward the erection of this perfidious counterpart of the Trojan horse of ancient times. To be sure, the torch held by the lady in question is not red but white; but that only goes to show how insidious and how carefully disguised this propaganda really is.

I am sure that other patriots like myself will know of similar instances in which the estimable Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc., will be justified in taking action similar to that which it has just taken with regard to the vicious practice of printing the emblem of the torch on posters and handbills. Perhaps some able student of politics will soon demonstrate to us how the First Amendment to the Constitution was railroaded through by the ancestors of some of the "radical element" which is such a "menace" today.

Some psycho-pathologists impudently declare that much of the alarm over radical propaganda in our midst is a form of hysteria, but to expose the falseness of that diagnosis it is only necessary to point out that the very term hysteria is not a good Anglo-Saxon word, but merely another instance of the creeping in of disreputable European words and ideas.

Dry-Battery Radio on Airplane.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer notes with interest the article in this morning's TIMES entitled "Dry-Battery Radio Works on Airplane." The statement is made that this is a new radio triumph in that it is the first time that such a message has been sent on a machine which works without a generator and simply on dry batteries.

Permit the writer to state that as far back as 1905 the writer was manufacturing a dry battery set using a one-inch spark coil and six dry batteries, and that amateurs in those days were successful in transmitting from three to fifty miles with this set.

There was even a case of an amateur on the Pacific Coast transmitting ninety miles with such a set.

This, as you will note, took place exactly twenty years ago. H. GERNSBACK,

GRACE VANDERBILT REPORTED ENGAGED

SHE DENIES THE RUMOR

Copyright, 1925, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, May 25.—It is reported that Grace Vanderbilt, daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, will shortly marry the Marquis of Donegall in London. She denies the engagement, but is leaving tomorrow with her mother for London. The Marquis of Donegall's father married Violet Gertrude Twining, daughter of Henry St. George Twining of Halifax, N. S.

There have been various rumors about Miss Vanderbilt's engagement since she was introduced to society at a dinner given by her mother at Beaulieu, Newport, in August, 1918. At one time it was reported that she would marry Prince George, youngest son of the King of England, and on another occasion it was reported General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt would shortly make the announcement of their daughter's engagement to William C. Chanler of this city. Two years ago it was reported from England that she would wed Lord Ivor Spencer Churchill, son of the former Duchess of Marlborough, who was Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt of this city.

Miss Vanderbilt is a granddaughter of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt of 1 West Fifty-seventh Street and a niece of Mr. and Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Count Laszlo Szechenyi, Hungarian Minister at Washington, and Countess Szechenyi. Her brother, Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., who now makes his home on the Pacific Coast, married Miss Rachel Littleton in 1920.

The sixth Marquess of Donegall succeeded to the title on the death of his father in 1904. He is the son of the fifth Marquess of Donegall by his second marriage, that to Miss Twining, who soon after her graduation from Wellesley went to England, where she met the Marquess, then 31 years old. They had been acquainted only five weeks when they were married. The present Marquess visited this country with his mother at the age of 8. He is hereditary Lord High Admiral of Lough Neagh, a lake in County Antrim, Ireland, and has several other titles. His seat is Castle Chichester, Isle Magee, County Antrim.

FIRST DAY POPPY SALE BREAKS OLD RECORDS

Four Veterans' Organizations Raising Annual Fund for Disabled Comrades.

The first day's receipts from the sale of poppies yesterday surpassed all records, according to officials in charge of the annual poppy sale for the benefit of disabled soldiers of the World War. The drive will continue until May 30, and it is expected that all previous records for the sale of the floral emblems made by disabled veterans will be beaten.

The sale is being conducted by four organizations, the American Legion, Jewish War Veterans, the Veterans of Belleau Wood, U. S. Marine Brigade, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The entire proceeds from the sale of the poppies are for the maintenance of the Veterans' Mountain Camp at Tupper Lake, and Dan Edwards, holder of the Congressional Medal and D. S. C., Chairman of the New York County Committee, in announcing this fact, said yesterday:

"We are anxious to place the poppy in the hands of the public as a memorial to those who made the supreme sacrifice. My only interest in the financial end of the drive is to see that every penny taken in will be properly accounted for. Our books are open for inspection."

The Veterans of Belleau Wood and hundreds of marines who served with the famous Second Division in the war will give a poppy dance at the Hotel Pennsylvania on this evening. Officials of the army, navy and Marine Corps will attend.

CRAIG FORCES BOARD TO REVERSE ACTION

Resolution That Had Been Put Through by Hylan Rescinded at Controller's Demand.

Controller Craig, while the Board of Estimate was sitting in Committee of the Whole yesterday, forced upon Mayor Hylan what looked like a complete backdown on a resolution, adopted in 1924, under which the Controller has been chafing ever since and which has been accountable for much of the friction between the two officials.

Following a plea made by the Mayor directly to the Controller to suggest some method whereby financial mix-ups now existing might be straightened out, the members of the Board of Estimate rescinded the resolution they had adopted last year which placed in the hands of Budget Director Edward W. Buckley instead of the Controller the right to report on accruals of the various city departments.

The Mayor first complained of the "chaotic situation" created by the Controller refusing to honor transfers from accruals after that resolution was adopted, saying Mr. Craig's stand was resulting in the non-payment of poor employes in the City Government.

After the meeting Budget Director Buckley said the resolution complained of by the controller had been passed by the Board of Estimate unsolicited by him and because the reports submitted by the controller on accruals had not been forwarded to the board.

The entomology department of the American Museum of Natural History, through its curator, Dr. Frank E. Lutz, is preparing quarters for an "insect zoo" on a forty-acre tract of land in the Interstate Park near Tuxedo.

The land is on the Harriman tract, and William Averell Harriman has set aside several buildings adjoining the "zoo" to house the field workers and the collection.

The zoo will be home-grown and will consist of different plants, trees and shrubs on which different kinds of insects will dwell. A trout brook winds through the property, and there other kinds of insects live.

Not alone will insects that are useful to gardens and to plant life be grown and exhibited, but there will be a spot where vegetables will be raised, on which parasites will be allowed to grow, so that they can be observed and classified. The zoo will be within reach of some forty camps in Interstate Park and close to Boy Scout camps. It will be opened on July 1. Guides for nature study groups will be provided. They will give information about the inmates of the zoo, the flowers and shrubs that grow there, and general data about botany and zoology.

The insect zoo will show visitors that nature has a use for all of her bugs, beetles, bees and other forms of small animal life. There will be aquariums for insects that live on, in or by water. All of the trees and bushes will be marked with placards telling their names and the kinds of insects that live about them.

Dr. Lutz estimated yesterday that there are about 5,000 different kinds of insects in the region in which the zoo is being established. The zoo will be known as the American Museum of Natural History Field Station, Division of Entomology. The station is just at the crossing of the New York-Tuxedo Turnpike and where the Bear Mountain-Greenwood Lake road is being constructed.

Dr. Lutz said important research work would be done there and expected that before the Summer was over important information on the lives and habits of our common insects would be forthcoming.

BELMAISON

Belmaison Reproduction Furniture Expands into New Quarters

Ten Years Ago and Today

WITH the opening of the new addition to the Wanamaker Store, Belmaison Furniture expands from the cramped quarters it had, perforce, to occupy while building operations were going on, into something like twice its former space, or almost half of the great Fourth Gallery of the New Building. When one considers that a decade ago there was no Belmaison, one cannot but feel that such an achievement is distinctly impressive.

Ten years ago when Au Quatrième began bringing antique furniture to the Fourth floor of the Old Building, almost from the first people asked us for more reasons: . . . "Could you, by any chance, make us a copy of such and such a piece, reproduce it faithfully so that a discriminating eye would feel that the fine qualities of the original had really been accurately rendered, not as is too often the case with so-called reproductions—libelled?" And so, in answer to many requests, we began by copying to order a fine table, a bed, or desk or chair. Month by month, year by year, the requests became more numerous, so that when our Belmaison Decorating Service enlarged we brought the reproduction Furniture across the bridge and gave it a small space in front of the elevators. Belmaison Reproductions had come into being.

What Public Demand Has Created

The size of the space into which Belmaison is now expanding is no vague rhetorical gesture, arises out of no desire for meaningless display, but is, like Belmaison's inception, the automatic result of public demand, a natural and inevitable growth. Not one piece of furniture in the whole admirable collection represents a single person's idea, or exists for any reason whatever but that of the ever-increasing public demand for accurate, well-made reproductions. While Belmaison does bring over from England, from Italy, from France and Spain excellent reproductions of museum pieces, the greater number are exact copies of actual antiques which the Store itself has owned, Belmaison keeping thus to the single definite and trustworthy tradition in which it began.

A Cachet of Distinction

The reason that Belmaison is, to those who know, a definite cachet of distinction in furniture, is simply that we have always had before us from the beginning the one object: to reproduce line for line, tone for tone, of the beautiful old wood or paint or fabric of a given antique, to capture both the letter and the spirit of the original. Not to adapt, to give a skimped or sketchy impression, or take a hasty hint from an old piece as is often done. The result is that a Belmaison piece may be used with antiques, or in their place with no sense of incongruity, since it belongs to the same fine tradition of workmanship.

During the time that the new addition has been going up we were so crowded that Belmaison furniture was huddled together, losing half its effect. Now you will be able to see it spread out and properly arranged in good light with ample space to walk around each example and judge it as it deserves. Every piece can be seen as you would see it in your own home against an appropriate background. The Chintz Room has also moved downstair from the Sixth Gallery to a splendidly lighted space adjoining the reproductions, in conjunction with which its great wealth of beautiful and distinguished fabrics may conveniently be viewed.

WHEN THE WAR STOPPED, the British government kept its blanket contracts going in order to keep the factories and men at work. Naturally an accumulation of blankets resulted—running into the millions. British and American contractors took over this accumulation for world distribution.

In America Wanamaker's became the chief retail distributor—our nation-wide sales taking the blankets into homes in nearly every state, even into Alaska, many of them being sold in bale lots to camps, institutions, hotels and people who combined their orders to get the lower bale price.

Recently many people have been asking: "Are you going to have another sale this year?" Yes, and this offer is the best yet—read the heading again and think what it means to get a 98 and 99 per cent wool blanket (practically all wool), (60x85 to 90 inches), of 4 to 4½ pounds weight—big, warm, mostly shaggy wool blankets that will give almost endless wear year after year.

We call them utility blankets because they have a multitude of uses—

For camps
For bungalows
For homes
For institutions
For beaches
For boats
For house-boats
For summer hotels
For motoring
For couches
For beds
For boarding houses

For throw-overs, throw-downs on grass, sand, road (when changing a tire); for children playing on the grass or beach; for outdoor sleeping porches; for picnics, campfires, outings of all kinds; for motorists on tour, for travel through our great national parks, into the mountains, the woods, canoeing over lakes—a hundred and one uses readily suggest themselves.

BELT LINE WINS TRANSFERS FIGHT

FINDS RATE CONFISCATORY

UPHOLDS 1923 INJUNCTION

Unanimous Decision Declares State Cannot Require Traffic to Be Carried at a Loss.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The order of the Public Service Commission of the First District of New York requiring the Fifty-ninth Street Belt Line Railway to issue and receive free transfers from lines of the Second Avenue Railway Company and the New York Railways Company at First, Second, Lexington, Sixth and Seventh Avenues was declared to be confiscatory in a unanimous opinion handed down today by the Supreme Court. The decision affirms a final decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York issued Nov. 30, 1923, by which the enforcement of the Public Service Commission's order of Oct. 29, 1912, was enjoined. The opinion was written by Justice Butler.

The Belt Line Railway Corporation is the successor to the Central Park, North and East River Railway Company, which in 1912 operated a line in Fifty-ninth Street from First to Tenth Avenue. On Oct. 29, 1912, the Public Service Commission issued a transfer order, established several through routes and required transfers at a single 5-cent fare.

An agreement was made between the predecessor company and the other companies affected for a division of the 5-cent fare, giving 2 cents to the crosstown line and 3 cents to the up and down town lines. Subsequently the original line was sold and the Belt Line organized.

On May 11, 1920, the receiver of the New York Railways Company applied to the Public Service Commission, subsequently succeeded by the Rapid Transit Commission, to be relieved of the requirements of the transfer order. The Belt Line Corporation joined in the application and asked for a discontinuance of all transfers except from the Third Avenue system.

After hearings the commission, on July 9, 1920, made an order requiring the continuance of transfers, but increasing the joint rates from 5 to 7 cents. This was not accepted by the railroad and a rehearing was asked. The commission ordered the rehearing, at the same time suspending the operation of the 7-cent order.

Injunction Suit Commenced.

Pending the rehearing proceedings the injunction suit was commenced on Dec. 16, 1920, in the Federal court in New York. The Transit Commission was substituted for the Public Service Commission. The District Court on Nov. 30, 1923, held the order confiscatory and enjoined its enforcement. From that decision Joab H. Banton, as District Attorney for New York County, and the Transit Commission appealed to the Supreme Court.

In the opinion handed down today the Supreme Court held to be without merit the contention of the county and State authorities that when the suit was commenced the rehearing process was not completed and the appellee had not exhausted the legal remedies in the State courts.

"The order complained of," says the Supreme Court, "has been in force for more than eight years. The laws of the State required it to be obeyed and prescribed penalties for failure to comply with it. Neither the original application nor the petition for rehearing relieved appellee from compliance with the order of October, 1912. No application to the commission for relief was required by the State law. None was necessary as a condition precedent to the suit.

Fare Held Confiscatory.

"On the point under consideration it must be assumed that the joint fare of 5 cents was confiscatory as alleged. The continued enforcement of that rate would operate to take appellee's property without just compensation and to compel it to suffer daily confiscation. Notwithstanding the matter was pending on rehearing, the appellee had the right to sue in the Federal Court to enjoin the enforcement of the rate. It was not bound to await final action by the commission, and, if the rate was in fact confiscatory, to serve in the meantime without just compensation.

The appellants complained that no injunction has been sought against the order in so far as it affected the Third Avenue line, which owns the stock of the Belt line, and that, as a result, traffic had been diverted to the Third Avenue system. The decision today holds that the business of the Third Avenue system and its competitors is not involved in this action, nor, it is pointed out, are they complaining. The company, the Court declared, did not surrender its rights under the Fourteenth Amendment.

"There is nothing," the decision continues, "in appellee's certificate of incorporation or the laws under which it was organized that imposes upon it any obligation to continue to serve for a portion of the joint fare of five cents. The commission's order constitutes no part of the charter of appellee; and we find no agreement, expressed or implied, to comply with the order.

"The commission under the guise of regulation may not compel the use and operation of the company's property for public convenience without just compensation. The evidence sustains the finding of the master and the District Court that the joint fare of five cents is confiscatory.

"The State is without power to require the traffic covered by the fare enjoined to be carried at a loss, or without substantial compensation over its proper cost, and such cost includes not only the expenditures, if any, incurred exclusively for that traffic, but also a just proportion of the expenses incurred for all traffic of which that in question forms a part.

Division of Costs.

"The cost of doing such business is not, and properly cannot be, limited to the amount by which total operating expenses would be diminished by the elimination of, or increased by adding, the transfer passengers in question. It would be arbitrary and unjust to charge to that class of business only the amount by which the operating expenses would, or would be, increased by adding that to the other traffic carried. Outlays are none the less attributable to transfer passengers because also applicable to other traffic. Broad as its power to regulate, the State does not enjoy the freedom of an owner."

"It is well known, and the Court will take judicial notice of the fact, that the purchasing power of money has been much less since 1917 than it was in 1912, when the order was made, and that the cost of materials, labor and supplies necessary for the proper operation and maintenance of street railways has greatly increased, we are satisfied by the evidence that a fair and reasonable return on the value would be in excess of $91,156.53, the annual interest of 5 per cent on the indebtedness of $1,823,-

Referring to the average cost per passenger of the service for the five years 1918 to 1922, inclusive, and for three months of 1923, the Court declares these figures show that "the operating expenses and taxes, both before and after the injunction, substantially exceeded two cents, the amount received by appellee per transfer passenger."

"Exclusive of any allowance for a depreciation reserve or for interest," the decision continues, "the average cost per passenger has been from about 24 per cent. to about 51 per cent. in excess of two cents, and, if interest be included, it appears that the excess has been from about 50 per cent. to 105 per cent."

Under the decision of the Court, the belt line no longer will be required to issue transfers to the lines of the New York Railways Company and the Second Avenue Railway Company.

BARS ASIATIC AS CITIZEN DESPITE NAVY SERVICE

Supreme Court Rules Against Japanese Who Spent Years in Coast Guard.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Japanese and other Asiatics who have served in the armed forces of this country cannot become citizens, the Supreme Court held today, in an opinion written by Associate Justice Butler. Chief Justice Taft formally dissented.

The case came from the First Circuit Court of Appeals and related to Hedemitsu Toyota, who was born in Japan, entered the United States in 1913 and served substantially from that time up to 1923 in the Coast Guard Service.

Toyota received eight or more honorable discharges, some of them for service during the war. In 1921 he filed a petition for naturalization in the Federal Court in Massachusetts, the petition being granted and the naturalization certificate being awarded. A petition to cancel the certificate on the ground that it was illegally procured caused court action.

1. Whether a person of the Japanese race, born in Japan, may be legally naturalized under the seventh subdivision of Section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906, as amended by the act of May 9, 1918.

2. Whether such subject may be legally naturalized under the act of July 19, 1919.

Justice Butler's opinion was that although Congress used the words "any alien" in these and other modifications regarding the right to citizenship, there was nothing to show an intent to eliminate from the definition of eligibility the distinction based on color or race, nor anything to indicate that the eligible classes were extended to include persons of the Japanese race.

Both the questions asked by the lower court were answered in the negative.

In a case arising from the appeals of Chinese merchants of San Francisco who sought the admission of their Chinese wives and minor children and of Chinese who became American citizens by birth and who desired Chinese wives to join them, the Court ruled in favor of the Chinese merchants but against the Chinese who were citizens.

FLEET MAKES SORTIE.

Week of Final Manoeuvres in Hawaiian Waters Is Begun.

ON BOARD U. S. S. SEATTLE AT SEA, May 25 (AP).—The intensive training program of the fleet in leaving its base of sortie, seeking an enemy and reentering port information began this morning with the launching of another theoretical attack from Lahaina Roadsteads, the present base.

The program for the final week of the most extensive manoeuvres ever carried out by a United States fleet provides for re-entering Lahaina on Tuesday, another sortie from the roadsteads on Wednesday morning, re-entering on Thursday and a final sortie Thursday night, arriving at Honolulu on Friday. The sortie on Thursday will be conducted under wartime conditions, probably with darkened ships, and will be the first night sortie attempted by the fleet.

This morning's sortie was conducted, as previously, through a theoretical gate in a mine-field barrier, which protects the roadsteads. The mine sweepers went ahead of the main force, clearing the path of "enemy" mines. It is believed it was performed with more gratifying effect than any of the previous ones.

W. T. Honeycutt, a sailor of the submarine division, was drowned while swimming yesterday off Maui. He was the victim of a heavy undertow. The body has not yet been recovered.

Mayor Hylan replied yesterday to several attacks made upon his Administration during the week-end by declaring that they all emanated from men he refused to appoint or reappoint to office, and that a continuation of such attacks might be expected until election day.

Specifically answering the charge of Harold G. Aron, Chairman of the Republican Publicity Committee, that Dr. William F. Doyle, former Fire Department veternarian, had made more than $1,000,000 by practice as an architect before the Board of Standards and Appeals and the Board of Appeals in building cases, the Mayor replied that he demanded Dr. Doyle's resignation from the Fire Department. The Mayor also declared that he had refused to appoint William Bullock, whom he described as Mr. Aron's chief lieutenant, as Commissioner of Accounts, and that Mr. Bullock had said he would injure his Administration.

Referring to recent attacks by Controller Charles L. Craig, whom he called "the latter day Peck's Bad Boy," Mayor Hylan said that it was now Mr. Aron's turn to take up the campaign against him.

"One amusing statement is that I plan in the reorganization of the Board of Standards and Appeals to appoint Dr. Doyle to the new board," the Mayor said, in commenting upon Mr. Aron's statement. "This is absolutely ridiculous. The fact is, the bill which I caused to be introduced has been pending for months and has not yet reached final passage. The reason I desired a change in the constitution of this board was because in its present organization members receiving $10 a session are conducting business on the outside.

"My plan is to have a properly paid board devote its entire time to the business of the city. But Dr. Doyle has not been appointed a member of this board. He has not been a part of this Administration, nor has he received any favors at my hands since I demanded his resignation from the city service and caused it several years ago.

"De Hart, a former member of the Board of Standards and Appeals, is the quoted authority for most of the Aron statement regarding Doyle. When De Hart's term on the Board of Standards and Appeals expired I would not reappoint him. He can best explain the reasons. He can also explain, if he will, why he refused or neglected to appear before the Commissioner of Accounts to substantiate the allegations in the building zone cases, out of which Aron and his committee are now trying to make capital.

The Mayor also took notice of the suggestion of Joseph S. Schwab, a former Hylan supporter and President of the Allied Business Men's Protective Association, that the local political situation might best be met by the nomination of a business man for Mayor.

"Ex-Magistrate Schwab is another individual with an alleged grievance mentioned in this morning's papers," the Mayor continued. "When he expired as a City Magistrate I would not reappoint him. He also can best explain his failure to receive reappointment.

"There have been a few others whom I have separated from the City Administration because they were not, in my opinion, conducting their official trusts in the best interests of the people. No doubt, in time, Aron and the rest of the muckrakers will look up these ousted city officials and may then issue such leading statements in the hope of trying to prejudice the people against my Administration."

Mayor Hylan, in explaining charges of extensive employment of experts at large fees and salaries by his Administration, said that this had been necessary to prevent the exploitation of the people of the city through increased car fares and gas, electric and telephone rates.

"A court ruling that the testimony of city officials in assessment cases was not competent in certiorari and other proceedings has forced us to employ the services of real estate experts and others to guard the city's interests," he said. "This has placed an additional burden upon the people, but it has at the same time prevented wealthy individuals and powerful corporate interests from securing unwarranted reductions in assessments which, if they had been permitted to stand, would have inflicted a greater burden upon the little home owner.

"Chief City Magistrate McAdoo has assigned a City Magistrate for duty hearing all complaints of wrongdoing affecting the City Administration. I invite all ex-officials and all the friends of these ex-officials to lodge their complaints with this tribunal. If they have any valid complaint of wrongdoing, let it be heard in open court, where all the people of the city may hear it. The newspapers are also invited to come forward and substantiate any or all of the charges which they have been and doubtless will continue to fling, without sincerity or jurisdiction, until after election day.

One Victim Has Fractured Skull—The Other Says They Were Attacked in an Auto.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., May 25.—Lillian Renoud, 16 years old, of 15 Franklin Avenue, is at New Rochelle Hospital with a fractured skull, and Emily Filspitore, 15, of 116 Church Street, is at home with painful injuries, suffered, according to the police, while they fought two men who had taken them driving in an automobile.

The police have arrested Theodore Kinsella, 24, of Franklin Avenue, and Olindo Lalli, 24, of 763 Main Street, both of this city.

Miss Renoud's condition was such that surgeons would not permit the police to question her, but Miss Filspitore, it is stated, said two men invited them for a ride Sunday night. She said they resented advances by the men and Miss Renoud was struck with a pistol, whereupon Miss Filspitore said she jumped from the machine and ran.

Lalli was arrested on Drake Avenue in a machine corresponding to the one described by the girl. Kinsella, they said, ran from the automobile to Fort Slocum dock and escaped in a motor boat, but he was found later at Southampton.

Lalli was charged with first-degree assault and held in $3,000 bail for hearing tomorrow, when Kinsella will be arraigned.

Otis Skinner Tells Methodist Clergy That Church Is Jealous of the Stage

Otis Skinner, the actor, asserted before an audience of Methodist ministers yesterday that the Church had always tried to suppress the stage because it was jealous of it and that this tendency was apparent today in the backing of censorship by certain churches and religious bodies. Mr. Skinner's touching on the subject was brief, but it drew a disclaimer from the Chairman of the meeting. The occasion was the Monday morning meeting of the Methodist Preachers' Association of New York and Vicinity, held in the assembly room of the Methodist Book Concern, at 150 Fifth Avenue. The actor had been invited by the Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, who arranged the program on "The Call of the City." Dr. Karl Reiland, rector of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, spoke on the religious aspects of the same topic.

Mr. Skinner gave a history of the development of the drama, in which he said:

"Ever since the inception of the drama in medieval England in the form of mystery place, the Church has recognized the theatre as a rival drawing power and has attempted to suppress it. This jealousy is apparent today in the effort of certain churches and religious bodies to impose censorship on the theatre."

He said the theatre had great power and urged that churches patronize the good plays and fight the bad ones. He said he was not in sympathy with much that was shown on the stage. He advised a more tolerant attitude by the clergy, declaring they must recognize by this time the futility of combating an evil by edict.

"It is news to me that the Methodist Church is envious of the theatre," he said. "The attitude of the Methodist Church toward the theatre is prompted by two considerations: First, the danger of corrupting the morals of children, who are unable to discriminate between good and bad plays; and, second, the apparent impossibility of modifying the theatre so as to exclude bad plays."

The Chairman's statement was applauded by the ministerial gathering.

ARON REINFORCES ATTACK ON DOYLE

OFFICIAL DENIES CHARGE

Republican Quotes DeHart as Protesting the Appointment as Illegal When Made.

Harold G. Aron, Chairman of the Republican Publicity Committee, charged last night that William E. Walsh was not legally qualified to hold the position of Chairman of the Board of Standards and Appeals, to which he was appointed by Mayor Hylan on Jan. 6, 1921.

Mr. Aron declared that the city charter required that the Chairman should be an architect or structural engineer of at least fifteen years' experience. When appointed, Mr. Aron said, Mr. Walsh was a building contractor and did not receive a certificate as a registered architect from the State Board of Regents until Dec. 18, 1922. "Under the law," Mr. Aron added, "Mr. Walsh is not qualified to be Chairman of the Board until Dec. 18, 1937."

John De Hart, former member of the Board, whom Mayor Hylan refused to reappoint, was not a candidate for reappointment, as business took him at that time to Pittsburgh, Mr. Aron said. Mr. Aron also made public a letter from Mr. De Hart to Mayor Hylan protesting against the appointment of Mr. Walsh, and quoted Mr. De Hart as saying to him:

"Mayor Hylan talked with me in his office about his intention to appoint Walsh. I told the Mayor Walsh was not qualified under the law. The Mayor told me he knew that but would appoint Walsh anyway. He did appoint him."

Mr. De Hart's letter to the Mayor contained the statement that a transcription of the stenographer's minutes of the proceedings of the Board of Standards and Appeals would give him enough information "to run a race with Mr. Walsh at home scandal," and cited alleged instances to sustain his contention that Dr. William F. Doyle had made more than $250,000 in fees in eight months.

Mr. Walsh at his home, 3,120 Broadway, declared that there was no doubt about his being properly qualified to hold his post. He said he had been an architect for more than twenty years and that there was no provision in the charter that the Chairman of the board must be a "registered" architect of fifteen years' experience. Mr. Walsh added that the State law merely prevented an architect who did not have a certificate from the Board of Regents describing himself as registered.

LABOR BUDGET PLAN REJECTED IN COMMONS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—The labor amendment to the budget presented by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Churchill, was rejected in Commons tonight by 331 votes to 139 after closure had been resorted to. Philips Snowden for the Laobr Party and Lloyd George for the Liberals repeated their previous criticisms of Mr. Churchill's proposals, and he replied in his usual picturesque and vigorous style.

Ramsay MacDonald then took up the attack and brought Prime Minister Baldwin to his feet by asking him to explain the breaking of his pledge not to introduce protection. Mr. Baldwin declared his every word had shown he intended to repropose the Mackenna duties, which were not protective but revenue raising. The silk duties were copied from Gladstone's tobacco duties but the budget as a whole set the coping stone on an edifice of conservative finance, of which the foundation stones were first balanced by the British Post-war Budget, the funding of the American debt and the creation of a £50,000,000 sinking fund. The coping stone was the return to the gold standard.

Mr. Baldwin said he could not help feeling some malicious joy that the very critics who blamed him most for liberating the country from American shackles by funding the debt were those who were scouring the Chancellor of the Exchequer of riveting American shackles on this country by returning to the gold standard.

He was glad to note the Labor Party's new tenderness for industry. He had felt it himself since his own income had been reduced to a fifth of what it was and he was obliged to live on his capital.

Closure was then moved amid opposition shouts of "gag" and the finance bill had its second reading.

$274 MONTH'S BILL FOR KERRIGAN AUTO

BROTHER DROVE OFFICIAL

Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield continued yesterday his investigation of charges against the city, alleged to have been excessive, for storage, supplies and garage service upon the sedan automobile used by Deputy Controller Charles F. Kerrigan.

Walter F. Burke of 338 East Eighth Street, Brooklyn, who operates a garage in West 129th Street, Manhattan, testified that a car bearing the city's Finance Department shield, which he afterward ascertained was Mr. Kerrigan's, was kept in his garage from 1921 to August, 1923. He said he knew the warrants paid by the city for maintaining the car greatly exceeded the actual garage charges.

Burke testified that from 1921 to 1923 his partner in the garage was William A. Smith, brother of Mr. Kerrigan's chauffeur, Nicholas Smith, who has been subpoenaed by Hirshfield to appear before him, but who, thus far, has failed to appear.

The firm's books were kept by Margaret Smith, a sister of the Smith brothers, Burke said. He also declared that Miss Smith did all the bookkeeping at home. William Smith, Burke's partner, was in complete charge of all clerical work and disbursements, but Burke inadvertently came upon two city vouchers, one of which was for $274.83 and another for $262.07.

"I knew something was wrong," he said. "I couldn't figure how any car could use more than $200 worth of gas in a month."

Burke already had told the Commissioner that the actual garage charge for the automobile was $35 a month.

He asked his partner, the witness said, why the vouchers of the Finance Department were so much in excess of the actual garage charges, and was informed that the additional sum represented the salary of his brother, Nicholas Smith, driver of the car.

The witness said his knowledge of city business was so vague that he did not then think it irregular that Nicholas Smith's salary was being paid by the garage rather than through city channels. But after thinking things over, Burke said, "It didn't look right to me. I smelt a rat."

Mr. Hirshfield pointed out that at this time Kerrigan was Secretary of the Department of Finance, and he said Nicholas Smith was not on the civil list until Nov. 24, 1924, when he was given a special appointment as chauffeur-attendant to Kerrigan at a salary of $2,250 a year. The Commissioner estimated that the overcharges to the city on storage and upkeep of Kerrigan's automobile had amounted to from $5,800 to $6,000.

Burke produced a leaf from his firm's ledger which itemized the charges levied against Kerrigan's automobile from 1921 until it was removed from the garage. Opposite some of the monthly bills were penciled notations which Burke said the Commissioner represented, in his opinion, the amount actually paid by the city. In each case where one of the monthly charge items carried a penciled figure parallel with the garage charge the sum was considerably larger. Two monthly bills were for $167.50 and $94.08 respectively and the sums placed opposite them were $270.39 and $238.08.

"Whether the automobile was actually used by Mr. Kerrigan then is not of particular importance," said Commissioner Hirshfield. "The fact is that the bills were made out by the garage to V. F. Keller, chief clerk of the Finance Department, and the same car is still driven by Nicholas Smith, who was and still is Kerrigan's chauffeur. I publicly called upon Controller Craig to permit my accountants to examine every warrant, payroll and voucher involved in this matter."

The inquiry will be resumed tomorrow morning.

COLDS COST BILLION A YEAR.

Doctor Tells Colleagues There Are 100,000,000 of Them in America.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 25.—Dr. Beaman Douglass of New York, in an address before the closing session of the 31st Annual Convention of the Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Society, in the Ambassador Hotel here today, said there were 100,000,000 colds a year in the United States, causing a loss in time from work of $1,500,000,000, at an average of three days each at $5 a day.

"If we men," he declared, "were to appear on the street in midwinter wearing dancing slippers, silk hose, trousers rolled to our knees and our shirts turned down to the apex of our breastbone, we should most certainly die of pneumonia, but the ladies of today dress that way and yet suffer less from colds than men. This is because the women are out more and become hardened."

SUSPECT CAPTURED IN MAINE MURDER

LINKED TO NYACK MYSTERY

He Is Said to Be the Crawford Wanted There for Questioning on Missing Girl.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., May 25.—Waiving extradition, Harry A. Kirby, arrested here early this morning for the murder of Miss Aida Heyward, the shooting of Miss Emma Towns and the burning of their cottage in Winthrop, Me., left here late this afternoon shackled and closely guarded for Maine, where he must face the charges preferred against him.

Shortly after 5 o'clock, after several hours of questioning, Kirby was led from the cell at police headquarters through a cordon of guards and faced a crowd of several hundred persons as he was bundled into a waiting automobile and started on his way.

As the much sought man appeared in the doorway of the building, a shout went up from the excited crowd. He was handcuffed to Sheriff Henry Cummings of Kennebunk County, and gripping his right arm was Deputy Sheriff William Cole. Before and behind were other Detectives and Maine State Officers.

As he looked out on the crowd, Kirby flinched and pulled the cap from his head and held it over his face, keeping it there until the automobile passed beyond the crowd.

Just before the accused man left for the five hours' journey over the road he promised the officials that he would make a full statement when he arrived in Augusta.

Says He "Found" and "Cared for" Body.

Previously Kirby had admitted he was the man sought by the Maine authorities in connection with the killing of Miss Hayward, but denied he had put her to death. He said that he found the woman's body in a cottage beside Lake Maranacook and moved it to the cottage of Miss Jane Gray of Watertown, Mass., which he was occupying.

He gave no explanation for doing this other than he wanted to "take care of the body." In a short interview with the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, Kirby said he had found the girl's body in the woods and had taken it to his cottage.

It was a woman's quick mind and courageous work that resulted in the capture. Mrs. Frank E. Pond of 43 Market Street, this city, in whose home Kirby had boarded since Saturday night, recognized him as the man wanted in connection with the murder from his photograph in this morning's papers.

At that time Kirby was in bed, and, realizing her danger should he overhear her, she closed and locked all doors leading to the hallway where the telephone was and then piled up furniture against them. She then got in touch with her husband and he immediately notified City Marshal James L. McLean. Three policemen went to the Pond House and arrested Kirby after he had admitted he was the man they were after.

According to Pond, Kirby seemed polite and friendly. He accompanied the family to church last night.

"I'll go along with you," Kirby told the arresting officers. "But I didn't kill the girl."

He expressed concern for his wife and child. "I have nothing to live for now," he said several times.

Kirby is 41 years of age, but looks younger. He was born in Bangor, Me., and spent his early life in Philadelphia. From the time he was 14 he worked around camps. His wife's maiden name was Ruby Howe.

Jail Kirby at Portland, Fearing Mob.

AUGUSTA, Me., May 25.—News of the arrest of Harry Kirby electrified the city of Augusta as well as the town of Winthrop.

A crowd quickly collected at the jail at Augusta, and tonight increased to more than 5,000. Threats of lynching were heard, but Chief Sanborn of the State Police called his mounted and armed officers into conference at the State House and held them in readiness.

Sheriff Cummings returned to the jail at Augusta at 9 tonight and announced to the waiting crowd that the prisoner would not be brought in. Upon the advice of Governor Brewster and Adjutant General James W. Hanson, the Sheriff decided to leave Kirby in the jail at Portland.

The Governor knew the temper of the crowd waiting here, had heard the threats and feared an outbreak of mob violence if the crowd became infuriated at sight of Kirby.

Mrs. Kirby, who was Miss Ruby Howe of Saco before her marriage, arrived by automobile this morning in company with a State policeman and went immediately to the office of Chief Sanborn, where she remained until after dark, telling her story freely.

She told the Chief that her admiration of Kirby, whom she characterized as a "perfect lover," changed suddenly last Wednesday, the day after the attacks upon Mrs. Towns and the abduction of Miss Heyward.

"We met at Thiell, N. Y., where we were working together in the Letchworth Village Sanatorium," Mrs. Kirby said.

"Three weeks after we were married, my husband ran away from me.

"After about a month I decided to come back to Saco to stay with my people. Just as soon as I got here, I heard from my husband. He was right here in Maine. That is when he told me his real name is Harry A. Kirby.

"I was such a fool that I continued to live with him as Mrs. Kirby. My husband told me that he was born in Bangor and that he went to Philadelphia for about fifteen years.

"He has told me lots of stories about when he was an embalmer and undertaker in New York. He said he worked for an undertaker named Ikelberg. He told me he was born Oct. 14, 1883, so that would make him 42 years old. He told me he used to work in the Kings County Hospital, too."

Mrs. Kirby said that her husband told her that a detective questioned him regarding the disappearance of a girl who was found dead near Nyack, but he refused to answer the questions. He went away about the same time that it was discovered that several pocketbooks had been stolen from attendants' dormitories, she said.

Kirby Sought in Nyack Mystery.

NYACK, N. Y., May 25.—The statement made by a woman in Saco, Me., that she married Harry Kirby under the name of James J. Crawford is confirmed by the records here.

Crawford, an attendant at the Letchworth Village Home for Feeble-Minded, and a woman attendant named Ruby H. Howe were quietly married here on Feb. 16, 1922, by the Rev. Richard H. Travis, a retired clergyman. The marriage license was issued two days previously at Haverstraw, and after the ceremony the minister filed his report at New City, the seat of Rockland County.

On the night of March 14 the couple went to a moving picture theatre. That was the last heard of them until the woman made her statement today.

Soon after Crawford's disappearance he was sought by the county authorities for questioning in regard to the disappearance of Lillian White, an inmate of the home. A bleached skeleton and part of a skull, which were afterwards identified by some persons as being those of the missing girl, were found on top of Cheesecock Mountain nine months after Lillian White left the home.

The skull showed that three crushing blows had been administered with some heavy instrument such as a hammer. The cause of the murder and the identity of the murderer have never been ascertained.

Several witnesses questioned by the county authorities said that the White girl had been deeply attached to Crawford. A friend of the missing girl said that Crawford sent notes daily to her.

Intercity Passenger Planes Begin Regular Service June 1

DAYTON, Ohio, May 25.—The first intercity airplane passenger service for which a schedule will be maintained will be put into operation June 1 between Dayton and Cincinnati, it was announced today by E. A. Johnson, President of a local airplane corporation.

Five round trips between the two cities will be made daily. The round trip will be made in one hour and a half at a price of $25 per passenger.

This is said to be the first venture of its kind attempted in the United States and is comparable, on a smaller scale, to the airways maintained in Europe.

INTERBORO REPEATS FARE RISE PLEA

DENIES THE OBLIGATION

Says Project Should Be Put Off Till Earnings Warrant Going on With It.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company in a supplemental brief filed with the Transit Commission yesterday repeated its demand for an increased fare as necessary for the company if it should be required to pay a share of the cost of lengthening local subway station platforms now being considered by the commission.

"The Interborough Company having neither available funds nor sufficient credit to finance the proposed work, the proceeding should be discontinued or suspended until such time as increased earnings will warrant the proposed financial program," James L. Quackenbush, the company's general counsel, declared in the brief. "An increased fare is the only way out."

Mr. Quackenbush denied the obligation of the company to pay part of the cost of the proposed improvement under its contract with the city. He declared that the company did not have the money and asserted that a heavy discount would be required to market Interborough bonds at this time, even if buyers could be found at all.

Says Company Is Too Poor.

While declaring that the city's argument that the Interborough in the past had paid out large dividends was irrelevant, Mr. Quackenbush said that the fact was that the company might fairly have paid out much more money than it did. He asserted that the company had kept $8,000,000 in reserve, which, with other resources, was used to keep the company afloat after the war, and that the stockholders, in addition, had loaned the company $10,500,000 on unsecured notes.

In an oral argument before the commission, Mr. Quackenbush urged the Commissioners not to prejudge the case, and said he had been informed that George McAneny, the Chairman, had already made up his mind. Mr. McAneny denied this.

Mr. Quackenbush said he considered the commission "a quasi-judicial body," and reaffirmed his intention to appeal to the courts if the commission imposed a burden which, he said, would throw the company into bankruptcy.

"We haven't got the money to finance this proposed improvement," Mr. Quackenbush repeated. "We can't borrow it, and assuming for the sake of argument that we could borrow it, we could do so only at a ruinous rate of interest."

Assistant Corporation Counsel M. Maldwin Fertig urged the commission to compel the company to fulfill its contract obligations to the city. The hearing will be continued today.

Denies Elevated Millstone.

Mr. Quackenbush also denied the contention of the city that the lease of the elevated railroads was "a millstone about the Interborough's neck." Taking the Transit Commission's valuation of $71,536,374 on the elevated properties, he asserted that the owners of the elevated railroads would receive less than 7 per cent. on this amount this year, although 7 per cent. is considered the accepted ratio for a fair and just return.

Mr. Quackenbush also disputed the city's contention that subway finances should be separated from elevated finances, and declared that because one part of the whole system was losing money that was no reason for ignoring it.

"The Interborough is operating a comprehensive rapid-transit system," he said. "The mere fact that, owing to the unlimited preference of a large portion of its patrons for 'hole-in-the-ground' instead of 'open-air' transit, one part of its system operates at a profit while the other shows a loss, does not warrant it in disregarding or concealing the unprofitable part of its operations. On that basis, the owners of a system of chain stores, some of which operate at a profit and others not, might with equal propriety invite contributions of new capital in financial statements showing the earnings of the profitable group and omitting all mention of the losing part of the venture."

Mr. Quackenbush added that the logical result of the policy urged by the Corporation Counsel would be the physical separation of the Interborough subways and elevated railroads with great loss in service to the traveling public. He declared that this was something that both the commission and the company had steadfastly tried to avoid.

The Board of Estimate appropriated $151,742 yesterday for the construction of a small section of the Washington Heights subway to pass under the proposed Broadway Temple, at Broadway and 173d Street, a contract for which has been awarded to Moranti & Raymond, Inc. The board also appropriated $38,470 to pay the Pennsylvania Drilling Company for test land and water borings on various routes in the city's projected subway system.

BOOKMAKER GOT $16,000,000

CINCINNATI, May 25.—Federal Revenue agents who have been investigating the income tax returns of Cincinnati handbook operators expressed the opinion tonight that they had discovered the "King of Bookmakers" in this vicinity, whose total bank deposits for the last four years have amounted to between $16,000,000 and $19,000,000.

The bookmaker, who maintains a palatial home in the Avondale section, is said to have hundreds of agents and "branch offices" which receive bets on horse races and transmit them to headquarters. His name was withheld, in accordance with the rule of the Internal Revenue Department.

Will 'Hole Through' Subway Today.

The Rowers-Kennedy Corporation is expected to "hole through" today in the construction of the extension of the Queensboro subway from Grand Central Terminal to Eighth Avenue. At 2 o'clock Mayor Hylan is scheduled to press a button exploding a dynamite blast that will remove the last rock barrier at Broadway and Forty-first Street.

COMMANDO RACES TRAIN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BLOEMFONTEIN, South Africa, May 25.—General Hertzog, the Prime Minister, came from Cape Town to be present with the Mayor of Bloemfontein and the Administrator of the Orange Free State this afternoon at the reception to the Prince of Wales upon his entry into the capital of the Free State Province.

After leaving the Hamilton Station, the Prince was met by a Boer commando of more than 2,000 riders, under General Conroy, the Nationalist member of Hoopstad and a noted former rebel, who were ranged along both sides of Monument Road.

This commando and all it stood for constituted the most inspiring sight of the day for the Prince. As soon as he saw that a splendid horse had been reserved for him he decided to make the long ride to the city, and the fact that he bespoke his desire to Conroy in native dialect spread like wildfire down the lines of the bronzed young Boers and immediately put them at their ease.

Down Monument Hill came the column of Free Staters, facing the late afternoon sun, the leaders and outriders wearing yellow sashes in place of bandoliers and the men carrying their rifle butts at the hip. For two miles before the central thoroughfares were reached Afrikander families, colored people, white-aproned nurses and school children watched for the Prince. In the Market Square he had a reception strangely like the one at Cape Town, with every window crowded.

Prince Reviews Galloping Commando.

At the entrance to King's Park the Prince reined in to the roadside and reviewed the commando as it galloped off in a cloud of dust, while the people, clustering among the prickly cactus beds along the sidetrack, fought for a sight of him.

In King's Park, the Prince was taken to see and name Prince Garden, the brand new extension planned in honor of his visit. Here again, during the naming ceremony, the Prince said a few words in the Afrikaan tongue at the close of his address and shook hands till his left hand ached. Conspicuous among those eager to grasp his hand were the wives and daughters of the men present.

The mayoral welcome was submitted as an outward sign "of our oneness with Great Britain and the other Dominions under the beneficent sway of the wise rule of your royal father."

During the morning the royal train traversed the high tablelands of Springfontein and the illimitable bronze-green veld around Edenburg, this part of the Free State being almost treeless prairie land. The Prince turned out at 7 o'clock to shoot guinea fowl at the foot of the Kopjes in the neighborhood of Knapsack River.

The village of Bloemfontein, founded in the open plain by boorters on an exodus from the Cape Colony, has developed into a dignified central city of regular tree lined avenues. It is a wind-swept place, exhilarating in the extreme, and its citizens claim it is worth while going to Bloemfontein just to breathe its air.

It is worthy of note that the commando which escorted the Prince today had been drawn from every district of the Province and all were reluctant to be thrust into the background. It was composed almost entirely of men who themselves, or whose fathers, had fought against the British in South African campaigns, and some, like their leaders, had joined the De Wet revolt in 1914.

The Prince took these men by storm because he rode with them, addressed them in their own tongue and spoke to as many as humanly possible. His bearing and conduct will be speedily known to every Dutch-speaking family in the province and every man of the commando will have nothing but good to say of the Prince.

Ponies Match Train's Speed.

The local commando of forty horsemen arranged a five and a half mile race across the veldt and as the train left the town the commando streaked along with it, the riders having the stamina and speed of Arab horses and their riders the ability of Western cowboys. At the end of the race the Prince stopped the train and congratulated all the men.

FALLS UNDER CARS, UNHURT

Four cars of an Interborough Subway train passed over Miss Yetta Traub at the Nevins Street Station in Brooklyn yesterday without injuring her. The train crew and policemen from the Bergen Street Precinct who crawled under the cars in the belief that they would find only her mangled body were greeted instead with a reassuring: "I'm not hurt."

Miss Traub, who is 22 years old, lives at 2,130 South Sixth Street, Philadelphia. She toppled off the platform as the train, Manhattan-bound, in charge of Motorman Lewis Edwards, rolled into the station. Edwards applied the brakes but was unable to stop the train until nearly half of it had passed over Miss Traub's inert form.

Fortunately, she lay in the drainage trough, so far below the rails that there was ample clearage above her for the undercarriage of the cars. Many persons waiting for the train at the station witnessed Miss Traub's fall. Although she appeared not to have suffered injuries she was removed to the Kings County Hospital for examination.

UNTERMYER OFFERS AID.

Would Argue Paterson Strikers' Appeal on Free Speech Issue.

Believing that the conviction of Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, and seven silk strikers for unlawful assembly in Paterson, N. J., is menacing the "precious prerogative of free speech in this country," Samuel Untermyer said last night that he had agreed to argue the appeal of the convicted men before the Supreme Court, provided the cases are held over until Fall.

In offering his services Mr. Untermyer refused compensation. He said that a national issue hinges on the cases of Baldwin and the strikers, maintaining that it would be a public service to defeat the Legislature and the courts of any State assailing the right of free speech and peaceful public assembly.

Pauline Lord Returns to Role.

Pauline Lord, leading woman of "They Knew What They Wanted," at the Klaw, returned to the cast of that play last night. Miss Lord missed both performances Saturday in consequence of the death of an older brother. During her absence her role was played by Percy Conway, her understudy.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

A Remarkable Little Actor.

The outstanding performance in "The Price of Pleasure," the new picture at the Piccadilly, is that of Charles Bernard Murphy Jr., a screen player of but little experience. Nevertheless, he acts with consummate ease, and, at times, with remarkable charm. He is conscientious and careful in every detail in portraying the rôle of Garry Schuyler Jr. There is not a sign of self-consciousness in the characterization he delivers, and while he is on the screen the audience is torn between sympathy and mirth. He has a marvelous knack of depicting sadness with earnest sincerity, and in his happy moments he is the picture of unrestrained joy. His eyes sparkle with affection, and just as quickly flash forth anger.

Here we might as well say that Mr. Murphy is doing quite well, as his age is about eighteen months. He is the jolliest and most effective baby we have seen on the screen filling a rôle in a full-fledged production. The character he impersonates so faithfully is a pivotal one in the story. Master Murphy is supported by Virginia Valli, who figures as his mother and the heroine, and Norman Kerry, who plays the part of a hero instead of his usual villain. Of course, neither of these players, efficient as is their work before the camera, can compare to Master Murphy. He is sad because things are going all askew with him personally. He is joyful because he is happy. He loves in no artificial fashion, but with heart-felt affection beaming from his blue eyes. He has thus the advantage over the more experienced players, who might after all take a lesson or two from a mere baby, who needs no onions or glycerine to make his tears.

This picture has an exaggerated beginning and several inflated ideas toward the end. However, it is quite enjoyable, especially when Master Murphy is on the screen. Miss Valli takes the part of a shopgirl, Linnie Randall, who one day meets Garry Schuyler. Mr. Schuyler is at the time amusing himself by masquerading as a mechanic. He hears that Linnie has never had an enjoyable evening, and asks her to come to dinner that night. Linnie accepts, and, instead of a mechanic, Linnie observes a man in dinner clothes, standing beside a limousine. It does strike one that he might have put on an every-day suit for the party, as Linnie is at first loath to accompany him. She wears just a cheap little frock. Schuyler tells her to come to his house, as his mother and sister are away. The girl arrays herself in a gorgeous Parisian creation and a Fifth Avenue coat of sable.

The mother and sister return sooner than expected, and they are shocked to learn that he has married the shop girl. These two women make things so unpleasant for Linnie that she runs away. Garry hastens after her in his automobile, and as luck will have it on motion-picture nights, there was a deluge of rain. He skids and knocks Linnie down, only learning who the injured person is when he alights from his car.

There are complications through Garry believing Linnie is dead and his subsequent suffering from brain fever. In many of these scenes Master Murphy figures to advantage, pulling things out of a hat by his genuine display of emotions.

Ward Crane plays the part of the villain dancer. He is quite convincing, and does not permit Mr. Kerry to steal all the credit in a fist fight. Miss Valli is charming as the heroine, and Louise Fazenda is obstreperously amusing and sympathetic as the girl who won't permit any man to say her nay.

This film deserves seeing, if only to study Master Murphy's screen tactics.

A Frail Affair.

JUST A WOMAN, with Claire Windsor, Conway Tearle, Dorothy Brock, Percy Marmont, Dorothy Revere, George Cooper and others, adapted from Eugene Walter's play of the same name, directed by Irving Cummings; "Memorial Prelude," with music by Victor Herbert and songs by Kitty McLaughlin and ensemble; Divertissements, Emily Day, coloratura soprano; Dance Chinois, "What Price Goofey," a comedy. At the Mark Strand.

The picturization of Eugene Walter's play "Just a Woman" is such a feeble piece of work that one does not feel like treating it too harshly. It tells a tale which we imagine would be apt to make even the wild men of Borneo or the Fiji Islanders think that Americans were either very good-natured or credulous when they gaze upon motion pictures. We might say that the photography is splendid and that the players do their bit to make some stretches moderately interesting, knowing, possibly, that certain situations are beyond the pale.

A novelty is included in this film. It is that of having an ape steal into a woman's room to frighten her. The shadow of the animal is pictured against the wall and finally the beast is seen in the room. Only stays of a second or so, being scared off by Mrs. June Holton's screams. Everything happens as arranged by Oscar Dunn, an unscrupulous ventriloquist, who wanted to get a flashlight photograph of June Holton seeking the assistance of George Rand, as evidence in a divorce case.

Conway Tearle impersonates Robert Holton, an ingrate who is only successful through his wife's perspicacity. He becomes senselessly infatuated with Clarice Clement, who is more of a mercenary siren than an actress. Holton did not deserve the happy ending given to this narrative. Rand, the inventor, in whom June always had faith, is responsible for the improved financial status of the Holtons. It would seem that poor Rand, who goes to the bitter end of the picture without having a single kiss, let alone a love affair, is entitled to some consideration. On the other hand, Holton not only embraces his wife but has a violent kissing scene with Miss Clement.

Claire Windsor is effective as Mrs. Holton. Dorothy Revere is attractive and industrious as Clarice. Percy Marmont gives a sterling performance as the inventor, and George Cooper bores one to extinction as Oscar Dunn. Mr. Tearle is restrained and natural. But after all, what does it matter, as the story is merely a jumble of scenes put together without any thought being given to probability?

Lillian Gish in "La Boheme."

Lillian Gish's first story under her contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "La Boheme," which is to be adapted from the opera of the same name. Picturization of this work has been arranged for and the filming of the photoplay will begin immediately. This will be Miss Gish's first work in pictures in California in five years.

Louis B. Mayer, who made this announcement yesterday, said that thousands of suggestions for the first picture for Miss Gish had been received from theatre owners. Miss Gish's last two productions were "The White Sister" and "Romola."

Army Shows Far Rockaway How a Night Air Raid Looks

Residents of Far Rockaway had a chance to see what an aerial attack on New York would look like last night when the 66d Anti-Aircraft Regiment under Colonel M. G. Spinks, which is stationed at Fort Tilden was put through a night anti-aircraft drill. A number of airplanes flew through the dark toward the fort. When their zone was established by soldiers in listening posts, the six Sperry searchlights of the regiment threw their beams across the sky in an attempt to find them.

When the searchlights had found the airplanes they were kept on them for two or three minutes. Then the airplanes were allowed to lose themselves and the "attack" was repeated.

"ODD MAN OUT" ENTERTAINS

Wilson	Lewis Barrington
Karl Spotts	A. E. Anson
Julia Bancroft	Alma Tell
Jerry Ames	James Crane
Dickon Bancroft	Lee Baker

It was an entertaining play, "Odd Man Out," that came to the Booth last night. With a good deal of pruning and the avoidance of some obvious quaeheries it should provide an evening of intelligent diversion.

The authors have chosen to deal with the peculiar problem that confronts a young married woman whose unconventional morals have the pleasing coloring of frankness and the tolerance of an understanding husband. In the belief that this husband is dead, she has almost prepared herself for a second marriage with an upstanding youth who can have but little appreciation of the diversions with which she enhances her contacts with other men. Yet another suitor, however, has appeared upon the scene, with intentions less honorable, and it is he who finally wins her as the play closes, to the disgust of the moral young man, but to the relief of the sympathetic husband, who realizes that she will return.

The authors have a pleasing sense for situation, but it is in their dialogue that their play goes wrong. All of their characters are obviously graduates of epigrammar school and chit chat and mots and cryptically cynical sayings fly all over the stage. And at times the play becomes undeniably talky.

The cast has been well chosen and well directed. Miss Alma Tell, as the capricious young woman, seemed a little undecided in the first act as to what it was all about—a fault that she pardonably shared with many in the audience and perhaps even with the authors—but her work became sprightly and bewitching as the play gathered speed and point in the second act. James Crane was excellent in a rôle that could scarcely have called for much exertion from him. Lee Baker Anson was, as ever, straightforward. Welcome trait last night in a part that is of the stage stagy. Lee Baker Splendidly created the illusion of the husband of the well-understood wife.

Producers Distributing Corporation Discusses Plans for Year.

Executives of the Producers Distributing Corporation, an independent motion-picture concern with which Cecil B. De Mille is affiliated, yesterday held a convention in the Hotel Commodore to discuss business plans for the coming year. Discussion centred on the pictures to be produced under Mr. De Mille's supervision in the next few months and on the starring of Joseph Schildkraut, Leatrice Joy and Rod La Rocque in forthcoming film features. The corporation is considering the advisability of bringing out special stage successes in screen form.

F. C. Monroe, the President, alluded in his speech to the gathering as the "inauguration of the first official movement made possible by affiliation with Mr. De Mille." He said that it was planned to extend distribution to all theatres, whether associated with the Famous Players-Lasky, Metro-Goldwyn or First National, Inc., the Big Three.

The meetings was attended by members of sales staffs from all parts of the country, as well as by executives. Among those present were Charles Christie, President of the Christie Films Corporation; William Vogel, representative of the several concerns in foreign fields; Charles R. Rogers, Vice President and Treasurer of the Hunt-Stromberg productions; John C. Flinn, Vice President and General Manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation, and Raymond Pawley, first Vice President and Treasurer of the company, one of the original organizers.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

So far as concerned the Stock Exchange, yesterday's movement was fairly good proof of the recent market's character. Prices were bid up in the early trading; after which, without any visible reason except a seemingly general decision to realise speculative profits, heavy selling stopped the advance and turned the whole market downward. At the close, the day's net declines ran from 1 to 2 points in a rather long list of stocks and final prices were mostly around the lowest. In the afternoon, Wall Street made much of the rise in the call-money rate to 4½ per cent., the highest in a month; but the stock market ought by this time to have outgrown any real uneasiness over a Monday money market. The general money position was entirely unchanged, and two issues of United States bonds went to the high price of the year.

The rest of the bond market displayed its usual strength, the French Republic loans being one of a few exceptions. The half-point decline in those issues was probably merely reflection of the weakness in the franc, which fell to the lowest price since March 4, when the size of the French Senate's budget of expenditure and the market's suspicions of the French Bank's statements of outstanding circulation had begun to worry Paris. It was not clear why the selling of francs should have increased on the very day when Caillaux was submitting, at the reopening of the French Parliament, his scheme for increased taxation and a public surplus, which are the indispensable problems to proper fiscal reform. But possibly financial nervousness was increased by the fact that the Ministry itself must now run the gauntlet of the Chamber with an awkward Colonial war on its hands and the always unpopular program of higher taxes.

Sterling again hardly moved; but only the trifling sum of £13,000 gold was taken from the Bank of England and there seems to be general expectation of another large arrival. In so far as the question of the American attitude has had to do with belief in the maintenance of the pound sterling at gold parity, the official declaration of the Advisory Council to the Federal Reserve Board ought to cheer up London. When the practical private bankers affiliated with the board emphasize their conviction that the United States "should take every opportunity that consistently and safely could be grasped to aid foreign countries in their struggle toward regaining exchange stability," and describe the Federal Reserve's extension of the $200,000,000 protective credit to Great Britain's resumption operations as "one of its proudest and most constructive achievements," the status of the resumption experiment would seem to be reasonably assured.

The rapid advance in grain prices yesterday was mostly in response to the singular turn of weather conditions in the last two days, with which New York itself has had an unpleasant enough experience but which was possibly more disconcerting to the Middle West. Probably the grain market greatly overrated the actual damage from the cold wave to the growing crops. The Chicago speculator may be trusted to do so; the history of any agricultural season during April and May always includes several successive destructions of the wheat and corn crops, usually followed by discovery that nothing in particular has happened. Nobody will have forgotten last May, of which even the Department of Agriculture declared in its monthly report that "unseasonable weather of every variety is blamed for playing havoc with the growing crops." The department cut down the previous month's estimate on the Winter wheat yield by 44,000,000 bushels, and then had to increase it by 81,000,000 bushels before harvest.

Wheat for May delivery rose 8 cents a bushel yesterday and for July delivery 4⅝, the last-named contracts reaching the highest price since the second week of March and 34 cents above the April minimum, while corn went up 4 cents. The speculative grain market was evidently ready to give proper reception to the "frost scare"; not only because of the background of a downward reaction carried absurdly far in April, but because of renewed vogue for grain trade mathematicians ready to prove that there is not enough wheat left to feed the world until next harvest.

MONDAY, MAY 25, 1925.

Heavy withdrawals by interior institutions in preparation for month-end and the report that local banks are not as plentifully supplied as a week ago combined to send the Stock Exchange call loan rate to 4½ per cent., highest since April 21. Market opened at 3⅝, advanced to 4 about 1 o'clock, and then to the maximum at 2:25 P. M. Most of the business was placed over range of 4@4½. Time money market was dull and unchanged, notwithstanding stiffness in demand rate. The little business that was done ran to 90-120 days at 3⅝ per cent., while 3⅝@4 per cent. continued borrowers' and lenders' quotations. Commercial paper and acceptances were quiet and without variation in discount.

ARGENTINE'S CHOICE COSTS HER $450,000

PUBLIC OFFERING SOON

J. P. Morgan & Co. and the National City Company to Market the Bonds.

The unusual situation of a Government paying almost half a million dollars for the privilege of doing business with a particular banking group was revealed yesterday when it was learned in Wall Street that the $45,000,000 Argentine loan soon to be offered by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the National City Company, was obtained on a bid that was 1 point lower than a proposal submitted to Argentina by a competing New York syndicate. This means the Argentine Government will receive $450,000 less for the issue from the bankers.

At the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. and the National City Company no comment was forthcoming on the loan agreement with the Argentine Government, beyond confirmation of a Buenos Aires cablegram reporting the decree in which acceptance of the Morgan-National City offer was announced. It is expected that public offering of the new Argentine issue will be made early next week.

The probability of a new Argentine issue has been discussed in the financial district for the last month or so because of the maturity, on June 15, of a $10,000,000 Argentine issue which was sold in New York.

The new Argentine financing, which is expected to include some refunding operations, will be in the form of long-term issues, which bankers declare will do much to stabilize the Argentine situation. There have been considerable short term borrowings by that country of late, which, the opposition in the Buenos Aires Government has declared, have kept conditions unsettled and have not been in the interests of national economy. The funding of a number of Argentine obligations through the new issue is expected to remedy this situation.

J. P. Morgan & Co. handled considerable financing for Argentina in the pre-war periods. Its recapture of the business now, when Argentina is virtually back on a gold basis, with its exchange firm and some exports of gold already having been permitted, is attracting considerable interest in Wall Street. In connection with the general improvement in Argentine finances, it was noted that old issues of that Government have advanced a point or more in price in the New York market since announcement of the refunding operations was made late last week.

It is reported that in addition to handling the new Argentine loan, the Morgan-National City group will take up the $10,000,000 Argentine loan which matures next month. The bankers, it is understood, will pay the Argentine Government at the rate of 92 for the new issue. The bonds, it is reported, will pay 6 per cent. interest and will carry 1 per cent. annual cumulative amortization, and will be due in thirty-three years.

System Reports Smallest Operating Income for April Since 1920.

The Southern Pacific System reports net operating income of $1,617,413 for April, a decrease of $2,014,958 from April of last year and the smallest of any April since 1920. Gross revenues of $21,605,886 were off $1,330,041 from last April, a decline which normally would have been absorbed by a reduction of expenses, but this year was increased by a $794,405 greater outlay.

Freight revenues of $15,193,667 were off only $790,682, or 5 per cent. Passenger revenues of $4,298,254 were off $494,003, or 10 per cent., and total revenues were 6 per cent. lower. Of the total, 37.4 per cent. went for maintenance expenses, compared with 33.7 per cent. a year ago, and 39.2 per cent. for transportation expenses, compared with 35.4 per cent. a year ago.

The road's operating ratio of 83.6 per cent. is considered high for the Southern Pacific and it is thought that it may be explained by abnormal maintenance charges for new properties recently acquired by the road. Last year the April ratio was 75.4 and for the entire year of 1924 it was 73.6.

Gross revenues for the first four months of this year are running $3,780,878 behind last year. They were $2,450,836 behind at the close of the first quarter. Net operating income was down $474,430 at the end of the quarter, but now lacks $2,490,388 of equaling the first few months of last year. It is also behind the corresponding period of 1923, but higher than any preceding year since 1918.

THE BOSTON HERALD
New England's Leading Financial Medium

$22,886,444 GROSS BY NATIONAL POWER

Company Serving 47 Towns in South Gained 9½ Per Cent. in 1924 Business.

NET INCOME IS $8,063,330

Gain of 15 Per Cent. Shown in Report Anticipated on Curb and Stock Jumps 7 Points.

The National Power & Light Company, holding company for utilities serving forty-seven communities in Tennessee, Alabama, Arkansas and Texas, did a gross business of $22,886,444 in 1924, according to the annual report issued yesterday, an increase of 9½ per cent. over 1923. Net earnings were $8,063,330, an increase of 15 per cent.

Knowledge of what the 1924 report would show caused a jump of 7 points in the company's common stock on the Curb yesterday, the close being at 297. Because the company has done no financing in recent months, and because the stock's quotation in the market makes it "a rich man's security," Wall Street expects a split-up of the shares eventually.

After deduction of all interest charges and preferred dividends, and the appropriation of $1,978,609 for renewals and replacements (depreciation) by the subsidiary companies, there was a balance applicable to the payment of interest on National Power & Light Company's income bonds, and dividends on its preferred and common shares, of $2,841,330. This compares with $2,566,986 in 1923. The balance available for dividends was $2,248,519, against $1,965,640.

Preferred dividends took $372,562, leaving $1,975,957 for the common stock, equal to $16.19 a share on 122,078 shares outstanding Dec. 31. Dividends paid on the common amounted to $549,400, representing three payments of $1.50 per share each, leaving a surplus of $1,426,557. In 1923 the earnings for the common were $1,652,479, equal to $13.74 a share on 122,952 shares. No dividends on the common were paid in that year.

The balance sheet as of Dec. 31 showed current assets of $2,477,102, and current liabilities of $1,879,097. Reserves aggregated $405,533 and surplus amounted to $1,754,996.

Of the earnings of subsidiaries, 50 per cent. was derived from electric power and light service, 38 per cent. from railway service, and 12 per cent. from manufactured gas and miscellaneous service. The subsidiaries reported 212,933 consumers, of whom 158,463 were electric and 54,470 were gas customers.

During the year, the properties of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company, the Bessemer Gas Company, Birmingham-Tidewater Railway Company and the Norwood Street Railway Company were acquired by the Birmingham Electric Company, which was organized for this purpose.

A new 5,000,000-cubic foot gas holder has been ordered and work on its erection is under way, for the Birmingham Electric Company, which is also constructing a new electric substation to provide 20,000 additional k.v.a. to be ready this year.

STOCKS IN ARREARS ACTIVE IN MARKET

Rumors of Plans to Pay Accrued Dividends Cause Shares to Advance.

Common and preferred stocks on which dividends are in arrears were particularly active on the Stock Exchange yesterday because of rumors in the last few days that many of these arrears were to be cleared up by the declaration of extra or stock dividends. The cases in which arrears have accrued are numerous and these stocks evidently have been singled out by speculators on the possibility that favorable action is to be taken on them within the next few months.

Particular strength was shown yesterday in the common and preferred stocks of Robert Reis & Co. Approximately 28 per cent. has accrued on the cumulative preferred stock, for the payment of which directors of the corporation now are considering plans. It is reported in Wall Street that the plan favored is for payment in the form of stock dividends, with assurance that the regular rate on the 7 per cent. stock will be continued hereafter. The preferred stock advanced 5 points yesterday and the common 1¾.

Rumors in the financial district, possibly connected with the advance in the stock, were to the effect that the United States Industrial Alcohol Company would resume dividends on its common stock within a short time. The stock advanced 2¾ points yesterday.

It was evident, from a market viewpoint, that several corporations were making preparations to pay off arrears. There are at least a dozen stocks listed on the Stock Exchange in which such preparations are being made. Dividends on some of these have been in arrears since the deflation period of 1919-1920. In most cases these arrears will be discharged in cash. In a few instances stock dividends will be paid.

NEW PLANT FOR C. & O.

The Road Will Improve Its Facilities at Russell, Ky.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company will spend $1,300,000 in improving its facilities at Russell, Ky., it was announced yesterday by W. J. Harahan, President of the road.

Joseph F. Nelson & Co. of Chicago have received contracts for the construction of a fourteen-stall roundhouse, a machine shop equipped with overhead traveling cranes, power house, storehouse, engine supply house, water columns and washing platforms. The new engine plant will include a 1,000-ton reinforced concrete coal station and a 115-foot twin-span turntable.

National Dairy Buying Property.

In connection with the expansion of the National Dairy Products Co., executives of the company are negotiating for control of several properties in the larger cities of the country. Negotiations, it was learned yesterday, have reached a point where auditors are making an inventory of the properties. If these are found as expected, the deal will be consummated soon. No official announcement of the transactions is expected until after the return of T. H. McInnerney from Europe. Mr. McInnerney will sail within a few days and will be abroad about three weeks.

BYLLESBY STOCK OFFER.

450,000 Shares in Louisville Gas and Electric on Market Soon.

H. M. Byllesby & Co. will shortly offer for subscription at $26 a share 450,000 additional shares of Class A common stock (no par value) of the Louisville Gas and Electric Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Gas and Electric Company. The new issue will provide funds for capital readjustment and for construction.

The Louisville Gas and Electric has just placed in regular operation the new 35,500-horsepower steam-electric turbine unit in its Waterside plant in Kentucky, bringing the installed capacity of the plant up to 126,000 horsepower. This plant now ranks as one of the largest in the South.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Pressure Against the French Franc Feature—Sterling Slightly Higher—Continentals Firm.

Heavy selling of the French franc, the bulk of it speculative, sent the rate on Paris off 4 points to 5.07¼ cents yesterday. Support of the bill was noticeably lacking, even importers' requirements being nowhere in sight to stabilize the rate. Bankers attributed the reaction to the talk of the new schedule of taxes proposed by the French Finance Minister, and to the reconvening of the legislative bodies yesterday. There was a fractional recovery from the day's low point on covering purchases, this bringing the bill back to 5.08⅜ cents at the close.

The sterling market was only moderately active, London checks holding firm around $4.86, an advance of ¼ cent over Saturday. Italian lire was soft in the late dealings, after a start around 4.03 cents. Holland, Swiss, Belgian, Spanish and the Scandinavians were generally firm.

The Chinese currencies were higher on improved silver prices, as was the Indian rupee. Japanese yen was heavy, selling off to 41.69 cents from 41.88 cents. South Americans were uniformly steady and unchanged.

BANKERS TO BE GUESTS.

Stock Exchange Wants Them to Be Familiar With Its Operations.

Representatives of savings bank, trust companies and national banks located in all sections of the State are expected to attend the conference on the New York Stock Exchange tomorrow to give the bankers an opportunity of obtaining first-hand information of the workings of the institution.

Representatives of the Exchange yesterday pointed out that a large part of the nation's investors first consult their bankers before making investments, and the bankers in turn give their orders to the brokers, who transact the business on the Exchange. Oftentimes, it was said, the bankers are called upon to answer questions with which they are not familiar, and it is for this reason that the conference has been called.

The Exchange for several years has held an annual conference of its partners, branch managers and other executives for the same reason.

Fast Elevator for Washington Shaft.

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—The cry for speed has finally enveloped the Washington Monument, and today bids were opened for an elevator in that structure capable of traveling 250 feet a minute. The old elevator had a speed of 100 feet a minute, but it has been out of commission for some time and visitors who wished to see the monument inside and out had to climb the stairs inside the 555-foot shaft.

STANDARD RESCINDS GASOLINE PRICE CUT

FOURTH CHANGE RECENTLY

Tide Water Also Announces Advance—Texas Company Makes No Change.

Following a reduction of 2 cents a gallon in the price of gasoline by the Standard Oil Company of New York, to 18 cents a gallon tank wagon a few days ago, the company yesterday restored the quotation to the former price of 20 cents a gallon wholesale. This is the fourth change in prices the company has made since May 1, and indicates, according to trade experts, the erratic situation in the local gasoline market as a result of competition by the independent companies. The Tide Water Oil Company, of the Gulf Refining Company, announced similar advances in prices to meet those quoted by Standard of New York. The Texas Company, however, which openly fought the advance in prices by other large distributers in the New York district, has thus far made no change in prices.

Early in May the Texas Company was the first of the larger companies to cut its wholesale and retail prices. Several days later the Standard of New York reduced its price to meet that quoted by the Texas Company. Then, due to the firmer tone to the gasoline situation, Standard of New York advanced its prices to the former level. This advance was not met by the Texas Company, which announced that it would not advance its price so long as "its chief competitors were selling to favored dealers at 1½ cents to 2 cents a gallon below their published prices." Standard of New York again reduced its tank-wagon price 2 cents a gallon last week. This reduction is wiped out by the advance yesterday.

Production of crude oil increased sharply in the California fields last week, according to figures received in the financial district. The daily average output for the Southern fields was 332,300 barrels, a gain of 10,600 barrels compared with the previous week, when the daily average was 321,700 barrels. The gain was due chiefly to the larger production in the Rosecrans and Inglewood fields, while most of the older fields reported smaller output.

The American Petroleum Institute officially estimates California's production at 17,569,653 barrels for April, a daily average of 598,655 barrels, a reduction of 2,184 barrels in the daily average compared with March. Total stocks of crude and other oil products in the Pacific Coast territory increased 2,356,645 barrels last month. The stocks at the end of April totaled 133,235,605 barrels. Since Jan. 1, 1925, the increase in total stocks has been 8,213,641 barrels.

Detailed figures for April, however, showed a decrease of 157,600 barrels in the surplus stocks of gasoline and 586,727 barrels reduction in the surplus stocks of naphtha distillates. Heavy crude oil, including fuel oil, increased 1,807,612 barrels for the month.

COPPER IN GOOD DEMAND.

Decrease in Electrical Field Offset by Gain in Other Industries.

From all indications the domestic consumption of copper for the first half of 1925 will compare favorably with 1924, which established a post-war record, it was announced yesterday by George A. Sloan, Secretary of the Copper and Brass Research Association.

"While it is true," said Mr. Sloan, "that shipments during the early months of the year showed a temporary recession in copper's principal consuming field, the electrical industry, this was more than offset by increased tonnages in practically all other industries. The automobile remains our largest consumer of copper in the mechanical field, while the increased activity in railroad cars and locomotive construction during the first quarter of the year had its corresponding effect on copper tonnages."

ROAD SEEKS $9,575,000.

Short-Term Loan Planned for New York, Chicago & St. Louis.

The Guaranty Company is arranging a short-term loan of $9,575,000 to the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, to be used pending Interstate Commerce Commission action on the merger plans of the Greater Nickel Plate system. The transaction will involve no public offering at this time. The loan is being obtained in order temporarily to finance the maturity of a like amount of Toledo, St. Louis & Western 4 per cent. bonds falling due July 1. It is understood that the short-term notes to be issued to the Guaranty Company will be secured by bonds of the old Nickel Plate system.

Following a decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Nickel Plate merger plans, there is expected to be a large offering of Nickel Plate equipment trust certificates.

SUN OIL WILL OFFER STOCK.

Offering of 150,000 shares of the capital stock of the Sun Oil Company of Philadelphia will be made before the close of this week by a banking syndicate headed by Dominick & Dominick and Eastman, Dillon & Co. Information as to the details was withheld by the bankers, but it is understood that the stock will be offered at $36 a share.

In connection with reports last week regarding the proposed new financing it was stated on behalf of the bankers that the proposed sale of stock comprises a new issue and does not represent part of the holdings of the Pew family, which controls between 80 and 90 per cent. of the company's shares. The old Sun Oil Company was originally organized by J. N. Pew, who was President of the organization up to his death in 1912. He was succeeded by his son, J. Howard Pew. Five members of the Pew family serve the company as Vice Presidents. There will be no change in the management of the company.

Proceeds from the sale of stock will be used to retire notes of $4,000,000, maturing next month, to finance additions to the company's plant and other purposes.

The Great Western Power System reported yesterday an April gross of $645,949, against $628,984 for April of last year, and a balance after taxes, charges and depreciation and accrued dividends on California Electric Generating Company preferred stock, of $113,766, against $103,238. For the twelve months ended April 30 gross earnings were $7,780,413, against $7,328,864 the year before, and balance after taxes and charges was $1,244,170, against $1,415,298.

The Philadelphia company earned net operating income of $1,541,502 in April, against $1,541,519 in April, 1924. In the four months of 1925, net was $7,511,529, compared with $6,799,002 last year.

NEW BANK AT CONEY ISLAND.

State Bank Will Formally Open Its Building Tomorrow.

The State Bank will formally open its new bank building at Mermaid Avenue and West Twenty-second Stfeet, Coney Island, tomorrow. The bank, a year ago, recognizing the growth of commercial activities of Coney Isladn, opened a temporary office at 2,726 Mermaid Avenue. Business increased steadily and the permanent branch is starting business with the names of several thousand customers on its books.

Harold G. Richard is President of the State Bank, which was organized in 1890 and which has a dozen branches throughout New York City. The bank has capital, surplus and undivided profits of $9,000,000.

ENDS SUGAR FUTURES TRADE

Effective June 1, trading in refined sugar futures will be suspended by the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. Business in raw sugar futures, however, will be continued as usual.

When the authorities of the Exchange decided some time ago to suspend dealings in refined futures, it was announced that the business done in this product on the Exchange was very small.

CALL MONEY ADVANCES.

Goes to 4½%, the Highest Since April 21.

Call money rates advanced to 4½ per cent. in the New York market yesterday, the highest point reached since April 21. The market opened at 3¾, advanced to 4 about 1 o'clock and reached 4½ at 2:30, most of the day's business being transacted at the higher rates. It was said that only renewals were put through at 3¾ per cent.

Bankers said that the steadier tone represented no significance other than routine shifting of funds with the approach of the first of the month. Many interest and dividend payments are due on June 1, and money is being drawn to meet these requirements. Banks, it was said, have had little funds available for the money market for the last week. What has been available, it was said, has come from the interior, which is now calling it back.

There was no change in the time money market, 3¾ per cent. being bid and 4 per cent. asked for 90 and 120 day paper, with the bulk of the business placed at 3¾ per cent. For five and six months' borrowings 3¾ per cent. is being bid, but the banks hold firmly to a 4 per cent. rate. This has resulted in something of a deadlock, in which little business is being transacted.

NORTH AMERICAN DIVIDEND.

85th Quarterly on the Common Is Payable in More Shares.

The North American Company Directors declared the eighty-fifth quarterly dividend yesterday on the common stock or the ninth quarterly on the common stock payable in common. The regular 1½ per cent. was authorized for the preferred and 2½ per cent. on the common, both payable to stockholders of record June 5. The common dividend is payable in common stock at par or at the rate of 1-40th of a share. President Frank L. Dame said:

"This dividend on the common stock is the same as the last dividend paid April 1. Stockholders who elected to take advantage of the company's offer to arrange for the sale of their dividend stock received cash at $1.10 per share, or the market price on April 1, instead of 85 cents per share under the underwriting offer. This procedure may be followed by stockholders, if they wish, with respect to the dividend declared today, so that stockholders who desire cash will receive an amount approximately equal to the market value of their dividend stock on July 1. At today's market, this would give common stockholders about $1.25 per share instead of 85 cents."

WILL RETIRE NOTES.

International Utilities Plans to Simplify Financial Structure.

Plans for simplification of the financial structure of the International Utilities Corporation are understood to call for the retirement of the three-year 7 per cent. convertible notes of the Southwestern Utilities Corporation, a subsidiary. This step would release an issue of first mortgage bonds of the Northwestern Utilities, Ltd., also a subsidiary, which are serving as collateral for the Southwestern company's notes. The Northwestern company's mortgage bonds were sold recently by Chandler & Co., who issued temporary receipts to investors.

Upon completion of the program planned the bonds, it is said, will soon be issued to holders of the temporary receipts upon surrender of these at the Empire Trust Company.

MERGER IN REFRIGERATORS.

Car Lighting and Power Co. Said to Be in Deal in the West.

A merger of a large Western company specializing in the manufacture of electrical refrigerators for household use with the Car Lighting and Power Company, a pioneer in the manufacture of electrical refrigerators for commercial purposes, was said yesterday to be under negotiation. The deal was described in financial quarters as preliminary to combination with one or more other companies in the same business.

It was said that the plant of the Car Lighting and Power Company, now at Bayonne, probably would be moved to the West to save labor costs. The name of the Western company was not divulged. Sales of electrical refrigerators are increasing, according to persons in the industry.

NICKEL PLATE MERGER OPPOSED AT HEARING

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—Hearings on the Van Sweringen-Nickel Plate Railroad merger plan were resumed today before the Interstate Commerce Commission with counsel for Chesapeake & Ohio minority stock interests that are opposing the project taking up the entire session in cross examining E. M. Thomas, auditor of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, and H. A. Osgood, a St. Louis traffic expert.

Mr. Thomas testified that the expenditures of the Chesapeake & Ohio for maintenance during 1923 and 1924 had been greater than in previous years. Mr. Osgood conceded that some of his estimates as to traffic volume which the Nickel Plate Railroad might expect to develop had not been borne out by later results.

O. P. Van Sweringen, prime mover in the proposed unification of the Nickel Plate, Erie, Pere Marquette, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Hocking Valley systems, is to be called before the end of the week.

Thomas R. Gay, counsel for the stockholders, brought out that the Chesapeake & Ohio company was meeting the expenses of officials and employes who have been held in attendance at the long inquiry, the expenditures being charged to operations.

SEES GOOD CROP PROSPECT.

Land Bank Head Says Conditions in Minnesota Are Excellent.

Guy Huston, President of the Chicago Joint Stock Land Bank and recently elected Chairman of the Board of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank said yesterday that crop conditions in Minnesota were excellent, alfalfa and clover showing a good growth and Spring sown barley, wheat and oats being well up and of good color.

Corn planting, he added, was virtually completed, with the fields free from weeds and in good condition for cultivation. The farmers reported a high percentage of pigs saved and doing well, owing to the early Spring and good growth of pastures. In general, he said, the country banks had liquidated their bills payable and were in a strong cash position.

TOBACCO CO. OFFERS STOCK TO EMPLOYES

Percival S. Hill, President of the American Tobacco Company, yesterday sent out notices to the 14,443 employes of the company announcing the terms of the eighth annual offering under which employes are given an opportunity to share in the management and profits of the organization. Under the company's plan each employe is given the opportunity to invest in preferred stock on a pro rata basis, based upon his earnings, ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 annually, the smallest subscription permitted being for two shares and the largest for twenty.

The company buys the shares in the open market and the price to the company is usually better than $106 a share. This stock is then sold to employes at a price which amounts to $89.97 a share, taking into consideration the dividends received and the bonus paid by the company to all subscribers. The current offering is being made at $103 a share, which is less than the cost to the company. If the employe holds the stock for two years he is credited with seven quarterly dividends of $1.50 each, and two yearly allowances by the company of $4 each, making a total of $35. Against this there is a deduction of 5 per cent. interest for the unpaid balance, amounting to $5.47, making the net price to the employe $89.97 a share.

NEW BANK TO OPEN.

A new commercial bank, which will open offices at the northeast corner of Broadway and Fortieth Street, is in the process of organization, it was learned yesterday. It has applied to the Government for a national bank charter. Plans for the institution, it was said, had been under way for some time and the building in which it would be housed had been constructed to provide banking facilities.

The bank has been capitalized at $2,000,000 and will begin business with a surplus of $500,000. D. S. Gottesman, Chairman of the organizing committee, said that the entire capital stock had been oversubscribed. Among the subscribers, he added, were men prominent in the silk, wool, cotton and fur trades.

Rules on California Oil Stock.

The Committee on Securities of the New York Stock Exchange yesterday ruled that transactions in the preferred and common stock of the California Petroleum Company, unless made for cash, be quoted ex-rights on June 2. After that date the rights may be quoted "when issued." They expire on June 16.

COTTON SETS NEW HIGH, THEN REACTS

Colder Weather With Forecasts of Frost Causes Active, Nervous Markets.

Violent weather changes over Sunday that brought temperatures below 40 degrees in some northerly portions of the belt, and predictions of frost in several States for last night, caused an active, nervous cotton market yesterday. Prices made new high records for the past two weeks and a gain above quotations of a week ago. The sharp rise attracted contracts and after several 20 to 30 point fluctuations ended at a gain of four to a loss of three points on the day.

Colder weather was attended by showers in many parts of the South and private reports indicated moisture over some of the drought sections of Texas. The sharp advance in grain increased covering in commission-house circles and brought a larger volume of business than the recent daily transactions.

An early rise in foreign quotations where contracts advanced 25 English points and spots 27 points to a basis of 13.07d started the local market 10 to 15 points higher than Saturday. The covering movement under way the last of the week was continued on and immediately following the call. October selling above 22¾ cents. The market ran into a more liberal supply of contracts for distant deliveries, and profit taking by recent purchasers started a 30-point reaction. Moisture in both Eastern and Western sections over the week-end were highly beneficial and caused professional selling. But around 22½ cents for October covering operations were resumed. With predictions of possible frost in Northern portions of Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas overnight, and rumors that a Memphis spinner made the condition 76.9, prices recovered to opening figures for several of the months. Trade reports advised indicated a larger business the past week than in several months and conditions in both the domestic and foreign goods market reflected beneficial results of lower price levels. Though July and new crop months advanced a few points above top figures of last week, July lost some of its recent premium over October. At times during the session July was offered 50 points over October, compared with 60 points premium recently. Realizing operations were in progress in final trading.

KING RECEIVES HOUGHTON.

LONDON, May 25 (AP).—Ambassador Houghton was formally presented to King George at a levee in St. James Palace this morning.

Ambassador Houghton, unlike some of his predecessors, did not wear knee breeches but clothes almost identical to ordinary formal dress. Accompanied only by the Counsellor of the Embassy, he took his place at the head of the diplomatic presentees. After bowing before the King he passed out of the reception chamber and returned to the Embassy.

Although it was the third levee this year, it marked King George's first appearance at one of these events, the Prince of Wales having presided at the two previous ones in his father's absence on his Mediterranean cruise.

BOARD ACTS TODAY ON FORD SHIP SALE

It Will Also Consider an Alternative Proposal to Dispose of 200 Vessels for Scrapping.

FOR ADOPTION OF A POLICY

Majority of Board Is Said to Favor This Rather Than Accepting Specific Ford Offer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The Shipping Board tomorrow will consider the offer of Henry Ford to buy 400 Government vessels, and an alternative proposal that the board limit its sales for the present to 200 ships especially designated by a committee appointed to plan the disposal of obsolete tonnage.

It is still the understanding that Chairman T. V. O'Connor will urge approval of a deal with Mr. Ford and also sales to others who buy Government ships to scrap them. Whether Mr. O'Connor will attempt to press the Ford proposition regardless of the alternative plan is not known, but it was said today that the majority of the board favors the adoption of a policy rather than now accepting a specific offer from Mr. Ford or any other individual.

What action will be taken as to 896 idle ships was discussed at length today by the Scrapping Committee, which adopted a resolution recommending the sale of 200 ships as scrap that originally cost about $150,000,000, but which, it is expected, will not yield 10 per cent. of that amount if sold as scrap. Of the vessels listed for sale by the Scrapping Committee 150 are of the late type and the others are regarded as obsolete.

The lakers are included in the group of ships that it is said were mentioned in the course of Mr. Ford's conference with Chairman O'Connor in Detroit a few weeks ago. They contain much material that Mr. Ford could convert to use in his various industries.

Chairman O'Connor also will bring up tomorrow the reported offer of Mr. Ford to buy thirty ships for transportation purposes.

Members of the Shipping Board made it plain again today that under no circumstances will Mr. Ford receive a free field in the purchase of Government ships for scrap. They point out that others have been seeking to buy scrap material in the form of ships and that the board's policy is to make such sales through competitive bidding. As this rule will be retained Mr. Ford will have to take his chances with competitors.

The sale of 200 vessels would materially lessen maintenance costs, it was pointed out today. Of 1,250 ships 896 are out of commission. They cost about $1,000,000,000, but their present value does not exceed $80,000,000. It costs nearly $3,000,000 a year to maintain them. As the board is anxious to reduce this heavy charge, indications are that it will scrap at least 200, and possibly 400, if Mr. Ford's reported offer has stimulated interest. The 896 unused ships aggregate about 5,700,000 dead-weight tons, and the sale of all, according to board officials, would not yield much over $17,000,000.

About sixty of the lakers recommended for sale by the Scrapping Committee are tied up at New York.

STRAWN JOINS BOARD ON CHINESE CUSTOMS

Chicago Lawyer Will Represent America in Planning Increased Revenues for China.

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—Silas H. Strawn of Chicago has accepted appointment to go with Minister John Van A. MacMurray to China as American Commissioner to attend the special conference on Chinese customs provided for in the nine-power treaty.

Mr. MacMurray also has been commissioned to act for the Washington Government in connection with the customs conference.

The treaty has been ratified by all of the signatory nations except France, which is expected to take similar action in time for the customs conference to be held this Fall.

Under provisions of the treaty, the conference will be called by the Chinese Government within three months after formal ratifications have been exchanged. It will be attended by commissioners representing the nine signatory powers, and is intended to work out details of the increased customs revenues which the treaty provides for the Chinese Central Government.

Mr. Strawn is one of the attorneys first selected by President Coolidge to represent the Government as special counsel in the litigation growing out of the Senate investigation of naval oil leases. His name was withdrawn when opposition developed in the investigating committee because of his directorship in a bank having oil interest connections.

Secretary Kellogg conferred today with a group of American business men interested in the question of Chinese customs. They called at the State Department to give Mr. Kellogg the benefit of their experience in Chinese customs practices to aid in the preparation of instructions for guidance of the American commissioners. They were said to have expressed unanimous approval of Mr. Strawn's appointment.

GEORGE W. LOFT SEEKS TO RECOVER $1,000,000

George W. Loft, head of the $10,000,000 candy company, filed a suit for $1,000,000 in the Supreme Court yesterday against Frank Steinhardt, President of the American Chamber of Commerce of Havana, Cuba. Only a summons in the case, which was served on Mr. Steinhardt on a steamship pier last Tuesday, has been filed.

Abram S. Gilbert, attorney for Mr. Loft, declined to discuss the case, but it was learned that the suit arises from the purchase by Mr. Loft and Mr. Steinhardt of a Cuban sugar plantation about ten years ago, when, it is contended, Mr. Steinhardt had insufficient funds to carry out his part of the transaction and Mr. Loft loaned him securities to enable him to do so. Mr. Loft now asserts, it was said, that the securities were not returned to him at the time agreed upon, but at a later date when their value had depreciated. Mr. Loft declined yesterday to discuss the case.

Mr. Steinhardt went to Havana during the Spanish-American War with the American army of occupation. His business ability brought him to the attention of Major Gen. Leonard Wood, who made Steinhardt his secretary. President Roosevelt named him Consul General in Havana. In addition to his other activities, he is President of the Havana Electric Light, Railway and Power Company.

Mr. Loft is one of the bidders before the Board of Estimate for a bus franchise for the People's Electrobus Corporation, of which he is President. Recent reports that a deal has been pending for the sale of the Loft candy stores to the Schulte tobacco interests have been denied by Mr. Loft.

ATTACK REVALUATION OF GERMAN BONDS

The American Association of Holders of German Mark Securities has cabled a protest to the German Minister of Finance, Herr von Schlieben, in Berlin, and to Graf Schwerin, Chairman of the Revaluation Committee of the Reichstag, regarding the pending bill which would revalue certain German securities at a ratio of 5 per cent of the original sums called for. The cable, which was sent following the adoption of resolutions condemning the revaluation bill, is as follows:

"The American Association of Holders of German Mark Securities, representing numerous dealers and holders of German mark securities, who constitute the greatest potential American market for future German public and private loans, vigorously protests against the unjust and discriminatory provisions of the revaluation bill now pending. Resolutions demanding the elimination of certain features and the modification of others were adopted and copies will be mailed."

The message was signed by Leopold Zimmerman, Chairman of the association.

The resolutions condemning the revaluation bill were adopted at a meeting of the organization committee of the association, held in the offices of Zimmermann & Forshay, 170 Broadway. The revaluation bill would apply to all the old German mark loans, with the exception of the forced loan of 1922. The resolutions declare that the revaluation would not benefit the real sufferers in America, "but would cause a great deal of unnecessary expense and annoyance in bringing proof, would open the gates to fraud and would seriously affect future credits."

Licensing of Solicitors Quashed.

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—The Ordinance of Portland, Ore., requiring the payment of license fee and the filing of a bond by persons soliciting orders for goods for future delivery, on which they collect payments in advance, was declared invalid today by the Supreme Court. The case was brought by the Real Silk Hosiery Mills of Indianapolis. Cities in Minnesota, California, Iowa, North Dakota, Montana, Louisiana and Washington have similar ordinances. Justice McReynolds, in delivering the opinion, said such a regulation was an unlawful restraint of interstate commerce.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED IN CORONADO CASE

HOLDS LOCALS RESPONSIBLE

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Another chapter was written and another trial was ordered today in a Supreme Court decision in the celebrated Coronado Coal Company-Mine Workers' Union litigation.

The opinion, written by Chief Justice Taft, held that there was nothing to show that the international union was responsible for a conspiracy unlawfully to restrain the corporation's interstate trade in coal, but that there was conclusive evidence that District Local 21 had carried on two attacks against the mines of the companies suing. They may now proceed against the local to determine whether "the outrages, destruction and crimes committed were intentionally directed toward a restraint of interstate commerce."

The first verdict in this case was given in the District Court of Western Arkansas and awarded $200,000 to the Coronado and other companies. Taken to the Supreme Court, that tribunal ordered a new trial, which resulted in a directed verdict and judgment for the unions, this being affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals. Then the case came back to the Supreme Court on a writ of error.

"It does not appear that the international convention or the Executive Board (of the United Mine Workers of America) ever authorized this strike or took any part in the preparation for it or in its maintenance, or that they ratified it by paying any of the expenses," said today's opinion.

"The action of the trial court in its direction of a verdict for the defendant, the international union, must be affirmed.

"The tendency of the evidence to show that District 21 through its authorized leaders and agents and certain of its subordinate local unions organized and carried through two attacks of April 6 and July 17 is so clear that it does not need further discussion. The only issue is whether the outrages, destruction and crimes committed were intentionally directed toward a restraint of interstate commerce.

"We think there was substantial evidence at the second trial tending to show that the purpose of the destruction of the mines was to stop the production of non-union coal and prevent its shipment to markets of other States than Arkansas, where it would by competition tend to reduce the price of the commodity and affect injuriously the maintenance of wages for union labor in competing mines, and that the direction by the district Judge to return a verdict for the defendants other than the international union was erroneous.

"We affirm the judgment of the District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals in favor of the international union of the United Mine Workers of America and reverse that in favor of District 21 and the other local unions and the individual defendants and remand the cause as to them for a new trial."

LOW THERMOMETER BOOMS WHEAT AGAIN

HEAVY BUYING IN "THE PIT"

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 25.—With temperatures as low as 32 officially reported as far south at Kansas, where ice formed at numerous points, and as low as 26 in Illinois and Indiana, there was a wide wave of buying in all grains today on apprehension of heavy damage, and prices advanced rapidly, the close being 2@6⅝ cents higher on wheat, 3⅛@4⅛ on corn, 1½@1¾ on oats and ½@5⅝ on rye, while December corn jumped 8 cents to 99¼ and closed 6⅝ cents higher.

Heavy profit taking was on in wheat at times, but the outside trade was much broader and offerings were quickly absorbed and the finish was at the top on the new crop deliveries, which were in new ground on the present upturn. July was for sale at $1.60 just as it was at $1.50 and at $1.55, but the selling checked the upturn only for a short time.

There was persistent buying in small lots by commission houses for outside traders and also buying by houses with Eastern connections which was attributed to short covering.

The trade is greatly apprehensive over the prospect of damage in Kansas, as the crop in that section is well along toward maturity and in a position where a heavy loss is possible. Late messages from Central Illinois indicated, however, that little damage had been done to wheat or oats over night, but that, where corn was up, some replanting would be necessary.

Minneapolis July lagged and closed only 3¼ cents higher, but at St. Louis that future was 6⅛ cents higher, leading the upturn in all markets.

At the last many of the local element were long and a majority of the local bears had covered, weakening the technical position.

A decrease of 3,431,000 bushels in the visible supply brought the total down to 37,173,000 bushels, compared with 40,604,000 the previous week and 44,666,000 last year.

Export demand was slow, with sales of 200,000 bushels in all positions. The local basis on red Winter was 2@5 cents lower, with a sale at 18 cents over the May.

Primary arrivals were 1,294,000 bushels; week ago, 922,000; last year, 780,000. Shipments were 1,231,000 bushels; week ago, 1,148,000; last year, 541,000.

Late messages this afternoon claimed that considerable replanting will be necessitated in the heart of the Illinois and Iowa corn belt.

There was limited pressure on the corn market from the start, and the finish was around the top. Cash demand remains slow, and the spot basis was off around 1 cent as compared with May, with receipts of 353 cars.

The visible supply decreased 2,190,000 bushels for the week, and is 17,383,000, against 19,562,000 a week ago and 13,252,000 last year.

Primary arrivals were 1,034,000 bushels; week ago, 461,000; last year, 706,000, and shipments, 576,000 bushels; week ago, 278,000; last year, 512,000.

Live Stock Markets at Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Excessive receipts of hogs, 63,000, the largest in over three months, caused a decline of 35@50 cents in prices, despite the better quality. The day's average dropped 40 cents to $11.85, while the top was $12.35. Practically all classes of buyers were in the market, but at the close around 15,000 were carried over. Receipts of lambs of 14,000 were the second smallest for a Monday in nearly five months. Arrivals were below trade requirements and killing lambs were strong to 25 cents higher, while sheep were steady. Top California Springs sold at $16, with the top on shorn $15.50. Heavy steers found a slow demand, with prices 10@15 cents lower. Yearlings and light weights were steady. The top on choice light steers was $11.50, heavies $11.10, and medium weights $11.25. Receipts were 19,000.

TIENTSIN-PUKOW LINE RUINED BY MILITARY

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, May 25.—The North China Daily News today publishes a graphic account of the state to which military management has reduced the Tientsin-Pukow Railway. The Shanghai-Nanking Railways being once again under their own foreign management, the correspondent accomplished the journey to Nanking with comfort and punctuality. Then trouble began.

The military having commandeered all railway launches, the Yangtse River had to be crossed in barges. Besides being uncomfortable, they were far from safe, as the river is wide and often very rought. On arriving at Pukow, opposite Nanking, there was no sign of the Blue Express, and no news of it, the telegraph wires being wholly engaged by the military and the railway authorities being unable to send messages.

When the passengers suggested that another train could be made up station master replied that no cars were available, although plenty of them were standing about. And so were engines. But the passenger cars are being used as barracks for soldiers and the engines are kept at the disposal of any officer who wishes to take a trip up the line.

No food was obtainable for the passengers, although there was a restaurant car beside the platform. It was occupied by soldiers, who also filled all the waiting rooms. The passengers had, therefore, to camp on the open platform, with nothing to eat except such cakes and fruit as could be bought from Chinese hawkers, until the next day, when the Blue Express arrived forty-three hours late.

It is unnecessary to add that the rolling stock showed general signs of shocking deterioration. Bad as conditions are on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, they probably are worse on other lines.

The statement just published gives the revenues of the Chinese Government railways in 1924, not including, however, the Tunghai and the Shanghai and Nanking Railways. The figures show a decrease in working revenue of over $4,600,000 (about $2,300,000 in United States currency), and an increase in working expenses of $3,132,000, compared with 1923. The civil war only occupied the last three months of 1924. Therefore, the showing for the present year, during which the only line extricated from the military was the Shanghai, must be infinitely worse.

There is no inspection of rolling stock, no repairs, no replacement of parts. And as the officers appropriate most of the available revenue by leasing the freight cars to merchants at high rates for their own behoof, the Ministry of Communication has no funds with which to obtain new material. If the present conditions continue the day may be not far off when the railway will be simply unworkable.

COTTON EXCHANGE REPORTS

Deliveries for Year Ended April 30 Rose 47.5 Per Cent.

The fifty-fifth annual report of the New York Cotton Exchange for the fiscal year ended April 30, states that during the year 842,500 bales of cotton were delivered on contract, an increase of 271,500 or 47.5 per cent. over the previous year.

One of the changes under the present administration of Edward E. Bartlett Jr., it is said, has been the suspension of trading for five minutes before and fifteen minutes after the issuance of the condition reports and estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture. This procedure, it is added, has resulted in more stabilized and orderly trading.

Reference is also made to a change in the rules providing that trading in the current month shall cease at noon on the tenth day of the month. This, it is explained, gives all Southern points ample time to ship cotton in fulfillment of contract. Forty-three members were elected during the year and seventy-two memberships transferred.

RAILROADS SUFFER IN PASSENGER WAR

POOLING PLAN PROPOSED

Commerce Commission May Be Asked to Approve Cutting of Service to Reduce Outlay.

Competition among the railroads for passenger traffic is costing them millions of dollars yearly, in the opinion of bankers in the financial district, and it is thought highly probable that they may appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to pool the passenger traffic between competitive points and reduce the service to the actual necessities. This, it is pointed out, would save about one-half of the present outlay for passenger service and leave all the lines with more net revenue.

Although the passenger traffic has declined steadily during the last few years from motor bus competition, and because more people are using their automobiles for week-end and vacation trips, many passenger trains have been added to the service between important railroad centres. Bankers interested in the financing of railroads say that there are at present five railroads operating between Chicago and Omaha with a total of thirty-eight trains daily between these points. They declare that one-half that number could handle the traffic if it were properly allocated, and that this would result in aggregate annual saving of $3,500,000.

There are seven railroads operating between Chicago and the Twin Cities with a total of twenty-six passenger trains. There are four railroads between Chicago and St. Louis operating thirty-eight passenger trains. Recently a speed war was inaugurated and the time between the two cities cut to six and one-half hours. The Chicago & Alton, which is in the hands of the receivers, is said to be one of the most active competitors and runs sixteen trains a day.

Bankers feel that other commercial enterprises would not prosper under such a plan and are behind the movement to seek relief from the Commerce Commission. The cost of a modern transcontinental passenger train is estimated at about $1,000,000, including the locomotive. The carrying charge is about $300 a day, or nearly 60 cents per train mile. Under the present competitive system, it is said, the railways seem to be striving with one another to expend money in furnishing dining car, lounge car and club car service, which, it is thought, would be remedied if the commission exercised its regulatory powers.

EX-PEDDLER LEFT MILLION.

Theodore Neckles of 2,010 Quarry Road, the Bronx, who died Sunday of pneumonia after an operation in the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, was reputed to have amassed a fortune of $1,000,000, the foundation for which was laid twenty-five years ago when he peddled fruit from a pushcart on the east side.

He came here in 1899 from Sparta, Greece, practically penniless. His interests gradually included chain candy stores, restaurants and valuable realty holdings in the neighborhood of Tammany Hall. His wife and children survive.

GARMENT WORKERS INSIST PAY IS LOW

AVERAGE IS PUT AT $1,760

Summary of Union's Position Declares Manufacturers Have Misstated Conditions.

The memorandum submitted by Morris Hillquit as counsel for the union to the Governor's Advisory Commission investigating the cloak, suit and skirt industry of New York was made public yesterday. Briefs submitted for the manufacturers have already been published. In its final memorandum the union summarizes the main points in its requests for bettering labor conditions in the industry, as well as the arguments of the other side, and discusses them in detail.

On the subject of wage increase the memorandum says in part:

"On this subject the investigation just concluded shows the average annual earnings in the inside shops to be $2,076 per year and in the sub-manufacturers' shops $1,675. About three-fourths of the workers work in sub-manufacturers' shops, so that the average earnings of the worker in the whole industry are about $1,760.

"The average cloakmaker has a family to support, and that upon the basis of living costs and standards of life prevailing in the City of New York. The union asserts, from its intimate knowledge of the mode of life and needs of its members, that such earnings are entirely inadequate, and that they fall short of the minimum requirements, i. e., those 'below which a family cannot go without danger of physical and moral deterioration,' to adopt a definition of the United States Department of Labor.

"In this connection the union emphatically rejects the theory of the existence of an 'excess of labor supply' or 'surplus labor' in the industry, and denies that such an alleged excess or surplus of workers in any way accounts for the inadequate earnings or the seasonal fluctuations in the industry."

Attacks Manufacturers' Arguments.

In its "concluding observations" the memorandum attacks statements relating to the industry contributed by the other side and asks that they be disregarded. It asks that additional investigation of conditions be made and professes a desire to cooperate. The memorandum continues:

"In concluding, the union is constrained to point out a fundamental error which, it believes, colors the arguments and briefs of the inside manufacturers and jobbers. Throughout all these arguments it is assumed that the business of production and distributing cloaks and suits is a purely mechanical process and that the sole problem of the industry is to organize it on the basis of maximum efficiency from the point of view of employers' profits. The fact that the workers are an integral part of the industry, and that their interests and welfare as human beings must be taken into consideration, is practically ignored. The fundamental difference between the views of the union and those of the employers primarily from the fact that the union also views the industry as the permanent source of living of the workers and holds that no general arrangement between its various factors can endure which does not take into full account the rights, health and welfare of the workers.

"Another peculiar misconception into which learned counsel for the associations fall in their arguments is that the present chaotic and disorganized condition of the industry is the 'law of nature and supply and demand' (Brief of Industrial Council), and that the irresponsible management which has sprung up within the last few years represents an 'orderly development' (Brief of Merchants' Association), which can not and should not be 'artificially' disturbed.

"If this antiquated philosophy were to be accepted, no collective agreements would ever be made between employers and workers and no standards and no rules of conduct could be established among employers or among workers, for all such agreements and rules are deliberate and 'artificial' interferences with the supreme 'law of nature,' i.e., the unregulated operation of supply and demand. The whole trend of modern industry is to get away from the blind forces of supply and demand and to organized socially and 'artificially' and on the basis of ascertained facts and conditions and with due regard to the interests of all parties and factors in the industry.

Denies It Is Antagonistic.

"The union emphatically denies the charge that it pursues a policy of antagonism toward the employers. On the contrary, the whole record of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union and of the Joint Board of Cloakmakers' Unions in the city is a continuous effort to cooperate with the employers on the basis of justice and fairness. If the workers have been presenting requests for changes in the terms of employment from time to time, it was not because they are possessed of a spirit of restlessness or are chronically dissatisfied and antagonistic, but because the organization of the industry and its methods of operation have been constantly changing and requiring corresponding readjustments for the protection of the most vital interests of the workers. The industry is today confronted with the most radical and thorough-going change in the basic methods of operations and in the relations between employers and workers. The seemingly sweeping rearrangements urged by the workers at this time are no more than an effort to readjust the conditions of the workers in conformity with the readjustment brought about by the employers."

PLAN INDUSTRIAL SHOW.

Business Men to Hold Pacific Northwest Exposition.

A commercial and industrial exposition of the Pacific Northwest States will be held in New York early in the Spring of 1926, according to an announcement yesterday by Edward P. Kemmer, manager of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce, who is in this city to make preliminary arrangements for the exposition. A New York committee was appointed yesterday at a luncheon held at the Waldorf-Astoria, which was attended by about twenty-five business men of this city identified with Western interests.

The proposed exposition will have for its primary purpose the extension of Eastern markets for manufactured articles and trade products of the Pacific Northwest, with the added purpose of attracting investors to the industrial opportunities offered in the Pacific States. Edward H. Lang, traffic manager of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, was appointed Chairman of the New York committee, which also includes Charles F. Junod, Vice President of the Bank of America, and Carl H. Gray. Among those present at the luncheon were Bernard M. Baruch, F. N. Shepherd, Vice President of the American Bankers' Association; L. H. Bean, Vice President of the Dwight P. Robinson Company; Paul Clagstone, Western Division Manager of the United States Chamber of Commerce; T. BRINDELL CASE GOES TO PAROLE BOARD

LINKED IN JERSEY STRIKE

Former "Czar" Said to Have Formed Social Club at Which Union Matters Are Thrashed Out.

The charge that Robert P. Brindell, former leader in the building trades unions, who was released some time ago from Great Meadow Prison, has been violating his pledge not to engage in labor union activities, which was made a condition of his parole, will be investigated by the State Board of Parole when it meets at Great Meadow Prison Wednesday. Samuel Untermyer, who as Special Attorney General prosecuted Brindell, and who later urged the Parole Board to bar the former labor leader from union activities, has charged that Brindell is violating both the spirit and letter of his parole.

When Brindell was liberated from prison he was ordered to refrain from labor activities and was forbidden by stipulation from becoming an officer, delegate or agent of any union. The present investigation followed a report that he had taken a prominent part a few nights ago in a meeting of the Dock Builders' Old Timers' Social Club at 12 St. Mark's Place, which, it is said, is more than the name means.

Mr. Untermyer's only comment yesterday was that if the Parole Board wishes facts as to Brindell's activities it will have no difficulty in getting them.

The Secretary of the new club, which Prindell is said to have organized is Albert J. Olson, who was Brindell's financial secretary in the old Dockbuilders' Union and who was sought by Mr. Untermyer at the time of the Lockwood Committee investigation. Thomas F. Walsh, who presided at the club meeting on Thursday last, is another Brindell man. The Recording Secretary is James Oakley, who was ousted from the union and later reinstated during the Brindell régime.

It was learned yesterday that out of the 3,000 members of the Dockbuilders' Union only about 150 have joined the club. The latter organization is said to have issued membership cards that closely resemble the working cards of the union. Union affairs are said to have been discussed at its meetings and, according to report, at the last meeting speakers suggested that none of the members of the union should be employed on jobs unless they held the green card of the club.

There is a strike on in Essex County, N. J., of carpenters. One job is being done by the Public Service Production Company, which employs fourteen men. According to information, these fourteen are members of the social club. The reason given for the strike is a demand for increased wages in Essex County.

It is said that Brindell has assumed the Public Service Production Company that he practically controls the union and that other men working on other jobs for the company will not be told to strike without Brindell's orders. This is not a fact, it is said, because the union will probably order a sympathetic strike.

It was made clear yesterday that Mr. Untermyer is of the opinion that the hearing by the Parole Board should be public. If the meetings were open, proof of Brindell's alleged activities in violation of his parole could be aired and witnesses forced to attend, Mr. Untermyer holds.

John Bramer, parole agent of the Catholic Protective Society, 477 Madison Avenue, in whose custody Brindell was paroled last December, would not discuss the case. He referred inquiries to James L. Long, Superintendent of State Prisons and a member of the Parole Board. Mr. Long left Sing Sing Prison yesterday to attend the meeting. The board is due to visit Sing Sing on Thursday to received applications from a number of prisoners for parole.

CHAPMAN EVIDENCE STILL UNAVAILABLE

Prosecutor Must Await Report on New Britain Inquiry Into Police Testimony.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., May 25 (AP).—A letter from Chairman David L. Dunn of the local Police Commission to State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, who wrote to Chairman Dunn asking him for a transcript of the statements made by three policemen at a recent hearing of the Discipline Committee when it is alleged, they admitted making misstatements while testifying at the trial of Gerald Chapman, charged with the murder of Policeman James Skelly in this city last October, given out this afternoon, says in part:

"In spite of your deductions from the newspaper accounts of the Discipline Committee hearing in New Britain in the cases of Officers Liebler, Malona and Feeney, I must inform you that the testimony at that hearing was not written down and that there is at present nothing written whatsoever concerning that hearing and will not be until the report of the Discipline Committee is prepared.

"The hearing was informal in character and if you desire the testimony in the form it was taken, it will be necessary for you to listen to a recital of it by one or all of the members that were present.

"In view of these facts, it is impossible to comply with your request contained in the last paragraph of your letter of May 23, 1925."

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—4 per cent. for the best names. Saturday—4 per cent. for the best names. The quotations are for six months' paper.

Duplicates Likely to Be Browns.

The light colors offered in men's hats for Fall have been taking well, according to manufacturers here. Pearls and various shades of gray have stood out in the demand, and the consumer call for these shades is relied on to be a feature of the early Fall business. At the same time, it is held that these are not likely to last the season through, and the opinion was expressed yesterday that the lighter tones of brown will come to the fore in the later business. It is thus figured that the duplicate business will tend more to stress beige and similar tones of the more delicate browns and tans.

Trends in Gloves for Fall.

The cuff style is again featured in women's kid and fabric gloves for the Fall season. While the flare is said to be still running strong, a gain in interest in the turn-back effect is noted by wholesalers here. The cuffs are highly ornate and often in three or more color combinations in embroidered floral or other patterns. Colors of the glove proper run strongly to mode, beaver, champagne and oak shades, with a black cuff supplying a contrast. Buying thus far for Fall is said to have been fairly active. The makers of kid gloves are facing a light situation owing to the restricted quantities of glove leathers available and the higher prices ruling on them. There is still a fair amount of immediate delivery business in silk gloves, the buying being regulated by the temperature.

Floor Coverings Orders Good.

Little fault is to be found with the business that is coming into leading houses in the floor coverings trade from out of town. The jobbers were said yesterday to be buying well, filling in stocks not completed when in this city recently. The larger retailers, too, are placing business in a satisfactory way from all accounts. Buying in the Northern States, particularly the Middle West, was said yesterday to be especially heavy. Chicago was reported very active, with good orders coming also from Detroit, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other cities as far out as Omaha. With the exception of those from Texas, orders from the Southern States were said not to be as large, but active buying on the part of Southern merchants is looked for later. Buying is general, and stocks, particularly of medium-priced axminsters, are rapidly being absorbed.

Just how close competition in the ready-to-wear field is forcing manufacturers to figure their fabric and production costs was illustrated in a story told here yesterday. A certain manufacturer had had marked success with a line of flannel dresses he was offering. He had sold practically his entire output when an order came to him from a well known store here for an additional quantity of the dresses. The manufacturer had none of the garments in stock nor any of this particular type of piece goods. He went to the mill from which he had bought the goods at $2.57½ for Spring. He was told there was no more Spring goods available but that a similar cloth in a heavier weight was being offered for Fall at $2.75. This advance dismayed the manufacturer who said his costs had been very closely figured on the Spring price of the cloth. He made a strong plea for that price, but the selling agent stood pat. The manufacturer finally took the goods, but claimed that he would lose money on the dress order.

Warn of Difficulties Later On.

The backward buying which has characterized the Fall dress and coating demand is prompting several important selling agents to warn of a possible scarcity of wanted fabrics later on. They point out that the mills cannot produce goods over night to meet the demand. Their production time has already been seriously curtailed, the executives add, and bunching of orders, provided there is a sizeable demand at all from the retailers, is apt to create considerable difficulty for the ready-to-wear manufacturers. Just what effect such warnings from the mills will have on the cutters-up is problematical. In the main they are prone to discount them. The cutters take the stand that they would rather meet the difficulties as they arise than anticipate. The policy of operating closer to the time of retail needs is stronger than ever, according to representative manufacturers.

Color Standardizing Will Help.

The adoption, for the first time, of a standard Fall color card by makers of children's apparel is expected to go a long way toward facilitating, in the future, the matching up of shades in hats and coats. Heretofore much difficulty was entailed in this, and considerable trouble was caused by the failure of the manufacturers of the two classes of goods to get them out in the same hues. While only seven shades have been chosen, and they are to apply only to broadcloth, it is the intention of the manufacturers of the apparel in question, with the cooperation of the makers of the fabrics that go into them, to include in future card colors that will apply to all classes of cloths.

Big Orders for Hosiery.

Some idea of the big way in which full-fashioned silk hosiery is selling at the present time can be gained from the size of some of the orders that are now being placed for these goods by big wholesalers. Within the last week, for instance, two orders calling for 20,000 and 10,000 dozen, respectively, have been placed in this market. The first called for $230,000 worth of merchandise. The second called for the goods in the gray. Delivery on the latter order does not start until July, when 750 dozen pairs will be shipped. The remainder of the goods are to be shipped at the rate of 2,500 dozen monthly during August, September, October and November. Three thousand dozen more hose could have been sold by the mill that booked this order if that quantity of goods could have been shipped to the same buyer next month.

Not Much Done in Gray Goods.

Not a great deal was done in the local market for gray goods yesterday. In the printcloths there was some trading in 38½-inch 64-60s at 9¾ cents for spot shipment, and the same construction also brought 9¾ cents for June in a small way. For July and August deliveries first hands were asking 9¼ and 9 cents, respectively. For quick shipment 39-inch 68-72s buyers paid 10¼ cents. June lots of 72-80 pajama checks were sold at 10 cents. Other sales of specialties included 39-inch 68-76, four-yard twills at 11⅝ cents and 39-inch 64-square, 5.10-yard twills at 9¼ cents. Aside from that there was not a great deal done.

Little Change in Men's Wear.

Aside from the fact that it is conceded that prices on lightweights will be materially lower, there is very little actual change in the men's wear woolen and worsted trade. Selling agents continue to hold Fall prices firm, despite the pressure that has been brought to bear for lower levels. Reorders are scanty, reflecting the mediocre advance business that quite a few clothing manufacturers are credited with booking for the coming season. The tone of the market here, however, is better. This is mainly due to relief that the wool decline has stopped, for the time being, at any rate.

Will Hold "Unofficial" Fair.

Plans are practically completed for an "unofficial" toy fair that is to be held in the Bush Terminal Sales Building here during the last two weeks in July and the first two weeks in August. About forty exhibitors will show their lines on the fifth floor of the building. Quite an active buying period is expected, for, with the exception of wheel goods, there is a great deal of merchandise yet to be bought for the holiday season. The nature of wheel goods makes it necessary for them to be ordered well in advance, it was said yesterday, but retailers have a lot of ground to cover yet in buying other playthings. Right now things are very dull, and this situation is expected to continue until the middle of July.

BUILDERS ASSEMBLE MORE HOUSING SITES

A $4,000,000 OPERATION

Marcus Brown to Improve West End Av. Block Front With Two Houses.

The week's trading in real estate opened yesterday as it had closed last week, with builders assembling sites for more large housing operations.

On the upper west side Marcus Brown added to a site where he will erect a tall building involving an estimated outlay of $4,000,000. Yesterday he purchased the dwelling at 301 West Eighty-first Street, on a lot 22 by 66 feet, at the northwest corner of West End Avenue, from Hilda E. Heilmar, through Electus T. Backus as broker.

By this purchase Mr. Brown has completed ownership to the entire block front on the west side of West End Avenue, between Eighty-first and Eighty-second Streets, comprising a frontage of 204 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on each street. The site includes 305 and 307 West Eighty-first Street, 441 to 451 West End Avenue and 304 and 306 West Eighty-second Street, all of which were assembled by Mr. Backus.

Mr. Brown contemplates the immediate erection of two fifteen-story apartment houses, involving an outlay of approximately $4,000,000. Plans are being prepared by George F. Pelham, architect, and the Eighty-first Street building will consist of suites of seven, eight and nine rooms, while the Eighty-second Street structure will contain five and six room suites. The property is diagonally opposite All Angels' Church, at the southeast corner, while on the southwest corner are private houses, thereby insuring permanent southern exposure.

Frederick Brown Also a Buyer.

Frederick Brown has increased his plottage in the block between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, Eighty-seventh and Eighty-eighth Streets, to 17,163 square feet by the purchase of the two five-story apartment houses at 207 and 209 West Eighty-seventh Street. The houses abut the row of four apartments at 204 to 210 West Eighty-eighth Street, which Mr. Brown purchased late last week from the Ellien Realty Company. Early improvement of the combined property of six lots is indicated by the negotiations pending with one of the leading builders of the city, who plans the erection of a fifteen-story apartment hotel.

The combined site measures 108 feet on Eighty-eighth Street and 62.6 feet wide on Eighty-seventh Street with a depth from street to street of 201 feet. The Eighty-eighth Street frontage is 106 feet east of the southeast corner of Broadway and the Eighty-seventh Street section of the property is directly opposite the twelve-story Belnord apartment, which covers the block from Broadway to Amsterdam Avenue, Eighty-sixth to Eighty-seventh Street. The Eighty-seventh Street apartments were purchased from John and Helen Westerkamp through Electus T. Backus, who was cobroker in the sale of the Eighty-eighth Street property to Mr. Brown.

The Baker-Lewine Construction Company, Inc., purchased from Foot & Martin, Joseph Scheckler and Samuel Cohen 162 to 166 East Eightieth Street, aggregating a plot of 73 by 102.2 feet, which was assembled by A. H. Matthews & Co. and Joseph P. Day, Inc. The property was held at $175,000 and the purchase was for all cash over existing mortgages. The new owners intend to erect a nine-story high-class apartment house. These builders have recently completed the block front on the east side of Fort Washington Avenue, 176th to 177th Street.

Horace Stripe sold for Stanley Mollerson 325 East Thirty-fourth Street, 25 by 100, a four-story building, to James J. McGillen, builder, who will alter the property into modern apartments and store with offices for his own purpose. Mr. McGillen paid $18,000, all cash. This is the second sale of the property by the same broker within thirty days.

NINETY SEA GATE LOTS SOLD

The suburban market was featured yesterday by the sale of New Jersey properties in West End and Morristown. The high point in Long Island was the sale of ninety unrestricted lots at Sea Gate with a frontage of 600 feet on Gravesend Bay. Westchester County was also active with brokers reporting many sales of small homes and plots for improvement.

Irving Judis and Joseph Silverson sold the Hollywood Hotel at West End, N. J., to the Hollywood Estate Corporation, J. Ammeron, President. The hotel adjoins an 18-hole golf course, which is included in the purchase, and contains 300 guest rooms and 10 outer cottages. The purchasers are well known restaurateurs in New York City, who control and manage a great number of hotels, one of which is the Knickerbocker Grill, situated at Forty-second Street and Broadway. It is their intention to make extensive improvements on the property.

David S. Meyer, Inc. have sold for Edward Kiam his home, at Cedar and Greens Avenues, West End, to John Saracino. The house consists of sixteen rooms and four baths. Kelly his home on Woodgate and Lenox Avenues, West End, N. J., to Mrs. Margret Gorman. The house contains sixteen rooms and four baths, on a plot 350 by 125 feet. The property was held at $15,000. Mrs. Gorman, after renovating same will occupy it as her permanent home.

Eugene V. Welsh sold for Mrs. Jeanette Whitnack her country property located on the Morristown-Bernardsville Road to John K. Torrens. This property includes about 41 acres of land, farm house and farm buildings.

Gravesend Bay Plot Sold

Alrick H. Man sold to the Erie Realty Corporation 90 lots at Sea Gate, on Maple and Sea Gate Avenues. The property has a frontage of 600 feet on Gravesend Bay, and adjoins the Atlantic Yacht Club at the boat landing. It is the only unrestricted parcel at Sea Gate. It is probable that the property will be improved with one and two-family houses, and apartment houses of a high class character. The selling price was $200,000. Gramercy Park Realty Company were the brokers in the transaction.

Lewis H. May Co. sold for Sarah O'Connell, represented by S. Lichterman, property on the East side of Beach 116th Street, near the Atlantic Ocean, Rockaway Park, consisting of two-story stores and apartments, to the Jamaica Bay Development Corp. The property was held at $65,000.

Westchester Transactions.

Fish & Marvin sold for the Witherbee Real Estate and Improvement Company a large plot, comprising one and one-half acres, in the Mount Tom section of Pelham Manor to a client, who will erect a large Georgian Colonial house for his own occupancy. The propedty was held at $25,000. Fish & Marvin also sold an L-shaped-half plot in Lawrence Park West to Dr. Raymond Bacon, who will build a house for his own occupancy. The same brokers rented for Mrs. H. W. Morse her house in Lawrence Park, furnished, for the Summer to J. L. Ashley.

William H. McDonough has added to his present holdings at Chappaqua a tract of land, consisting of twenty acres of home sites, situated on the Briarcliff Road, formerly the property of Mrs. Emma F. Garnsey. Mr. McDonough contemplates developing this land with country homes. George Howe, Inc., was the broker in the transaction.

Zurke Stone, Inc., rented for Cornelius B. Fish for ten years to Henry I. Tanner Scarsdale Lodge, in Scarsdale. This property was recently known as Heath Cote Hall Inn and was originally the Blockwood School. Fish-Garmany were associate brokers.

The McCann Agency, Inc., sold for the Thenor Land Company, Inc., to Mrs. Norah Paul a plot of land adjoining her residence in Wykagyl Park, New Rochelle. The property was held at $12,000.

The Cass Realty Company sold 414 Hotchinson Boulevard, Mount Vernon, a one-family house, on plot 60 by 108 feet, for $20,000.

Also resold a plot 100 by 100 feet on the south side of Eighty-fifth Street, 200 feet west of Twelfth Avenue, for H. D. Hammond to a builder for improvement.

Fish & Marvin Brokers in Sale.

Due to an error, the sale of the Witherbee Real Estate & Improvement Company's property on the Boston Post Road and Wynnewood Road, fronting 800 feet on the Post Road, Pelham Manor, through the office of Fish & Marvin was incorrectly reported as being sold by Prince & Ripley. Fish & Marvin were the brokers in this transaction. They also sold for Howard Van Buskirk his house on the corner of Midland and Summit Avenues, Bronxville, to J. E. Matthews. Property was held at $30,000.

ROBERT E. SIMON

And who controls 22,000 square feet at the southwest corner of Broadway and 56th Street, opposite the Commonwealth Hotel Block, shares with Robert E. Dowling, Franklin Pettit, Benjamin Winter, and others, the reputation of being numbered among the largest owners of real estate between Times Square and Columbus Circle. These shrewd real estate operators and investors have watched the tide of population ever sweeping north along Broadway toward Columbus Circle. They know that the section between 53rd and 59th Street soon will be a 24-hour-a-day business district. They have known Broadway since the "Rialto" was south of Herald Square, and the amusement district of today was a "dark" spot north of 42nd Street.

BROADWAY

since has become the "Great White Way."

on the east side, from 55th to 56th St., and containing approximately 30,000 sq. ft., where stores have a 12 to 18 hours a day sales value, which helps to make for increased values. This property comprises the Sonoma and Rockingham Apartments and the Thorndyke Hotel, and is known as the Commonwealth Hotel Block.

Manhattan's Changing Streets and Avenues

LEXINGTON AVENUE should have been the "Broadway" of the East Side, with 42d St. the hub of a new business, hotel and theatre district.

The "hub," except for the theatres, has developed in accordance with earlier expectations and the construction of costly apartment houses between 34th and 42d St., 59th and 86th Sts., has been active in recent years.

But, south of 34th St., Lexington Ave. has the misfortune to be a "dead-end" street, at 21st St., where it is blocked by Gramercy Park. Irving Place, the continuation of Lexington Avenue, south of 20th St., also comes to a "dead-end" at 14th St.

The renaissance of Irving Place and lower Lexington Ave. will occur when Lexington Ave. is made into a through thoroughfare from the Brooklyn Bridge to the Harlem River, via the Bowery, lower 4th Ave., Irving Place and Gramercy Park. Then, and not until then, will Lexington Ave. be actually the "Broadway" of the East Side.

The creation of this new "through" thoroughfare would go a long way toward improving the East Side traffic problem, which daily is becoming more difficult of solution.

No other thoroughfare East of Fifth Ave. offers a better opportunity for shops because of its close proximity to the costly new apartment houses, hotels and business buildings already erected in Irving Place, Gramercy Park, Fourth, Madison and Park Aves., in Lexington Ave. itself, and East of Lexington Ave., on the side streets and along the East River front.

Lexington Ave. appeals to us as an opportunity that, to a certain extent, has been overlooked, especially in the district between 34th and 86th Sts. We shall be glad to discuss the situation with those who would like to know more about the future "Broadway" of the East Side.

Quicken Your Pulse With the Thrill of the Rapids

FOR more than three hundred years the River St. Lawrence, between Lake Ontario and the Island of Montreal, has been the highway of adventure. The stolid and unemotional redskin, bound for the annual fur-market at Montreal, shouted with exultation as his birch canoe leaped to the thunderous surges of the Lachine Rapids. The Jesuits of the Huron Missions, returning from some lonely outpost of God in the wilderness, sang Te Deum to the sonorous accompaniment of its tempestuous waters. Lord Amherst's British battalions advancing to the conquest of Quebec, all contended with the stupendous might of the rapids, and felt the thrill of triumph in their swift, tumultuous descent.

You too may feel it—in perfect comfort and safety, from the deck of a modern steamship of the Canada Steamship Lines. The route is through the enchanted playground of the Thousand Islands, descending the mighty rapids and onward to Montreal, Quebec and the stupendous Saguenay, with its Capes Trinity and Eternity higher than Gibraltar. It is indeed a voyage of adventure into the land of a romantic yesterday.

You can begin your journey at Niagara Falls, Toronto, Rochester, Alexandria Bay, Clayton, Montreal or Quebec, and return the same way; arranging your trip so as to stop off a day at the important points without having to worry about hotel accommodations.

MITCHEL MEMORIAL GETS HYLAN ASSENT

ACTION DELAYED SIX YEARS

After having delayed approval of a suitable memorial to the late Mayor John Purroy Mitchel more than six years, the Board of Estimate, meeting yesterday in Committee of the Whole, voted tentative approval of the project. A final endorsement was withheld pending completion of the plans of the Mitchel Memorial Committee, which, it is expected, will be submitted in about three months.

The memorial to the city's late Chief Executive, who went from the Mayor's chair into the army and was killed by a fall from an airplane at Gerstner Field, La., on July 6, 1918, while on his final flight before joining the Allies in France, is to be erected at the entrance to Central Park at Fifth Avenue and Ninetieth Street. The tentative approval came after some discussion, in which Mayor Hylan cautioned his associates that they must beware of placing any structure in the park which might be construed as an encroachment upon its facilities and its natural beauties.

Robert Adamson, who was Fire Commissioner under Mayor Mitchel and secretary to Mayor Gaynor and who is now Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Memorial Commission, led the argument for the project. It was he who suggested that the board grant its tentative approval, so that the Memorial Committee and the architects might work out suitable plans in detail.

The vote of approval was on motion of the Mayor, who made it plain he was not trying to obstruct the memorial, but wanted to know more about it before having the Board of Estimate commit itself. Tentative approval was first suggested by William T. Collins, President of the Board of Aldermen.

Thomas Hastings of the firm of Carrer & Hastings, architects, who, with Donn Barber, have charge of the architectural part of the memorial, told the board that complete plans would be ready in three months. It was explained that neither the committee nor the architects know just what shape the memorial will take, save that it will be a quiet, simple tribute.

After the board had voted Mr. Adamson and Mr. Hastings explained that about $115,000 had been subscribed by individuals during the last six years, and that this amount would be ample. The funds have been paid in a committee of more than a hundred admirers of Mayor Mitchel, headed by Frank L. Polk, former Corporation Counsel. Mortimer L. Schiff is Treasurer and Edward H. Hall Secretary of the committee.

It is proposed that the entrance to Central Park at Ninetieth Street and Fifth Avenue be widened to forty feet so that the memorial may not encroach upon the park.

When Mr. Adamson presented his plea Mayor Hylan asked him if he, perchance, was influenced in any way by "an Islip, L. I., lawyer," which was understood to refer to William B. Roulstone, President of the Park Conservation Association, "who is kicking against having playgrounds in Central Park."

Mr. Adamson replied "No," and said he was merely voicing the sentiment of the Memorial Committee.

BABY KEEPER TO PLEAD IN DEATH CASE TODAY

Mrs. Helen Auguste Geisen-Volk, owner of the infantorium at 235 East Eighty-sixth Street, was charged formally with manslaughter in the first degree in an indictment handed up by the Grand Jury yesterday to Judge McIntyre in General Sessions. The indictment charges the woman, who is held in the Jefferson Market women's prison under high bail on another indictment, with the killing of William Winters, a baby, by striking him on the head with a weapon, while the child was under her care in the infantorium on Feb. 3. She will be arraigned for pleading to this indictment in the Jefferson Market Court this morning.

An autopsy on the body of the Winters baby revealed that it had died of a fractured skull and not from heart disease, as had been stated in the report of its death to the Health Department. Mrs. Frances Hirsh, a nurse, told Assistant District Attorney William F. Ryan the information which led to the Grand Jury investigation.

District Attorney Banton received a telegram yesterday from Mrs. Josephine Kase of Hollywood, Cal., in which the woman stated that when within the last year she lived at 236 East Eighty-seventh Street, which is in the rear of the Geisen-Volk infantorium, she observed many "incidents" in the back yard of the baby farm. The prosecutor immediately sent a reply telegram in which he requested Mrs. Kase to forward immediately details of what she observed that appeared to her violations of the law.

Becomes Vermont Attorney General.

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 25 (AP).—J. Ward Carver of Barre was today qualified as Attorney General of Vermont, succeeding Frank C. Archibald, who has resigned to devote his entire time to private law practice.

The Spartan Children Today

Centuries ago the Spartan Mothers placed their children on the hillsides to face the wolves. Today we not only help the "Spartan Children" who can survive in crowded tenements, but those who never could live through such conditions.

These children are the care of Federation and its 91 organizations. We see that they are better fed and housed, taught to study and to play rightly. They are sent to the country when necessary. They are turned into real men and women—into good citizens.
